'HELLO, MIKE'

United Force Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Dashing down the aircraft ramp with a hearty "Hello, Mike," Prime Minister Wilson of Britain arrived in Ottawa today for talks with Prime Minister Pearson.

"God, it's cold here," Mr. Wilson said as he left the BOAC Comet jet after it landed from Washington.

The British leader said he looks forward to his discussions with Mr. Pearson which would be "short in time but intense in character."

WASHINGTON (UPI)—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson wound up two days of Washington talks today and prepared to try to sell European allies a series of broad proposals for more collective control of Western nuclear power.

Wilson told a news conference before flying to Canada that he regarded his talks with President Johnson as a "complete success." He said there was agreement on "guidelines" of how to proceed with allied discussions.

In the meeting with reporters, Wilson appeared to soften some of his opposition to the controversial U.S. proposal for a 25-ship NATO nuclear fleet.

The prime minister said he had been misinterpreted, in reports before leaving Britain for Washington, as being "irrevocably opposed" to international crews on such a fleet. And he described as exaggerated reports that Britain was concerned that West Germany would obtain a "finger on the nuclear trigger."

COMMONS SPEECH

Wilson declined to spell out exactly what the broad British proposals are for increased Allied nuclear co-ordination. He plans to do this before the House of Commons next week on his return to London.

In the talks here Wilson won approval from President Johnson to try to sell his ideas to other members of the alliance.

Johnson agreed, meanwhile, that the United States would not, for a limited time at least, press its own proposal for a nuclear-armed fleet.

The British proposals are reported to envisage a much larger allied force including land and air components and a scaled-down naval fleet.

Wilson said his discussions with Johnson "very much" represented the beginning of a renegotiation of the Nassau agreement between former prime minister Harold Macmillan and the late president John F. Kennedy.

Under the Nassau agreement, Britain undertook to contribute to NATO its Polaris submarines on the basis that it would have the right of withdrawal under certain circumstances.

MOVE FORWARD

Wilson said today "we are now moving forward in a progressive series of proposals."

His remarks were interpreted as indicating that he had advanced suggestions that Britain would offer its Polaris submarines to some kind of multilateral force within NATO on a no-recall basis.

ANNOUNCING LARGE CUTS in defence spending of Soviet Union is Premier Alexei Kosygin at opening of the winter session of Russian Parliament. Former premier Nikita Khrushchev did not attend.

Soviet Union Chops Military Spending

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Alexei Kosygin announced today a cut of 500,000,000 rubles ($555,000,000) in the Soviet Union's military budget for 1964 and called on other major powers to follow suit.

Kosygin told the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's parliament, the cut and an expected reduction of military spending in the United States "constitute a definite positive step toward reducing international tension."

He said the Soviet Union attaches great importance to the further reduction of the military budgets of the big nations.

Kosygin also promised the Russian people more consumer goods, bigger incomes and increased industrial and agricultural production.

The new Soviet premier said the military budget next year will total 12,800,000,000 rubles, or 12.9 per cent of all government expenditures, as against 14.5 per cent in 1964.

The military budget in 1964 totalled 13,300,000,000 rubles and was 600,000,000 rubles less than 1963. Western officials contend that much Soviet defence spending is disguised under non-military items in the budget, and some Western military analysts think total military spending this year is well over twice the budgeted figure.

The official value of the Soviet ruble is $1.11.

Kosygin spoke at the opening of the first Supreme Soviet session since the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev Oct. 14. Acting on a motion by Leonid Brezhnev, Khrushchev's successor as first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, the parliament approved Khrushchev's replacement as premier by Kosygin.

DID NOT APPEAR

Although still a member of the Supreme Soviet, Khrushchev did not appear for the session. Neither did his son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, former editor of the government newspaper Izvestia, who also is still a member of the parliament.

Kosygin reaffirmed Soviet devotion to Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence and said:

"We are in favor of the development of relations with the United States. There have been some developments in that field although they have not been great."

But he denounced the "aggression of the Americans and the Belgians in The Congo" and repeated Soviet pledges "to render the necessary assistance" to North Viet Nam and to Cuba "if the aggressors dare to raise their hands against them."

Canada Puts 'If' In End To Military

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has indicated to the United Nations it would like nothing better than to get rid of its armed forces—provided, of course, that other countries did.

"Even the total elimination of all existing Canadian defence forces and expenditures today would involve a shift of resources only one-seventh as great as was required in the demobilization period after the Second World War," the government says in a report filed with UN headquarters.

Sickness, Hunger In Cardboard Shack

By MARGE GILROY

A man lay in bed paralyzed. Nearby sat a woman leaning against a cold stove. She had only one leg and on her lap sat her three-year-old son munching a raw potato.

Earlier this year when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova walked inside this cardboard shack in Korea she was greeted with the words, "No more food."

The woman had lost her leg while unloading 100-pound sacks of rice and the family now depended on her daily beggings to survive.

On a good day she might bring home 12 to 16 cents. This could buy barley for a meal or fuel for a day. It is not enough to provide heat and food.

There are thousands of such families in Korea, said the director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

It is not just enough to buy milk and barley. There must also be enough money available to assist with reclamation and training programs so that the children of Korea may grow up, find work and in turn help other Koreans.

ONCE DAILY

GREAT FLAG DEBATE COST $131 MILLION

OTTAWA (UPI) — Deputy Creditiste Leader Gilles Gregoire claims the great flag debate had cost Canada $131,815,000.

Speaking Tuesday during the seventh day of renewed debate — and the 29th day since Prime Minister Pearson first raised the question — Gregoire said Members of Parliament, newsmen, Hansard reporters and others connected with the Commons had "lost" 43,958,000 hours on the debate.

He said 146 members had made a total of 229 speeches in which the word "plebiscite" was used 4,080 times—but that total rose to 4,082 when he used the word twice.

TENSION GROWS

Yule Deadline Near for Flag

OTTAWA (CP)—With 12 talking days left before Christmas, the Commons today enters the 30th day of the flag debate in an atmosphere of rising tension.

Exactly half of the 96 Progressive Conservative MPs now have entered the latest phase of the deadlocked debate and the party is believed to be running out of speakers.

When this happens, the Conservatives either will allow their amendment for a plebiscite to come to a vote or seek to introduce a sub-amendment.

If accepted by the chair, a sub-amendment would open the way for the 48 Conservatives who have spoken in the last seven days to make a second speech of up to 40 minutes.

Both the Conservatives and Liberals were expected to discuss their strategy at caucus meetings today. Reports circulated that some cabinet members favor the use of the notorious closure rule to cut off the debate arbitrarily and force an early vote.

Prime Minister Pearson and several of his colleagues have promised flatly that a distinctive Canadian flag will be approved by Christmas. Works Minister Deschatelets repeated the pledge Tuesday to a delegation of visiting Montreal French-speaking businessmen.

'ELECTION NEXT YEAR'

Forestry Minister Sauve told the same group that an election will be called next year. "Come back next year," he said. "We will then have a new distinctive flag and a new government—a majority government."

Leon Balcer, the Conservative's Quebec leader, said in a Montreal speech the debate should end by Friday. He again came out in favor of the maple leaf design recommended by the special flag committee.

In the Commons, a string of eight Conservatives repeated arguments for a flag plebiscite to coincide with the next federal election.

A ninth Conservative, Jack Horner (Acadia), completed a speech he started Monday night and moved the adjournment of the debate. He said the House should turn to the labor code and other government bills and revert to the daily question period.

Mr. Horner's motion was voted down 139 to 68. Twelve New Democrats, eight Creditistes and four Quebec Conservatives joined the Liberals in opposing the adjournment. Ralph Cowan (York-Humber), the lone Liberal Red Ensign supporter, and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) sided with 66 Conservatives in support of the motion.

Commons standings are Liberals 129, Conservatives 96, NDP 18, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine, for a total of 265.

Mr. Leboe said he favors a plebiscite because every citizen

Closure Urged By Balcer As Dief Fumes

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The split between Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and his Quebec chieftan, Leon Balcer, cracked wide open today as Balcer urged Prime Minister Pearson to impose closure to end the flag debate.

Balcer rose at the opening of the House on a question of privilege only about two hours after he had walked out of the Conservative caucus following an explosion with Diefenbaker.

To a somewhat stunned Commons he said:

"For weeks and months this House of Commons has witnessed an unprecedented debate . . . which has paralyzed the work of Parliament.

"If the principle of freedom of speech is to be respected it should also be the prime duty of the House to be able to decide."

"An extension of the debate can only be prejudicial to Parliament and the people of this country."

"I therefore feel it is my duty to invite the prime minister or one of his ministers to give notice they will procede with . . . the rule of closure."

He was loudly applauded by Liberal, New Democratic, Social Credit and Creditiste members. A scattering of Conservatives, mostly the Quebec members, joined in the applause.

Conservative house leader Gordon Churchill rose immediately to say that Balcer was not speaking with the authority of his party.

Illegal Strike Suit in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America, an international union, today was ordered to pay damages and interest estimated at $2,359,319 to Gaspe Copper Mines Limited for an "absolutely illegal" strike in 1957.

The union, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, was held responsible for "fomenting, organizing, sustaining, directing, financing and prolonging" the strike at Murdochville, Que.

Mr. Justice Antoine Lacourciere ordered the union to pay the company damages of $1,747,645 plus five-per-cent simple interest on the total from Dec. 31, 1957.

A court source said the interest could bring the total figure to $2,359,319.

Gaspe Copper had sued the Steelworkers' Pittsburgh headquarters for more than $5,000,000 as a result of the strike which ended in October, 1957.

A union spokesman in Montreal said no decision has been reached on whether an appeal will be made.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said evidence given during two years of testimony showed that representatives of the union encouraged violence against the company and miners who might have returned to their jobs.

"The miners were terrorized into striking, the judge said.

The Quebec government had been criticized for strike-breaking in the walkout.

But Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it is "easy to imagine" what would have happened if Quebec provincial police had not been sent in during the strike.

'Violence Replaced Law'

He said that during the strike, which involved 900 workers, violence took the place of law.

"Those principally responsible are not the workers of Murdochville, but those who directed them, that is the representatives of the United Steelworkers of America."

He said the representatives "did nothing to prevent other human beings from being the victims of acts which are less than human, but they also encouraged them."

The union officials also tried "hypocritically to arouse public scorn for the police forces who wished only to maintain order and to protect individuals and property."

The judge said the strike was illegal because it was in violation of the Quebec labor relations law.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it was "unimaginable" that the steelworkers would spend $800,000 during six months on a strike that its president had not authorized.

"The evidence has indicated the union was the determining cause of the declaration of the strike, and of an illegal strike, because neither it nor Local 4881 (the Murdochville local) has been recognized as representing the group of Murdochville employees."

No Excuse for Illegal Acts

The judge said union organizers directed the strike in an illegal way, and some "encouraged and counselled the recourse to brutal force" to intimidate others and prevent a return to work.

The "layoff" of plumber Theo Gagne, "which wasn't even final," and which precipitated the strike, was no excuse for the illegal acts that followed, he said.

The union had argued that Gagne was dismissed for organizing activity, while the company said he was simply laid off.

The judge said the "acts of terrorism were recompensed by the money of the defendant whose goal was to stop production completely. The responsibility of the union there has been joined by the representatives who have never disavowed it and always upheld it."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere reviewed the circumstances of the death of Herve Bernatchez, a striker, in an explosion during the strike.

The explosion occurred, the judge said, when a bomb went off prematurely while Bernatchez, Nestor Henley and Nor-

Pearson Studies Cabinet Shuffle

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is known to be taking a "hard look" at the new developments that have shaken his cabinet but any suggestions that they would lead to early reshuffle of cabinet portfolios was described by informed sources as "premature."

There is no doubt, however, that over the Christmas recess Mr. Pearson will take the opportunity—if there is a recess of any length—to shuffle his cabinet. Whether it would be a major re-assignment of cabinet posts or a minor reshuffle remains to be seen.

The Liberal and Conservative caucuses met this morning. At both, the dealings of the two members of the cabinet with the Sefkind brothers, whose huge Montreal bankruptcies are under investigation, were discussed.

State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay held separate press conferences on Tuesday in which they told of purchasing furniture from a furniture firm controlled by Max Sefkind. Both emphasized that these were ordinary commercial transactions and not "gifts." Both ministers said they were making payments on the furniture. Mr. Tremblay has paid off his account in full and Mr. Lamontagne is making monthly payments.

Both ministers expressed their astonishment over the press reports. They stressed they had done nothing wrong. However Opposition members said that when the question period was resumed in the House of Commons the opposition would press for detailed explanations.

The firm from which the ministers purchased the furniture is now bankrupt. The Bank of Montreal is collecting outstanding accounts.

BIG ANIMAL NOTHING . . . . . . TO TAKE LIGHTLY

Girls Bid for Less-Than-Friendly Hippo

NEW YORK (AP)—"What in the world are they going to do with it?" the city purchase commissioner said when he discovered that three Smith College girls had entered the high bid of $400 for a surplus 4,000-pound hippopotamus.

"A 10-year-old hippopotamus is nothing to toss around lightly," Commissioner Roger J. Browne said Tuesday after the bids were opened.

He said the girls must prove they can take care of Betsy, described as less than friendly. A good idea, he said, would be to donate the animal to a zoo.

The girls said at the Northampton, Mass., college they entered the bid "sort of out of pity" for the unwanted hippo.

Browne said he must have a formal letter and a deposit before the bid can be considered. The next high bid was $150.

A Smith College spokesman didn't look too kindly on the idea by Nancy Horner, 20, of Worcester, Mass.; Ann Longfellow, 19, of Wayzata, Minn., and Ellen Emerson, 19, of Concord, Mass.

CAN'T HANDLE HIPPO

"The college is not prepared to handle a hippopotamus on campus," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Betsy, the subject of the fuss, rested in Brooklyn's Prospect Park Zoo. The head keeper there, R. Ellis, said of Betsy: "She'd just as soon eat you as look at you."

The girls shuddered a bit when told of the hippo's demeanor. But Miss Longfellow said:

"We wanted a hippopotamus and if this is what a hippopotamus is like, we'll take what comes."

There's something else the Smith trio must know about: The hippo is not coming; they'll have to go get her.

"We don't deliver," the commissioner said.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

We have many laws on our books which are hardly observed, but surely one of the most abused must be the Tobacco Restraint Act of the federal statutes.

It states that it is illegal for any person (or machine) to sell cigarettes or tobacco to any person aged under 16. We've checked the 1963 statutes and there is no record of any amendment.

Yet it is a common sight to see boys and girls of more tender years puffing away in public. We are told the enforcement of the act is up to local police. The maximum fine for an offence is $25 plus $1 for every day the offence continues.

There might be enough revenue in this to build a youth recreation centre for the new Centennial Square complex which seems to be the only thing lacking in the project.

Several shopkeepers in the Douglas-Cormorant-Fisgard area — and one in particular — are hot under the collar with city hall personnel who park their meter-exempt cars all day where shoppers are looking for spaces.

The steaming one told us he counted eight of these cars Monday morning and referred to another one that stayed all day Friday in front of his shop.

"We get complaints from customers all day long, and no wonder — they can't get a place to park," the merchant said.

Exemption stickers on city vehicles or private cars used by senior staff entitle the user to park free only while engaged in city business away from the hall.

Only Severe Frost Hurts Early Bulbs

By HILDA BEASTALL

Any day now we can discover some of the spring flowering bulbs pushing precocious heads through the soil.

Hilda

This is no cause for alarm. Cooler weather will retard their growth, and at the same time harden the portion above soil so that apart from a really severe frost no harm will come to them.

Winter crocuses are visible, and the softly green leaves of the Star-flower, Triteleia uniflora. The blue Grape-hyacinth (muscari) and Bluebell (scilla) make bold groups of narrow dark green leaves.

Even the earliest varieties of daffodils are making themselves noticed.

All this activity is enough to hold our interest during these busy pre-Christmas weeks, but on the days when the urge to have contact with the soil becomes demanding, there is a ready-made job to be done among the growing bulbs, whether they are in borders or beds.

The mild weather has also started the weed seedlings into active growth. There they are by the hundred in every newly-planted piece of ground.

As a winter project, every opportunity should be taken to disturb those seedlings either with a cultivator or by hand.

Where bulbs are not yet showing, the weeding might best be done by hand to avoid damage to bulb tips, but where groups are well defined, a scratching over with a cultivator will dislodge the seedlings.

A hoe will rapidly become clogged with damp soil, making it dull and heavy to use. Keep a trowel handy to scrape the blade frequently. When finished wash the hoe blade, dry it and wipe with an oily rag.

It will then be ready to use again as a few moments can be spent on this particular winter project.

When spring growth becomes rampant about 10 weeks hence at least the weeds removed now will not be growing.

knows as much about the flag issue as MPs.

Douglas Fisher, NDP deputy leader, called for quick approval of the red maple leaf flag. Using up only eight of his 40 allotted minutes, he said the Conservatives are putting too much confidence on straw polls conducted by a television program ("Telepoll" on CTV).

Although such a poll had indicated that a majority of voters in several big cities favor a flag plebiscite, he did not have much faith in the accuracy of such public opinion soundings.

He said he is one of many veterans who disagree with the pro-ensign and pro-plebiscite views of the executive of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste, Lapointe) said the Conservatives are guilty of a flagrant abuse of freedom of speech. Eighteen of them had spoken three times and two had made four flag speeches, repeating the same arguments over and over like madmen.

Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbiniere) accused the Conservatives in an interjection of degrading Parliament with "systematic and disgusting obstruction."

Goerge Nowland, former Conservative finance minister, said if the maple leaf flag is approved it will not be flown universally in many parts of Canada. The Liberals' argument that a plebiscite would disrupt national unity was "tommyrot."

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Bow River) said the flag issue could be the foot in the door leading to destruction of the Crown, the federal government's powers, the position of the governor-general and many other institutions.

. . . SOVIET UNION

He made no pledge of assistance to the Congolese rebels, however.

He also called in general terms for co-operation among Communist countries but made no specific reference to China.

"In the sphere of foreign policy, our government sees its main task in ensuring peaceful conditions for the construction of socialism and communism, for averting a new world war," Kosygin said.

Relaxation of international tension could bring benefits to all the people of the world, Kosygin said.

DIDN'T IDENTIFY THEM

Some Western leaders were taking "responsible attitudes," and Russia "can only approve their statements." He did not identify the Western statesmen of whom he approved.

"We favor negotiations with the Western powers and are ready patiently to achieve the solution of disputed problems," he said.

Calling for a boost in Russian trade with the West, he said the Russian market could be expanded if the capitalist powers wanted to do business. Soviet exports of goods needed by the West also could be increased.

Kosygin said Soviet planners could take this possibility into account when drafting Russia's next long term economic plan.

The prime minister was loudly applauded when he said it was essential to guarantee the security of the Soviet Union and its Communist allies, and when he called for general and complete disarmament.

He reaffirmed Soviet-bloc opposition to Western plans for a nuclear multilateral force.

"In view of the existing situation, the Soviet government shares the opinion that it would be expedient to hold consultations of the Warsaw treaty member states, which are vitally interested in European security," he said.

Most of Kosygin's speech was devoted to promises of better living standards for the Soviet people. The main feature of economic development next year, he said, will be increase in the national income and a raising of the material and cultural level of the people.

He said production of consumer goods should rise 7.7 per cent and the real income of the people should go up 7.3 per cent. During 1964, he said, real income rose only 3.9 per cent.

Kosygin's reference to a cut in the American defence budget was believed by informed observers to refer to something that U.S. State Secretary Rusk told Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko at the United Nations last week.

Kosygin said the United States had notified the Soviet Union that it will reduce military spending in the 1965-66 fiscal year, which begins next July 1. The American budget for that period is scheduled to be put before Congress next month.

There has not been any public announcement of such a notification.

The U.S. military budget for 1964-65 stands at $49,800,000,000, but Nov. 18 plans were announced to close military establishments and obtain a reduction of $500,000,000.

Kosygin said the national income in 1965 will increase by more than 14,000,000,000 rubles. "We have never before had such a big increase in the national income in one year," he declared.

He said the general salary level had increased 2.4 per cent in the last six years but would rise 4.5 per cent next year. He added that a program introduced by Khrushchev last July — to raise salaries in some specific fields including public services would be completed by May 1. The previous target date was the end of the year.

Industrial production, which normally gets the major attention because of its importance in defence, is to increase 8.1 per cent, Kosygin said.

Continuing a program launched by Khrushchev, he said the highest rate of growth would be in the chemical industry. He promised an increase in gross output there of approximately 15 per cent.

mand Boudreau were trying to blow up a company waste pipe.

Boudreau and Henley were injured. The judge said Steelworkers representative Roger Bedard was aware of the attempt and was with the man who made the bomb when the explosion took place.

The judge said Bruno MacDonald, another Steelworkers representative, got notes to Henley and Boudreau in hospital to indicate what they should tell police.

"The testimony of Mr. Boudreau and Henley leave us in no doubt about this attempt by MacDonald to fool police."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said that in September, 1957, organizer Emile Boudreau arranged a demonstration that resulted in "a violent attack on the ship Mont Royal in the port of Montreal."

The Mont Royal was carrying copper from the Murdochville mines and "several thousand dollars damages was done to the cargo and the members of the crew were molested."

The judgment said these damages were the result of Boudreau's organization work.

"Two peaceful employees, Leon Journaux and Hermann Hilton, were violently beaten and injured May 1, 1957, when they went to pass a snow plough on the Murdochville road.

"The guilty, named Huart, Cyr, Labbe and Boudreau, were sent to jail for this. The union paid costs and had the benevolence to bring them while they were in jail, special nourishment that cost several hundred dollars.

"This is far from demonstrating that the union was opposed to all violence, as its agents tried to pretend."

The decision was made in a 90-page judgment after a two-year hearing involving 350 witnesses.

The company said the union was responsible for loss of profits and for damages the company claimed it suffered in the strike.

The union said Gaspe Copper had provoked the strike by its attitude during the union's organizing of the miners.

In Ottawa, labor department sources said there have been six cases in the last 15 years in which the courts have held unions liable for damages caused by an illegal strike. The amounts involved, however, did not even approach the figure set in the Gaspe Copper Mines judgment. Most had been only a few thousand dollars.

KENNEDY ROUND

Talks Launched On Tariff Cuts

GENEVA (UPI)—The free world's most powerful trading nations opened talks here today in the biggest attempt ever made to boost international commerce by cutting tariffs.

Bargaining in the so-called Kennedy Round of tariff cuts by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is expected to continue through next year.

The talks were inspired by the late president John F. Kennedy, who proposed across-the-board tariff cuts of 50 per cent on all products bought and sold in the free world.

Few officials expect the final average tariff cut to come near the 50 per cent figure but they predict some measure of success on the grounds that many nations will be unable to resist the chance of breaking into foreign markets through lower duties on their imports.

Bargaining began today on the basis of lists of goods which leading industrial states want to exclude from tariff cuts.

SEVERAL WEEKS

Each nation now has to explain why these items should be exempted, a process expected to take several weeks.

After that, bargaining will enter a stage in which countries will offer to withdraw certain exceptions if other nations do likewise.

This is called the "justification and confrontation stage" of the Kennedy Round.

Participants may only have a certain product exempted from tariff cuts on the grounds of overriding national interests.

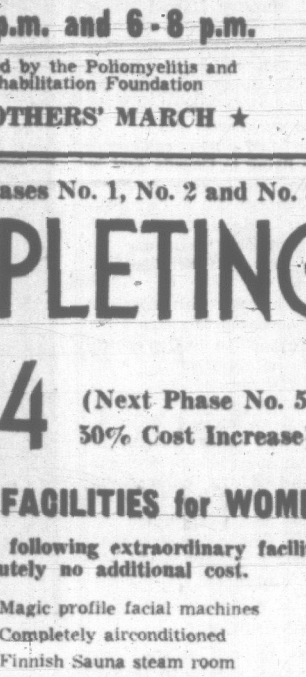

The Kennedy Round had been held up for months on technical grounds, mainly differences between the United States and Common Market on inclusion of farm produce.

28 Drowned In Collision

RAUMA, Finland (UPI) — Twenty-five teen-age girls, singing happily on their way to an army dance, and three soldiers were drowned Tuesday night when a military launch carrying them collided with a tugboat, police reported today.

The accident occurred just outside Rauma harbor. The launch overturned after the collision. Some of the girls were pitched into the sea. Others were trapped under a tarpaulin.

There were 13 known survivors. Only a dozen bodies had been found by late today.

The launch, with a three-man army crew and 38 teen-age girls aboard, was en route to a nearby coast artillery station where the recruits were to attend a dance.

TRAPPED

It was believed most of the dead were trapped under a tarpaulin that had been stretched across the aft end of the launch to protect passengers from the rain.

"There wasn't anything we could do," said Capt. Hjalmar Lehtonen of the tugboat Rauma II. "We suddenly discovered the motor launch was right in front of us. We tried to stop or swing, but it was impossible, we crashed right against the launch's starboard side."

He said at first it appeared as though the launch would right itself. But then it overturned.

"It was all over in a minute," he said.

The collision occurred about 200 yards offshore.

UNIFORM DAY OF VOTING ASKED IN U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS president Frank Stanton proposed Tuesday a uniform 24-hour voting day for United States national elections, with all polls across the country opening and closing simultaneously.

Stanton told the Institute of Life Insurance:

"It would put an end to theories and counter-theories . . . of how reports from one area of the country, with all its polls closed, can affect voting in another area where they are still open."

TESTED EVERY HOUR

Turgenev for Baseball Swapped on the Hot Line

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Moscow - Washington hot line has developed a sort of cultural exchange.

In testing the circuit, U.S. military operators sometimes send excerpts from encyclopedias across the 5,200 - mile teletype link to the Russian capital.

And, as Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said at the United Nations, the Russians transmit sections of Ivan Turgenev's first novel, Notes of a Hunter.

U.S. and Soviet operators swapped happy New Year wishes for 1964 and there was another exchange on the first anniversary of the hot line in September.

The hot line was set up during the Kennedy administration as a device for permitting instantaneous communications between the Russian and U.S. heads of state in an emergency.

President Johnson has retained the link and the defence department said there has been no change in procedure since the recent Russian government turnover which ousted Nikita Khrushchev as premier.

It is not known whether the hot line ever has been used by the Russian and U.S. heads of state.

TEST EVERY HOUR

The line is tested every hour. The Pentagon said the U.S. test messages consist basically of the standard "quick brown fox jumped over the lazy dog's back."

"This sometimes is varied with the transmission of various random unclassified writings depending upon the discretion of the operator," the Pentagon said.

Informants said excerpts from encyclopedias were used in the tests, but they did not disclose what subject matter was covered.

In his UN speech Monday, Gromyko said "the Americans from time to time transmit results of baseball matches."

Asked about this, the defence department said "we have no knowledge of any baseball scores having been transmitted."

According to the Pentagon, the quotes most frequently transmitted from the Kremlin are from 21 short sketches by 19th century novelist Turgenev.

Peron Men Sent Back To Madrid

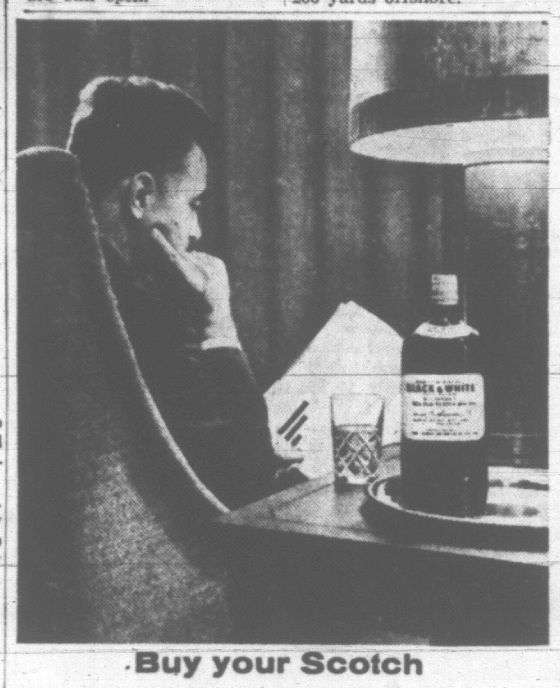

MADRID (AP)—Four close collaborators of former dictator Juan Peron returned to Madrid today in much the same fashion as Peron returned from Brazil last week.

The four flew from Madrid to New York, en route to Buenos Aires, but said Braniff Airlines informed them in New York they could not continue until the Argentine government was consulted.

"As we lacked travel visas, we could not remain in New York any longer and we were ordered to return to Madrid," said Alberto Iturbe, an officer of the justificialist (peronist) party.

The four men came to Madrid Oct. 30 to put pressure on Peron into returning to Argentina. They accompanied him on his abortive flight to South America and returned with him.

Peron is still living in a luxury hotel in Torremolinos, a resort in southern Spain, waiting for the Spanish government to decide whether it will give him asylum again.

Moderate and Realistic

AN APPROACH TO THE TERRible problems of the United States in the Far East can only be made on a basis of moderation and realism. The "counsels of impatience or despair" are equally unwarranted, for time and the natural evolution of events will work in favor of the United States and of what it stands for.

These are clearly the observations of a historian, of one who has studied deeply the philosophy of world affairs as well as their day-to-day development, and they come appropriately from Mr. George F. Kennan, former U.S. ambassador to Russia and to Yugoslavia and currently associated with the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton. Mr. Kennan is known as an expert on Soviet affairs and Communism in general, and his article in a recent issue of the New York Times Magazine sets a high standard of policy and public thinking on Red China.

* * *

The idea that anything that is Communistic must be abhorred and hated has more prevalence in the United States than in Canada. Canadians lean more to the British attitude, which is that cold facts should be recognized as such and policies adapted to meet them. Thus Mr. Kennan's thoughts may startle Americans more than the people of this country, for he dismisses the up-and-at-'em approach to the problems of Asia in favor of a calm assessment of what it may be possible to do with any success.

He advises, for instance, a limitation of American objectives in the continuing "war" with Red China. The United States is not obligated to right all the wrongs perpetrated by Peking, he points out: "We are not the avenging angel for all humanity." And if the United States-Red China conflict went to the point of outright warfare, the situation would prove almost impossible for the Western country.

* * *

Red China is too vast to occupy; invasion would alienate its huge population as well as world opinion; an attack would probably unite world Communism which now is seriously divided; a devastating world war would probably be unleashed, and the objectives of the present struggle would be lost in the expanded conflict.

These are the effects of impatience which Mr. Kennan forsees. But despair is not the alternative. He sees time as working in the interests of democratic efforts; he sees no permanence in the "extraordinary belief" of the men of the Peking regime, "that the sort of gray, joyless hell they have drawn over the Chinese people has something to do with human progress."

* * *

On three major questions, Mr. Kennan is more specific. He argues that diplomatic recognition of a country such as Red China does not constitute a "patent of legitimacy or good-conduct award." It is merely a convenience in establishing a channel of communication and facilitating a source of information. And while believing that the United States would probably derive no great satisfaction from the exchange of diplomats with Peking—since other nations in that position have received few benefits—he feels that to withhold recognition indefinitely is to deny the obvious facts of Red China's size and importance in the world.

Somewhat the same factors govern the question of Red China's membership in the United Nations. The United States should not fight a losing battle on this issue, says Mr. Kennan, but leave it to each nation to make its own decision. At the same time he cannot agree that Peking yet qualifies for U.N. membership, since it gives no evidence of the required spirit of tolerance and goodwill, and of concern for the peace and order of the world community. Red China, on the contrary, openly urges military force and violence as the proper means of furthering world Communism.

* * *

On the question of Viet Nam he counsels further thought by those who, on the one hand, urge that the struggle be abandoned, or on the other, that the effort be expanded into a vast new problem of unpredictable limits. The United States must protect its Pacific interests; it cannot relinquish to Red China what it won at such cost from Japan. But equally it cannot solve all the problems of that part of the world, nor need it try to do so.

This is the general thesis of one of the foremost students of world communism. Canadians will find his opinions closely in agreement with those generally held in this country. Their acceptance by his own countrymen will facilitate our own decisions as inevitably we approach the questions of recognition of Red China and Peking's seat in the General Assembly.

Good Citizenship Recognized

THE CELEBRATION WHICH last night marked the conferring of awards on group donors to this year's United Appeal was aptly termed a "Victory Dinner". For one of the few times in its history the Community Chest campaign reached its objective—and it was an objective larger than had ever before been set. Among those who contributed to the sum of more than $410,000 were many business firms, banks, organizations, armed forces and other groups which won recognition for the degree of their support. The annual plaques, citations and achievement trophies granted to these groups—many of them for as much as the sixth year—represent the community's appreciation for a warming demonstration of good citizenship.

Back of these group achievements, of course, were the individual contributions of the many employees and members involved. It was their personal help, along with that of thousands of householders and unorganized contributors, encouraged by an army of unpaid volunteers, that made the campaign a success.

It is fitting that such support should be publicly recognized — without cost, be it noted, to the United Appeal. A community which did not contribute generously to the needy and worthy would be a poor place in which to live, in which to do business, in which to bring up a family. It is good that those who are needy should receive; it is equally important that those who are not needy should give.

It is frequently urged that "the government" should make itself responsible for all such services. There is much that the government, under accepted modern principles of sociology, should do in these fields. But there can be no doubt that a community which never exercises its "charitable muscle", which never has a chance to exercise it, will not provide as good an environment for living as one that gives free play to its generous impulses.

The people of Greater Victoria and adjacent districts may well be proud that they have responded so well to the challenge, that they have been good neighbors to one another. It is not only the recipients of their generosity that will benefit.

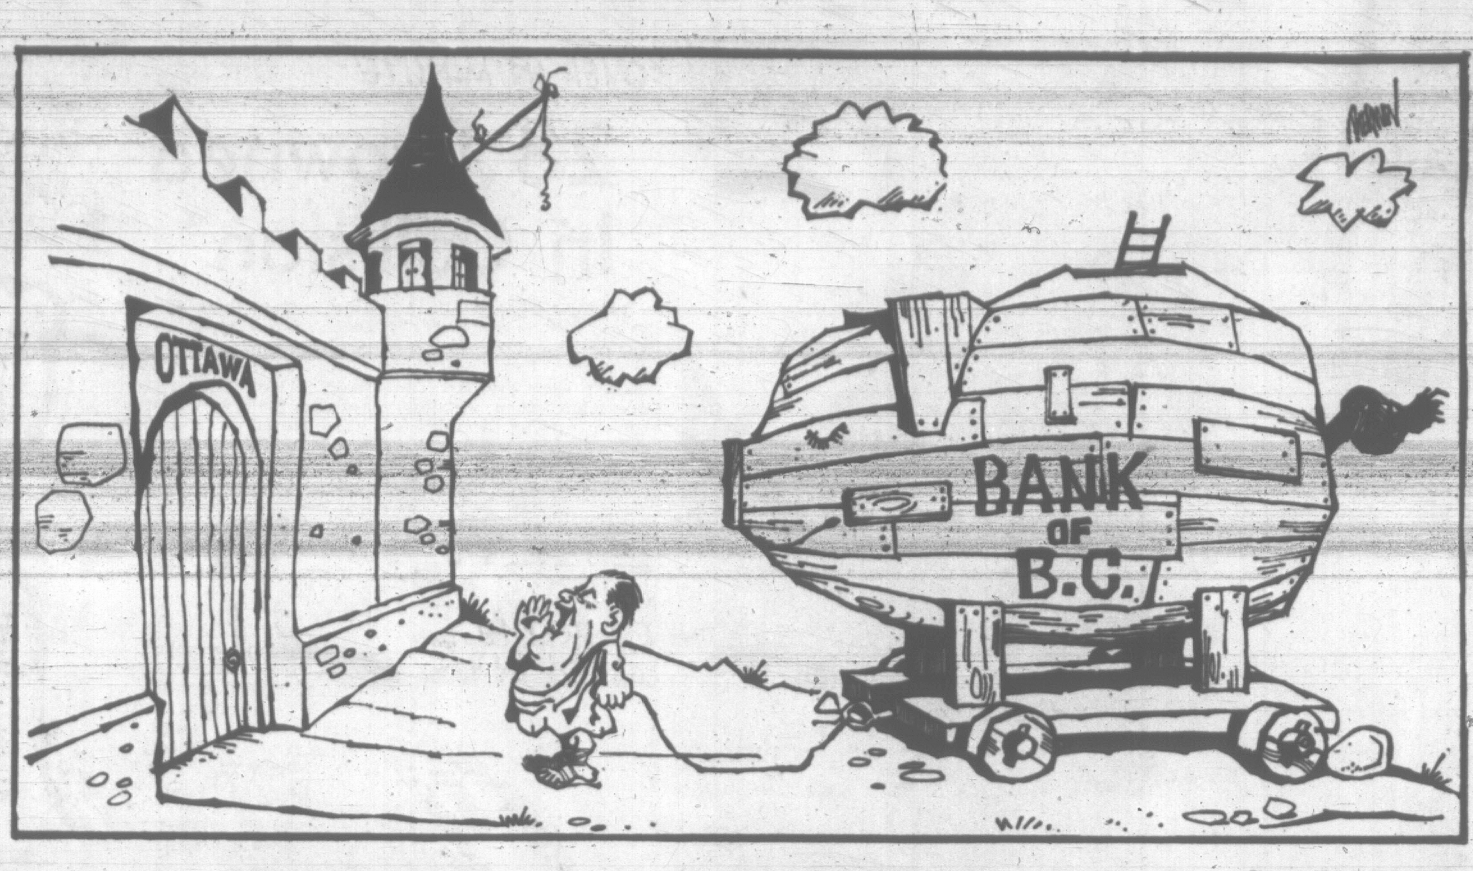

A Rest for Charlotte

WHETHER THE TURBULENT mayoral career of Miss Charlotte Whitton has been ended, or merely interrupted, may not be known definitely until Ottawa holds its next elections for chief magistrate.

But the lady with the chain and tricorne hat will not preside over city council meetings in the federal capital next term. The voters cried enough this week, relegating her to third place in the contest among five aspirants.

During her council career—Miss Whitton became mayor first in 1951, retired to run unsuccessfully for parliament in 1956 and returned as mayor in 1960 — she seemed obsessed with the desire to keep things from being dull in the municipal realm. At times the effort seemed overplayed.

Now 68, the former "precocious child" who gathered laurels in scholarship, publication, executive activity and finally in Ottawa civic leadership, is entitled to a well-earned rest. So, too, perhaps, is Ottawa.

—Bierman, Victoria Daily Times.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Indications of Tory Disunity in a Flagging Debate

THERE is a curiously dream-like quality about the resumed flag debate. It is becoming more and more difficult to believe that the Conservatives themselves any longer take it seriously. In theory, the Conservatives are not discussing the flag recommended by 11 of 15 members of the all-party committee. Instead, they are arguing the proposition that the committee did not reach a sufficient degree of unanimity on the proposed design and that, accordingly, the issue should be resolved through a plebiscite to be held at the next general election.

Western

The trouble is that the Conservative remedy is manifestly worse than the ill which they claim to be seeking to cure.

Obviously, the Conservative argument rests on certain assumptions although it is not always clear that all the Conservatives favoring the amendment share the assumptions.

Base of Argument

The very first, and very proper one, is that a new flag should serve the interest of national unity. The second is that the proposed flag, backed by 71 per cent of the committee members representing all five parties in the House, will not do that. The third is that a plebiscite would achieve what the House cannot, producing a different result which would make a greater contribution to national unity.

The general arguments against government by plebiscite have been stated more than once. There are, however, particular objections to the proposition that the government should proceed by plebiscite in this case.

What comes out of a plebiscite must obviously depend on what goes in. The country cannot produce a design of its own; all it can do is to choose among designs submitted by the politicians. It is remarkable that the Conservatives, who feel that a plebiscite would be so conducive to national unity, are not even agreed among themselves as to what should go on the ballot.

Monteith Design

According to Mr. Monteith (a committee member), who opened the debate, the Conservative representatives would have settled—presumably without a plebiscite—for a single maple leaf design incorporating the Union Jack and fleur-de-lis. But for other Conservatives this design is unacceptable because the maple is absent from the parts of the country which they represent. Some contend for a choice between three flags; some suggest a ballot with five or six, with voting by the old preferential system used in Alberta rural constituencies.

Even if the Conservatives were agreed on what they want, they are caught in a contradiction. In their view, the flag proposed by the committee would divide the country and so they demand a plebiscite which, they believe, will yield a happy consensus. But it is not their case that a parliamentary committee cannot read the mind of the country; Mr. Diefenbaker indicated on October 28 that if 85 per cent of the committee members favored the new flag a plebiscite would be unnecessary.

If the Conservatives are correct in believing that the English-speaking provinces, in a plebiscite, would prefer the Ensign or some flag containing the Union Jack and fleur-de-lis to the committee's recommendation, what would the plebiscite achieve? Quebec members are presumably as well qualified as others to ascertain the wishes of their constituents and since all of them, without respect to party, are for the proposed design, it is only reasonable to assume that French Canada would vote overwhelmingly for it. Dissent of the order of 29 per cent recorded by the committee is unacceptable to the Conservatives. But it is inconceivable from their own standpoint that a plebiscite would not show at least 40 per cent of voters dissenting from a design including the traditional symbols.

In that case, what should be done? The only logical answer, on Mr. Diefenbaker's premises, is nothing. But such a result would plainly indicate that the status quo is unacceptable to Quebec, which is exactly what French newspapers such as Le Devoir have recently been warning the Conservatives. Far from preserving national unity, the plebiscite would make matters very much worse.

No Quebec Friends

The Conservatives know very well that they have been winning no friends in Quebec. Hansard of December 2 records a politically odd remark by a front bencher, Mr. Michael Starr. During his flag speech, he became involved in a wrangle with the Creditistes and he warned them that they would suffer at the next election. But Mr. Starr was too much of a realist to suggest that the Conservatives would be the beneficiaries. He said: "They will have a lot less after the next election because Liberals will be elected in their seats in Quebec."

Some Conservatives evidently are troubled by the implications of their plebiscite amendment. Although advocating it in one breath, they urge delay in the next. Thus Mr. Gundlock of Lethbridge contradicted the very words of his party's amendment by saying: "We do not have to rush. We do not have to have the plebiscite now or even at the next election."

No Rush

Time settles things, Mr. Gundlock argued. Twenty years ago the resolution on a national anthem would have been controversial; today no one talks of it. "Let us," he concluded, "take a little more time, whether it be a year, 10 years or 15 years."

But this merely convicts the Conservatives of irresponsibility. They placed themselves on record at their national conference in favor of a distinctive national flag and four of their members voted in committee for a particular flag. Yet they now formally propose a plebiscite while one of their members, supporting the amendment, doubts that the country will be ready for it for years to come.

There can be no question of the sincerity of the attachment of many Conservative members to the Red Ensign. But the present amendment is plainly a mere political manoeuvre and the argument that a plebiscite would somehow promote national unity is so absurd that one can appreciate the difficulties which members are experiencing in confining their remarks to such an unrewarding subject.

FROM SAIGON

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

There Are Big Problems Also for the Vietcong

IN THE earliest hour of a Saigon morning a dispirited U.S. officer told me that the struggle against the Vietcong guerrillas was hopeless. That evening, in the ramshackle loft above a shophouse not half-a-mile away across town, a sunburned, wary-eyed Vietnamese half-whispered to me: "We can never win this war just by fighting in the provinces. But the people of Saigon are not yet conditioned for an uprising, or even for a wave of terrorism in the capital. As things are, the war may go on for years. We are ready to do everything possible to save Washington's face, if only the Americans will go home."

He was a Vietcong, a senior cadre of the National Liberation Front of South Viet Nam, who had slipped into Saigon from the notorious, Communist-held "War Zone D" to see me under arrangements that had taken weeks to make.

He represented the other side of the grim picture of bloody conflict in Viet Nam—the side whose headaches are sometimes forgotten amid the loud lamentations of those who see Indo-China already lost to the Communist camp.

Need Political Revolt

The Vietcong guerrillas claim they now control 70 per cent of South Viet Nam's paddy-fields, swamps and jungles, but the Saigon administration still holds the urban areas, and the military deadlock can be broken only by a political revolt against further fighting—in the towns, notably in Saigon itself.

But in Saigon, where wild anti-Government rioting has prompted the imposition of martial law, a stiff curfew and a cordon of heavily-armed troops to forestall further violence, the deadlock is repeated. The "conspiracy for peace" among those who want to negotiate a ceasefire with the NLF reaches up from the mass movements of the Buddhists and students into the High National Council and the office of the Head of State. However, the peacemongers among the politicians at the top dare not move too precipitately for fear of bringing far bigger, manipulated mobs out on the streets for a final, ferocious showdown with anti-Communist authority.

Question of Timing

"The problem is to know when to provoke a take-over by a more authoritarian military government in Saigon, and to risk savage reprisals from the troops and police of such U.S. puppets," another Vietcong cadre told me recently as we dined discreetly in a small riverside town in the Delta. "If the people are encouraged to mount an insurrection in the streets before they are psychologically ready, their movement will collapse when the soldiers start shooting in earnest. On the other hand, once the ground has been fully prepared, the brutality of the oppressor will only stimulate the revolutionary instincts of the masses. Timing is all. We can never act unless we are 90 per cent sure of success. A failure can set us back a year. "And," he added, grimly, "the Saigonese today are far from being politically developed enough to see Vietnamese corpses piling up in the boulevards."

The Vietcong claimed that although they were behind the Buddhist riots of 1963 against the regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem, they confined themselves to organizing them purely as a religious protest. "Now," one NFL official said, "many of these Buddhists believe they have won freedom for their religion. Our task is further complicated by the fact that the priests are split between those leaders who want to agitate to end the war and those who feel the objectives of their church have already been achieved."

For these reasons, the Vietcong did not attempt to exploit the bloody riots in Saigon last August, although they had troops almost at the gates of the capital. They are, moreover, afraid of provoking the United States into pouring troops into the South, or backing a coup d'etat, or attacking North Viet Nam. They have not, therefore, mounted any intensive campaign of terrorism against the thousands of U.S. servicemen who present such excellent targets for the grenade or the slab of plastic explosive in the glittering bars and along the shady sidewalks of the capital.

Approach to Army

The NFL are now working intensively to complete their circle of fire around the Saigon scorpion by trying to suborn the national army, so that whole formations will lay down their arms when the struggle in the streets of the capital reaches its climax. Otherwise it is doubtful whether time is on anybody's side. The Vietcong is not always the hero of the peasant. He dwindles in stature in inverse ratio to the size of the "taxes" he extracts from the villages to pay for his expanding shadow administration and his increasing armed forces, and there are guerrilla areas which the austerely governed villagers have bitterly described in the words: "No food when alive, no coffin when dead."

A recent North Vietnamese document notes that recruiting for the Vietcong is no longer satisfactory, and in one town in the Mekong Delta a Liberation Front agent has been caught offering a Vietcong "Queen's shilling" of as much as £5 to any youth who would join the insurgency. It should be added that the Saigon government's recruiting problems are far greater. Perhaps 250,000 Vietnamese have died since this struggle began, and it has been a long and weary war for the man caught in the middle.

Liberation Front propaganda has taken on a slightly fractious tone. Great emphasis is placed on political training and education, on the need for all activities to be controlled, so that in the best guerrilla units the men have no leisure for free-think.

The acute accent on high-pressure political indoctrination in the world of the Vietcong today has a special significance. The whole left-wing movement in Viet Nam suffers from the fundamental weakness that it has always been a front — Vietminh or Vietcong — in which the nationalists, who saw independence and freedom from foreign interference as ends in themselves, heavily outnumbered the Communists who alone wanted a Marxist State.

Friction In North

There has been friction between North Viet Nam and the Vietcong over more than one issue, and I understand it took 18 months for the Communist leaders in Hanoi to agree with the Liberation Front that instead of pressing for ultimate victory and the unification of Viet Nam, the Front should be able to negotiate its own peace with Saigon in order to cut short the war. In brief, an autonomous South Viet Nam — probably under a neutral, coalition government — would be the price to be paid for getting the Americans out quickly.

Finally, Hanoi concurred. First, a neutralist South would be a stepping-stone towards a unified Communist Viet Nam. Secondly, the "independent" and "pro-Soviet" factions in the North Vietnamese leadership did not want the war to be prolonged or intensified to a point where Hanoi would be too dependent upon China. Above all, there were pressing economic considerations.

The Communists will admit that with a population that has soared to 18 million, the North can just feed itself on a hand-to-mouth basis, and it needs only a bad typhoon at the wrong moment, or a season of drought, for food reserves to fall below the danger mark.

It is obvious that the field for negotiation with the Communists is sown with mines. But these Vietcong worries, nevertheless, show that there is a field, and one in which the South Vietnamese and the Americans have a share of the high ground. To them may be added Washington's ability to threaten North Viet Nam with graduated attacks if equitable ceasefire terms are not concluded. In short, this is a situation in which it might be better to ask questions first and bomb only afterwards.

Famous Last Words

CAMILLE DESMOULINS (1755-1793)

Arrested during the bloody days of the French Revolution, he wrote a last note to his wife: "Oh my beloved Lucille! I was born to write poetry, to defend the unfortunate and to make you happy . . . My bound hands embrace you and my head as it falls into the basket will rest its dying eyes upon you!"

BETWEEN OURSELVES

By Elizabeth Forbes

"Look at that!" gasped the tall woman who stood beside me at Cook-Pandora intersection.

In a split second, before the yellow traffic signal turned to red, a black car with shining chrome trim, screeched across the road.

It was raining. The streets were wet and slippy. Into the bargain, it was close to 5 o'clock.

Pedestrian traffic had started to move in the opposite direction. A young man, a little boy, and a middle-aged woman, were in the lead.

The big car whipped over the crosswalk. So close, it startled all three.

The woman jumped back, turned slightly, and fell. From where we stood it was hard to tell whether she had been touched by the car or not.

★ ★ ★

People gathered around to help. The car slithered to a stop and the driver came back to see what had happened.

The middle-aged woman would have none of it. She got up, shook off helping hands, and went on her way.

The light changed in our direction.

"He's lucky," stormed the tall one as we crossed the street, "another time it mightn't come off so well."

We stepped up on the sidewalk. "You can be sure there will be another time," she said. "That kind of driver never thinks. His one concern is to do the thing he wants to do, regardless of consequences."

Accidents were on the increase, she reminded me, and, because of that, car insurance was going to take another jump next year.

"Drivers like that are responsible," she insisted. "Something should be done about it."

When I was back in my own car and edging my way into the stream of 5 o'clock traffic, I began to wonder if anything could be done about it.

That night, with rain splashing on the windshields, the streets black and wet, and so many cars jockeying for position, you would have thought everyone would be obeying the rules of the road.

But there were those who had to indulge in swerving from one lane to another, whenever they saw an opening of any kind.

Others decided, at the last possible moment, to make right-hand turns from inner lanes and they forced their way over with little thought as to what might be happening behind them.

★ ★ ★

Some drivers, for reasons known only to themselves, insisted on parking at a time when everyone was moving bumper to bumper. Some straddled the dividing line between the two lanes, making it impossible for anyone to get by, and some refused to use their stop lights, preferring to believe that the driver directly behind was a seventh son of a seventh son and gifted with second sight.

Why do otherwise normal, everyday people act this way when they get behind the steering wheel of their cars?

Is it, as the tall woman at Cook-Pandora crossing said, a lack of consideration, or thought, for others?

Certainly accidents are on the increase. Certainly, from reports on many of these accidents, it would seem there has been selfish inconsideration for another's safety.

★ ★ ★

Certainly, unless there is a change in driving manners, there will be an increased number of accidents, and certainly, in that case, automobile insurance will go up again.

This spiral might be stopped if common courtesy could be instilled in the minds of automobile drivers. Common courtesy and adherence to sensible rules of the road are necessary.

In that minute saved by the man at Pandora-Cook intersection, when he screeched ahead of a red light, he could have killed a woman.

I wonder if he realizes that?

Far better if he had remembered the pedestrian lane, and the people on it, before he made his try. Far better if he had been courteous enough to have waited for the light to turn green.

NATURE ON THE ISLAND — By DR. CLIFF CARL

Clayfish Deserves Attention

Except to small boys in certain favored areas and to a few other persons with special interests, the crayfish of our lakes and streams is not well known. Perhaps this is because this creature is somewhat secretive in its habits or perhaps it is because it has no special gustatory or commercial value. Whatever the reason, this distant relative of the lobster has not received the attention it deserves.

Carl

Crayfish, crawfish, "crawdads," whichever you want to call them, are crustaceans much like the lobster in general structure but differing in many details. They differ greatly in habit, too, being entirely confined to fresh water. There are many species and they are spread pretty well throughout the world except in the Arctic and Antarctic.

Where they are common they are a staple diet of other creatures, including heron, raccoon, black bass and even man himself. Despite the steady drain on the population, their numbers remain fairly constant.

The pincers are the most conspicuous feature of these crustaceans; they are large enough and powerful enough to command respect. With them the owner captures prey, tears it to pieces and passes the morsels to sorting and grinding machinery associated with the mouth.

★ ★ ★

They are also formidable weapons of defence which may be called into use in arguments among themselves or against other animals which may attack them. Those of the males tend to be larger than those of the females, but in either sex they resemble oversize boxing gloves and hence impart a pugilistic look to the wearers.

Close scrutiny of the pincers, with due respect to their potentialities, will show another interesting feature. On the inner side of each "hand" there will be found, almost in every case, a number of small worm-like creatures firmly attached by one end. These are "boarders" or "free-loaders" whose function in relation to the host is not well understood.

The association seems to be one-sided with all the benefits in the form of transportation, living quarters, and food going to the worms, but it may be reciprocal if it can be demonstrated that the crayfish gains anything in exchange.

The presence of the free-riding worms also suggests another problem—a mechanical one. Since the crayfish sheds its shell at intervals to allow for growth, a featured shared by all "jointed" animals, how are the worms transferred from the old empty armor to the new? They move around, of course, hitching themselves along by a system of suckers, but it is a neat trick to change hosts at just the right time.

There is another and equally intriguing problem connected with the distribution of crayfishes. Members of the western form of these animals are found in river systems all along the coast from California to southern British Columbia but not in all waterways.

On the mainland in this province they are present in the Okanagan system of the interior and in the Lower Fraser Valley but apparently nowhere else. On Vancouver Island they are in a few streams and lakes near Victoria, in Shawnigan Lake, in the Koksilah River and lower Cowichan River (but not in the lake), and in a few streams and lakes near Kyuquot on the West Coast, and on Nootka Island, but apparently nowhere else.

How is it these animals are distributed in such an erratic pattern? Why are they not presnet in other lakes and streams, many of which appear to be equally suited to their needs?

Obviously more attention should be paid to these interesting creatures. Not only are they a potential source of food but also a subject worthy of study by any biologist.

Send questions in natural history to Dr. Cliff Carl in care of the Times.

'Nuclear Shield' Proposed

LONDON (AP)—British and United States authorities are considering asking the Soviet Union to join in a new treaty that would protect non-nuclear nations against any threatened nuclear attack, qualified diplomats said Tuesday night.

The diplomats said the projected East-West nuclear shield was discussed this week during the meeting of British and U.S. leaders in Washington.

The proposal was outlined to Prime Minister Wilson in London last week by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India, when they ranged over the strategic implications of China's new-found nuclear capacity.

Shastri advised Wilson that India intended to put the idea before the United Nations General Assembly shortly. Wilson was understood to have indicated he would take it up in his exchanges with President Johnson.

First reactions of British and U.S. officials was understood to be sympathetic.

BIRTH CONTROL BAN APPEAL TO BE HEARD

'Laws Fly in the Face of Common Sense'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Supreme Court agreed this week to rule on constitutionality of Connecticut laws banning the use of contraceptives and prohibiting the giving of medical advice about their use.

Two officials of the Planned Parenthood League of Connecticut appealed to the court after the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors upheld validity of the laws.

Connecticut's birth control laws, the officials said in the appeal, "fly in the face of both common sense and science."

"Of course the state may impose reasonable regulations on the practice of medicine," the appeal said, "but a law which permits a doctor to abort his patient to save her life but prohibits advice for the use of the most effective means of preventing pregnancy and death has a negligible claim to reasonableness."

Dr. C. Lee Buxton, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Yale Medical School, and Mrs. Richard W. Groswold, executive director of the Planned Parenthood League, appealed from their convictions for violating the state laws. Each was fined $100. Dr. Buxton was medical director of a birth control centre in New Haven when arrested.

ADVICE BY U.S. EXPERT

In Changing World, China Policy Must Be Flexible

By GEORGE F. KENNAN

A former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, George F. Kennan is a recognized authority on Communism and its role in international affairs.

Now at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, he is the author of a number of books, including the recently-published "On Dealing with the Communist World."

This is an excerpt from an article written for the New York Times Magazine in which he urges the U.S. to take a new look at its policy toward China.

The leaders of Communist China represent, in the psychological and political sense, the most formidable problem American diplomacy has ever faced. Even Stalin, at his worst, presented in some ways less of a problem than do these men . . .

The country Stalin headed, moreover, was a country which had developed in the Judaic-Christian tradition and was more conscious of its stake in relations with the West than is, I fear, the case with China. I do not wish, therefore, to minimize the ugliness of the problem presented by the state of mind of these men: their fanaticism, their addiction to violence as a method, their essential misanthropy, their extraordinary belief that the sort of gray joyless hell they have drawn over the Chinese people has something to do with human progress.

But we must not make the mistake of taking any of this as absolute and unchangeable. These, too, are only men. They once had mothers and childhood and affections. They are, today what circumstances have made of them. It is circumstances which will determine what they or their successors will be in 10 or 20 years' time. It is up to us to try to shape those circumstances in such a way that the fruitlessness of some of their undertakings will become apparent to them.

Patient Argument

We have possibilities for doing this. The continued frustration of their ambitions is one. Patient, realistic, sensible argument, addressed to the people on whose collaboration they ultimately depend and through whose reactions they try to work, is another. And still another is being careful to hold open to them and their people the possibility of negotiation and accommodation if their ambitions are moderated and their methods change. Neither these men in Peking nor the regime over which they preside are immune to the laws of change that govern all human society, if only because no single generation, anywhere, ever sees things exactly the same as the generation that went 10 years before it.

So much for the prospects of success. While we neither overrate or underrate them, we must apply the same moderation of view to the possible consequences of failure. There are certain places (outstanding among them the great industrial workshop of Japan) whose continued tenure in friendly hands is indeed quite essential to American security. Even elsewhere the consequences of failure could, of course, be very serious indeed—and we are right to do everything in our power to avoid them—but they would be more serious for the peoples concerned than they would be for us; and, here, the disasters might not be final.

A triumph of the Communists in certain of these outlying countries might be the beginning of a long night; but it would not necessarily be an endless night. History shows that people, and particularly, I think, people in Asia, are very inventive in finding ways to frustrate foreign rule and to develop bargaining power, in the end, vis-a-vis a foreign conqueror or an overshadowing neighbor. So, while we have every reason to take this encounter with the utmost seriousness and do all in our power to avoid reverses, we should be careful not to proclaim ourselves in advance defeated and undone by eventualities which, were they to mature, we would have to live with and would probably succeed in living with.

So much, then, for the direct effort to prevent the Chinese Communists from taking control of these outlying areas. What of the diplomatic effort that accompanies it — the effort to deny to the Chinese Communist leaders the fruits or normal association with the international community?

There are three sides to this aspect of our problem . . . One is the question of diplomatic recognition of the Chinese Communist Government, by ourselves and by others. Another is the question of the admission of that government to membership in the United Nations. The third is the question of the status of the island of Taiwan and of its present government, and the relationship of both of these to the Chinese mainland.

The first two of these matters —recognition and UN membership—are really separate problems, although what is done about the one admittedly influences what is done about the other.

False Premises

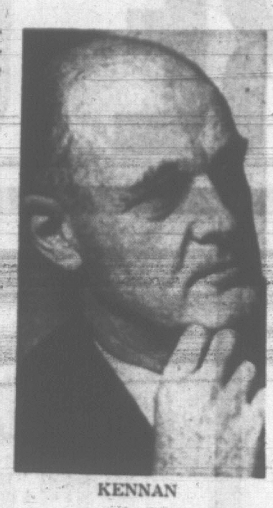

It is my view that the importance of both these questions has been somewhat exaggerated in our public debate. In the case of recognition, the whole argument has often been placed on false premises by the impression many people have that diplomatic recognition means the issuance to the other Government of some sort of patent of legitimacy or good-conduct award. This is a view that . . . has no proper foundation in international law, and I personally consider it pernicious. We have not followed it consistently even in the case of other Communist Governments.

Official relations with another government, as I see it, should be regarded as a convenience—particularly in that they serve as a relatively reliable and sophisticated channel of communication and source of information. There are, of course, times when it is no less important to be able to communicate with an adversary than with a friend. Where this is the case, and where the other party is prepared to be co-operative and to extend decent facilities for diplomatic representation, there is no reason in principle for not having such representation, even though the political relationship may be one of sharp antagonism.

One may well have doubts about the propriety of accrediting a full-fledged ambassador—a personal representative, that is, of the President of the United States—to a government whose attitude toward us is contemptuous and offensive. But the exchange of more junior representatives, on a de facto basis, does not have the same overtones; and I would know of no reason of principle why this should not be done even in the case of a politically hostile country. Whether to do it or not is simply a question of expediency.

When it comes to membership in the UN, the situation is, of course, different. Such membership confers certain rights and duties relating to the good order and conduct of the international community. It presupposes a desire on the part of the member government to see the affairs of the community ordered on a basis of peace and mutual collaboration, not of deadly struggle. It is hard to believe that the regime in Peking qualifies, at the present moment, under these standards; and I do not see how we could vote today, in good conscience, for its admission.

I am also inclined to doubt, in the light of what we read about the experiences of others, that we would have much satisfaction from an exchange of official representatives with that regime. But about both UN membership and diplomatic recognition there are two things it is important to remember.

KENNAN

No Pressure

First, while we may hold an adverse position, we will be unwise to try to put heavy pressure on other governments which may see things differently and may wish to act in a different manner. To do so will only irritate them; and in the end they will probably act as they please, anyway.

It is one thing for us to decline to share the responsibility for bringing Peking into the UN. It is another thing to conduct a campaign to keep it out—and to risk unnecessary prestige defeats for ourselves in the event the decisions eventually go against our wishes. We must remember that over the long run, after all, both diplomatic recognition and UN membership are the normal conditions of international life for a great nation such as China, and both must be expected to ensue, sooner or later. We will be ill-advised to place ourselves too demonstratively in the path of the inevitable.

Second, neither of these questions is of such a nature that disagreements over them in our public and private debates should be allowed to become the occasion for personal asperations or reflection . . .

One's views on these two questions are not, after all, a constitutional criterion of either patriotism or mental equilibrium. This tendency to create by word of mouth vague intellectual orthodoxies, to which others are expected to subscribe or to lose their reputations, is a dangerous feature of our national life; for it jeopardizes the principle of free discussion, which is one of the pillars on which the strength of our society is so largely founded.

Taiwan Problem

Our position on both of these problems is influenced, of course, by our feelings about, and obligations to, the Chinese Nationalist regime on Taiwan. Here, our government has an intensely difficult and delicate problem to which there is, at this moment, no neat and final solution. We will be doing our government no favor by pressing it, at this stage, to come forward with such a solution. We have our formal obligation to defend that island from any attempt by the Chinese Communists to extend their rule to it by force, and it goes without saying that we must honor that commitment. But the ultimate status of the island, in the sense of technical sovereignty, remains, as Secretary of State Dulles indicated in 1954, an open question; and the time has still not come to settle it.

Everyone concerned — the Chinese Nationalists, the population of the island, ourselves, and even the Chinese Communists — is going to have to show much patience and restraint, and be prepared to accept something less than the ideal, if a long-term status is to be found for this island that accords with the feelings of the inhabitants and meets the needs of peace and stability in the Western Pacific area generally; and any solution that did not satisfy both these criteria would be a poor one.

Genuine Conflict

It remains to mention the Chinese-Soviet conflict and its relation to the problems I have been discussing. This conflict is perfectly genuine. It is the most momentous event that has overtaken world Communism since the Chinese Revolution. The removal of Khrushchev may serve, for the present at least, to halt further deterioration in relations between the two great Communist powers; but the causes of the conflict are profound, and will not be overcome at any early date . . .

It would be foolish, of course, for us to fold our hands and look to the operation of the Chinese-Soviet conflict to solve all our problems in Asia . . .

On the other hand, it would be equally foolish of us to disregard the Chinese-Soviet conflict entirely and to fail to take advantage of any favorable effects it may have.

The basic fact that world Communism is becoming a pluralistic rather than a monolithic phenomenon represents, unquestionably, the most hopeful thing that has come over the world situation in the last 20 years. To ignore this circumstance, and above all to choose this particular moment, when change is in the air, to lose patience entirely and to embrace policies based on a total despair and involving risks of incalculable enormity would be the behavior of men who had lost all sense of reality.

This effort of containment has been going on now, in one way or another, for a decade and a half. Nowhere, except briefly during the Korean War, could the main burden of the effort be borne even primarily by our own forces and resources. Elsewhere, as we have already noted, the main question has been not what we ourselves could do but what we could assist and encourage others to do . . .

There has been more than one occasion when it has seemed that our own efforts were fruitless — that we were getting nowhere, that our interest was simply being exploited; and yet it had always to be recognized that the prospective consequences of withdrawal were worse than those of continued effort. And we have thus had no choice but to stagger along, relying at times on faith and luck and on such rewards as international life occasionally has for those who refuse to admit defeat.

Made Mistakes

Unquestionably, we have made mistakes. We have wasted a great deal of motion. We have spent stupendous sums of our substance. The effort has cost many American lives . . .

We are, God knows, not out of the woods. In South Korea we have formidable problems. In Southeast Asia, things have obviously come to a crucial pass. It may well happen that we suffer further reverses, or even defeats, here and there on the long periphery of this political front. No one can guarantee that this will not occur, for it is not just our own efforts that are involved.

But, by and large, we have not done too badly. Our adversary has not disappeared from the face of the globe—but neither has he gained his objectives. The Japanese archipelago, South Korea, Taiwan and most of Southeast Asia still remain outside his grasp . . .

In these circumstances, I think our government, as it struggles with this unpleasant and unaccustomed task, deserves our continued good wishes and support . . .

Don't Panic

It is right that the government should be required to explain the general rationale of its actions, but it should not be asked to spell out publicly the tactical considerations that govern at any particular moment . . .

It will not be helped by demands that it abandon the effort altogether, in what would necessarily be a panicky and ignominious withdrawal that could only present our adversaries with a gratuitous bonanza. On the other hand, it will also not be helped by demands that it lose all sense of measure and restraint and try to solve the limited problems of the moment by opening up new ones without limit.

The complex and unhappy situation we have before us in Asia is one out of which, I fear, there are no laurels to be picked, no triumphs to be won, for American statesmanship. The best we can hope is that time and change will work for us, and that it will gradually dawn on our opponents that, even from the standpoint of their own interests, there are better ways to pursue their purposes than by the methods of violence and subversion. And if the question be placed—Will this day ever come? — I can only say: I think it can come; and the prospects for its coming are still not so poor as to justify any of us in yielding to the counsels of impatience or despair.

'CRUSADING TENDENCY POTENTIALLY DESTRUCTIVE'

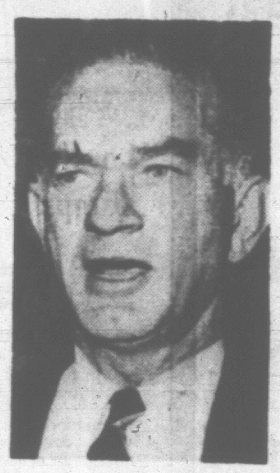

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator J. William Fulbright has a habit of making statements which rub against the U.S. grain, for a time, and he gets criticized for them.

They are not self - righteous statements for he is an examiner of the American conscience and self-consciousness, a gadfly on the U.S. view of the world.

Nor are his statements original in the sense of proposing something new or unheard of. Rather he acknowledges realities that are not being talked about or justifies politics that exist but on a small or hesitant scale.

At times he's a tart critic of American policy. Added together his statements are among the most thoughtful coming out of American public life, even if they are not all adopted.

FULBRIGHT
. . . 'gadfly'

Fulbright, an Arkansas Democrat and chairman on the Senate's foreign relations committee, made another talk Tuesday at Dallas, this time about building bridges to the Communist world.

He angered a number of people last March when he suggested, in effect, that President Johnson stop playing to the gallery in his handling of foreign affairs by yielding to the "malady of chronic and excessive caution."

He said then: "An effective foreign policy is one which concerns itself more with innovation abroad than with conciliation at home . . . it is sometimes necessary for leaders to do unpleasant and unpopular things."

'NEITHER WILL VANISH'

How long will the United States and communism have to accommodate themselves to the idea that neither is going to disappear and both will have to live side by side?

"As far into the future," Fulbright said Tuesday, "as we can see we shall be living in a world of diverse and often conflicting interests and ideologies."

And he added: "I do not think there is reason for despair in this state of things. Compromises often turn out to be very much more tolerable than they seem when they are being made and victories even more often turn out to be bitter disappointments . . . democracy itself is built on this view of human nature."

He suggested the U.S. try to build bridges to the various countries of communism — but not to Red China until some day its fanatics disappear and it ceases aggression and subversion—but he'd vary the kind of bridges, depending on the particular Communist country.

"The building of bridges," he said, "means nothing more than the opening of normal contacts and communications across a chasm of misunderstanding."

The U.S. already has done and is doing that, although not on a feverish scale. So here again Fulbright was only stating the obvious but in a common sense way.

He said it is the U.S. "crusading tendency, so noble in intent, so potentially destructive in its consequences, that we must guard against in our relations with the Communist world."

Who Needs Dictator? Soviets Ask Chinese

By GEORGE SYVERTSEN

MOSCOW (AP)—Nikita Khrushchev's successors have set up "additional guarantees" against a revival of one-man rule in the Soviet Union.

Without saying what these were, Pravda charged it was the Chinese who thought dictatorship essential to communism and claimed Russia had passed beyond such a primitive stage.

An editorial in the organ of the Communist leadership reaffirmed the new regime's support of Khrushchev's concept of the transition of Soviet rule from the hard Stalinist "dictatorship of the proletariat" to the more sophisticated "state of the whole people."

★ ★ ★

The new Kremlin leaders also defended the idea against unrelenting Communist Chinese criticism—a renewal of public polemics with Peking. Their statement also appeared to be a warning to Russian conservatives that Khrushchev's ouster was not the signal for restoring tighter party controls.

The editorial said the party leaders' meeting that toppled Khrushchev in October also "concerned itself with the creation of additional guarantees against the excessive concentration of power in the hands of individual persons and against subjectivism and arbitrariness in the decision of important questions of state life."

★ ★ ★

Although details were not given, the disclosure seemed to confirm reports of a secret party rule prohibting one man from taking over both top Communist posts as Khrushchev and Stalin had done.

These are now split between Leonid Brezhnev as party first secretary and Alexei Kosygin as premier.

More Consumer Goods for Soviet

MOSCOW (AP) — After the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev, doubts were raised over what direction the new Soviet regime would take.

The new leaders today gave the answer. They echoed Khrushchev's professed concern for more and better consumer goods.

The mass of figures, percentages and estimates presented to the Supreme Soviet parliament appeared to have provided a clearer picture of present policies.

The major outlines:

● Greater effort toward increasing the population's meagre rations of food, housing and consumer goods.

● A de-emphasis on big chemistry investments.

● A similar easing of investments in agriculture, probably in hope that the private plots which were recently restored to former levels will help fill food gaps.

● Economies possible in defence spending.

BREAKTHROUGH SCORED FOR TWIN TUNNELS

SILVER PLUME, Colo. (AP)—The first major step has been completed in construction of $40,000,000 twin highway tunnels through — not over—the Rock Mountains.

The pioneer bore of 8,400 feet was "holed through" by blasting crews this week. The project took 14 months.

Now workmen will use the bore, which still must be enlarged in certain areas to 11 by 14 feet and steel-reinforced, as an access to build two 32-foot tunnels to carry traffic through the continental divide regardless of blizzards outside.

The two tunnels in the interstate 70 system will be built near Loveland Pass at the 11,000-foot elevation—about 1,500 feet below the crest of the divide.

The first tunnel is to be completed by late 1967, the second by 1971.

CANCER HEAD Bank Accounts 'Cleaned Out' Before Arrest

CALGARY (CP)—A preliminary hearing was told Tuesday that Robert Nelville Talbot, 56, former executive director of the Alberta division of the Canadian Cancer Society, deposited a total of $302,378 in separate bank accounts in Calgary and Invermere, B.C., during a seven-year period.

Cecil T. Eustace, investigator for the auditing firm of Clarkson Gordon Company, said the money was deposited from Oct. 1, 1957, to [illegible]. 1, 1964, when Talbot was arrested and later charged with theft of $191,000 of society funds.

When the accounts were frozen following Talbot's arrest, deposits totalled about $2,000, Mr. Eustace told Magistrate Fred Thurgood.

HAWAII ACCOUNTS

There were also accounts in the name of Talbot's wife in Calgary and accounts in Hawaii and Ireland on which detailed information was not available, he said.

Mr. Eustace said of the $302,378, he had been able to identify $42,472 as loans to Talbot from insurance companies, liquidation of securities and a bequest. It was possible other sources of funds had not been uncovered.

During the hearing officials of Calgary banks in which Talbot held accounts said the balances of the accounts had been "practically cleaned out" shortly before Talbot's arrest.

'HANDS OFF' LANDINGS SMO-O-O-TH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A United Air Lines jet staged a "landing of the future" Tuesday—a perfect touchdown without the pilot touching the controls.

The demonstration of the new Lear Siegler/Sud all-weather landing system—held at nearby Dulles International Airport — was so impressive that about 40 newsmen aboard the UAL Caravelle burst into applause as the big jet touched down with hardly a squeal from the tires.

Two big closed-circuit television sets gave the reporters a view of the cockpit as the jet went through three automatic, hand-off landings and a smoothly-executed abandoned approach in which the pilot touched only the throttles.

FED INTO SYSTEM

On the two screens, the passengers could see the control yoke and throttles moving in accordance with pre-set speed and attitude "commands" fed into the system by the crew prior to the final approach.

They also saw the captain leaning calmly back in his seat, alert to take over if anything went wrong but not touching any controls.

The system is the joint product of the Lear Siegler Corp. of Santa Monica, Calif., and Sud Aviation of France which builds the Caravelle. It can be installed in any airliner, however, and is designed to achieve safe landings in "even the birds are walking" weather.

The device hooks onto the regular instrument landing system (ILS) at airports, coupling the automatic pilot and throttles to the ILS glide slope and direction signals. An important component is an extremely accurate radio altimeter which provides altitude down to as low as five feet.

Both the United system demonstrated today, and a device now being tested by TWA called "auto-scan," are designed to achieve category II in the next two years but with the capability of expanding to all-weather landings in the near future.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1964—PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

By the shape of certain straws now blowing in the aimless gusts from Ottawa, I think it would be well for Prime Minister Pearson to set his battered Liberal house in order before the breeze becomes a spring gale.

This, I'm convinced it could do all too easily.

In spite of Social Credit leader Robert Thompson's denial that he has been chaffering with the Conservatives, the 'new party' rumors persist.

We have been assured that the mooted Tory-Socred merger could not possibly take place.

But why couldn't it? And what's to interfere?

Answers tend to be vague, and tinctured with more of emotion than logic: a brash 'Who needs the Conservatives?' from the one camp, and from the other, an optimism based more on hope than on chilly fact.

★ ★ ★

At this point, it might be useful to consider the prospects of each party.

Social Credit, though overwhelmingly powerful in British Columbia and Alberta, would be a federal nonentity were it not for its astute chief.

Anyone who keeps an eye on the news must by now be aware that Thompson has become a force in Canadian politics, and his name one to be reckoned with. A leader, however, needs troops to lead, and for Dr. Thompson (to give him his academic due) but one manning pool is open.

This—and I hope the shades of my Tory ancestors won't rise to haunt me for the words—lies in a Conservative Party whose head frittered away his golden chance in power, and in Opposition is hastening his clan toward virtual destruction.

I do not think Canadians will give Mr. Diefenbaker another chance to be their prime minister. In fact, should he force a spring election, it would surprise me not at all to see tradition breached and an erstwhile splinter party installed as official Opposition.

Federal Conservatism has been fighting a rearguard action since its brief and muddled period in power was ended by the last general election. Today, it has been forced back to its beachheads . . . and the only rescue ships in sight don't fly a Tory pennant.

Davey Fulton? That gallant but deluded champion may have committed political suicide when he failed to make good his bid for a British Columbia Legislature seat at Kamloops.

Duff Roblin, brilliant exponent of the new provincial dynamism which is further reducing a weakened central authority? A strong man: but would the Manitoba premier turn his back on his legislative assembly, a plump bird well in hand?

★ ★ ★

I doubt it. From where I sit, a merger would appear to offer Conservatism its only solid hope, and Dr. Thompson his best and most immediate chance to warm an Opposition leader's chair.

With this in mind, I suggest you keep a close watch through the smoke for evidence of fire in this new-party buzz from Ottawa. If fire there is, the winds of spring might whip it to a proper conflagration.

As for Mr. Pearson, we can but guess at this point in his career how history will regard him. His time of acute crisis is still ahead. With the flag issue apparently drearying toward a decision, it may be upon him before this week closes.

He has not precisely covered himself with glory in this present cockeyed session, but Canada remains one country still, which it mightn't have done under Mr. Diefenbaker.

This somewhat negative salute apart, I can too easily guess whose tail would be sticking out of whose mouth when Socred Thompson's interesting though briskly-denied Confederation Party became an accomplished fact!

Prowler Gets $30

A prowler stole $30 Tuesday evening from the home of Mrs. A. Taylor, 1003 McCaskill. The thief entered the house by breaking the glass in a ground-floor bathroom window.

THE ARROW points to another Victoria phenomenon, a cluster of green leaves on a tree that already has cast off all the rest of its foliage. It's a London Plane tree in the Empress Hotel grounds and the secret is the proximity of the street light, a mercury luminaire. City parks boss Herb Warren says the same principle is used on dull days in his greenhouses. While the light remains and as long as severe frosts don't occur, the leaves will keep on growing. Now if we could install some huge lamps in our oak tree maybe we could forget about leaf raking . . . but then we might have to cut the grass again. Eric Penty, 1250 Victoria Avenue, is the leaf watcher.

PLAYHOUSE HOLDS WEEK FOR UBCM CONVENTION

Arrangements for the first large convention likely to be held in McPherson Playhouse are going ahead 10 months in advance.

Union of B.C. Municipalities' 1965 annual meeting will be held in Victoria. The invitation to use McPherson Playhouse was made by Mayor R. B. Wilson at this year's convention.

Theatre manager Robert Ellison said today he is holding open the week of Sept. 20 pending final arrangements.

The UBCM is meeting Sept. 22, 23 and 24.

"We're going out after convention business," Mr. Ellison said. "The theatre is going to be less expensive with nicer surroundings.

"The idea is not to make it cheaper to get business away from other people, but to encourage more conventions."

Record Predicted In Lumber Export

Local shipping officials are still optimistic for a record year in lumber exports although shipments are down 5,000,000 board feet from 1963.

Since the beginning of the year, 224,953,671 board feet of lumber have been shipped from Ogden Point.

This leaves city lumber firms 17 million board feet short of the 1963 record of 242,103,079.

But it appears there is a good chance the record will be broken. In November lumber shipments totalled 19,700,975 board feet.

By comparison, lumber exports reached 22,082,208 in November, 1963.

AT LEAST CLOSE

"We have 25 deep-sea ships booked for dock space for the remainder of the month so we should at least get close to the record," said dock agent Don Jenkins.

"It's the U.K. that is keeping things going. Last year it was the United States which provided the bulk of the lumber orders," he added.

Wheat shipments continued to grow during November with a total of 445,000 bushels—an increase of 150,000 bushels over the previous month.

AHEAD OF 1963

"We are now slightly better than 2.5 million bushels ahead of last year," said Chris Usher, manager of Victoria Grain Elevator Ltd.

"Our biggest customers are Red China and Japan and we have also shipped to the Philippines."

"The Russian contract for this elevator ended in June."

General cargo exports totalled 817 tons to bring the year's total to 17,451 tons. Imports reached 529 tons in November raising the total unloaded here to 6,232 tons so far this year.

Six Workmen Survive Blast On Piledriver

$30,000 Damage In Harbor Blaze

An explosive waterfront fire was quelled in a two-way fight here Tuesday.

Firemen working from shore and tugboats in the harbor combined in the battle.

No one was seriously hurt, but a piledriver working at McKay - Cormack Ltd., a Kingston Street shipyard, was damaged to the extent of an estimated $30,000.

TANKS EXPLODE

Six men working on the piledriver fled for their lives in a small diving tender when the fire started and ignited gasoline tanks on the pile-driver barge.

The tanks exploded with a blast that shook the neighborhood and brought a crowd to a Montreal Street vantage point.

No one was able to pinpoint the cause of the fire but Nanaimo diver Ed Hodgson said later, "We were lucky to get away from it."

The men aboard at the time were four employees of Victoria Pile-Driving Company Ltd. and two divers of Nanaimo Divers Services.

Hodgson was just coming out of the water. His partner Tommy Lahde, was working on the bottom.

INSTALLING TRACK

They had been installing marine railway track for the shipyard.

"I was just coming out of the water for a cup of coffee," Mr. Hodgson said. "My partner was in the water taking readings on the slope of the track.

"He was in the hard hat diving suit and we had to get him out of there fast.

"We all jumped on to the diving tender, cut the lines loose and got away," he said.

BLEW UP

"The rig blew up almost as soon as the fire was spotted," he added.

Hodgson said he lost his glasses and his wallet containing $160 in the fire.

As the gas-fed flames roared and a cloud of black smoke boiled over the scene, two tugs and a pump scow operated by Island Tug and Barge rushed across the harbor.

While the fire department soaked the docks and the tugboats and the tug Island Trooper threw a 90-pound jet of water on the blaze, the pile driver was nudged away from the dock area.

ENGINEER BURNED

William Horne, 1164 Esquimalt, an engineer with the pile-driving firm, was burned slightly in the blaze, which was whipped by 30 miles an hour southwesterly winds.

Foreman Richard Rallison, 1210 Haultain; crewmen Frank Patrick, 750 Roderick, and John Wilson, 3161 Orillia, were unharmed.

Fire Chief John Abbott was investigating cause of the fire today in co-operation with the harbor master. Work on the marine railway is expected to continue in a few days.

Hit-Run Driver Jailed 19 Days On 2nd Offence

Willy Foreland, 1717 Howard, was sent to jail today for 19 days after he pleaded guilty to being both a hit-and-run driver and a careless driver.

Magistrate William Ostler was told that Foreland once before was convicted both of failing to remain at an accident and careless driving.

Evidence showed Foreland drove into the rear of a car stopped for a red light on Douglas at Finlayson about 9 p.m. Tuesday.

He kept on going, drove into Woodward's parking lot, abandoned his car and fled on foot. He was caught 15 minutes later a short distance away.

When arrested, Foreland's breath smelled of liquor but he told police he had taken the drink after the accident. He said he left the scene because he was "nervous."

Morphine Tablets Stolen From Doctor's Car

Ten tablets of morphine were stolen early Tuesday night from a doctor's car parked at the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The bag, belonging to Dr. R. B. Smith, 4598 Torquay, was stolen by a prowler who broke the vent window of the car.

The bag was recovered intact at Finlayson and Fifth with only the drugs missing.

Robbery Victim Lured Into Alleyway by Girl

Two Admit Stealing Sailor's Rum Bottle

An 18-year-old girl lured a sailor into a dark alley where he was beaten and robbed early Tuesday morning, it was revealed in city court today.

The girl, Hazel Rafter, of Nanoose Bay, this morning pleaded guilty to robbery with violence.

Edward Reynolds, 20, of no fixed address, also pleaded guilty to robbery with violence.

A third man charged, Roy Volden, no fixed address, pleaded not guilty and was remanded to Thursday when a date for his trial will be fixed.

Detective Lyle Somers said Lorne Martin, HMCS MacKenzie, was found lying unconscious in Waddington Alley, between Johnson and Yates, shortly before 1 a.m. Tuesday.

He said the sailor had obviously been assaulted. His wallet was lying open.

Det. Somers said he went to Don Mee's Restaurant in Chinatown where he arrested Miss Rafter and Reynolds. They admitted assaulting Martin and stealing a bottle of rum from him, he said.

Det. Somers said the girl had led their victim from Government Street to the alley where Reynolds hit him and rifled his wallet.

Crown prosecutor Peter Birkett said Reynolds has a police record for assault causing bodily harm, taking an auto without the owner's consent and forgery. Miss Rafter has one conviction for vagrancy.

The magistrate remanded Reynolds to Thursday morning for sentence and remanded the girl to Dec. 15 for a pre-sentence report.

E. C. WARNER
. . . gives $25,000

'U' Campaign Boosted By $69,000

Victorians have contributed another $69,000 to the Three Universities Capital Fund, bringing the advance gift total to $245,000.

Latest donation, $25,000, came from E. C. Warner, president of Growers Wine. The sum broke down to $15,000 from Growers; $5,000 from A-I Steel of Vancouver, an associated company, and $5,000 personal.

Newton D. Cameron, president of Victoria Plywood, gave $28,000 as a personal and company gift. Former ambassador to Japan, R. W. Mayhew, gave $10,000.

Local 917 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees has pledged $3,000. The local is composed of 50 workers at the university.

NO VOTERS

First Day Advance Poll Action Slow

Advance voting for Victoria civic election appeared a poor idea up to noon today—no one had taken advantage of the city's first advance polling station at City Hall.

Persons unable to vote Saturday, may, by terms of the Municipal Act, vote in the city clerk's office during regular hours today, Thursday and Friday.

They must sign a declaration stating they expect to be away from the city voting day.

A total 20,345 persons are eligible to vote this year, a drop of 91 voters from last year. The 1963 list was 116 fewer than the previous year.

A city hall prediction put the voting turnout Saturday at 31 per cent, compared with 22.43 at a June by-election and 23.9 a year ago.

In Greater Victoria 62,000 persons are eligible to vote in municipal elections this year. Election officials predict a 20,000 turnout at the polls.

RELUCTANT

Saturday has been criticized as a polling day since many persons seem reluctant to make a special trip to town when they would not normally be there for work or other business. Victoria until this year held elections Thursday.

Oak Bay is the only other area holding an advance poll, in the municipal hall during office hours Thursday and Friday.

Mill Faces Extra-Long Yule Closure

A declining market in the United States will force Smith Cedar Products Limited to close its plant here for longer than usual, it was announced today.

H. A. Smith, president, said the mill is closing two weeks earlier than usual and will be closed longer.

He blamed a "slow" market in the U.S. with no demand for shingles at the moment.

About 30 men have already been laid off and another 80 men will be laid off, possibly Friday.

"We hope to open again early in January," Mr. Smith said.

SEASONAL

"This (closure) is quite seasonal, we have this practically every year."

He said the men will take their two-week holidays and if the mill is still closed after that, they will go on unemployment insurance.

When the mill reopens, present workers will automatically be entitled to their jobs back.

A union spokesman said it is "quite common" for shingle mills to close at this time of the year.

The layoffs will be "quite tough," said William Bell, Victoria chairman of Local 2802, United Brotherhood of Carpenters (Shingle and Shake Division).

Shingle workers had particular skills not applicable to other work, he said.

Police have appealed for anyone who witnessed the accident to get in touch with them.

Miss Margaret Forsyth, 1145 Faithful, suffered a broken arm and body bruises in the mishap. She is reported in good condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Police have questioned one driver about the accident but are anxious to get in touch with eye-witnesses.

A phony $20 bill was turned up Tuesday by a cashier in a downtown store.

The bill is the first to appear in this area of a flood of counterfeit money that has been issuing for several months from Eastern Canada.

Several of the bills have been spotted recently in Vancouver and in various Prairie cities.

Police say the counterfeit money can be spotted because it feels different from authentic notes and is light on the back.

PUBLIC HEARING SET IN MARCH

Slight Tapering Off Seen In Oil Imports Into U.S.

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States interior department has forecast Canadian crude oil imports for the first half of 1965 totalling about 295,500 barrels a day.

This is slightly below the record pace of Canadian deliveries for the first six months of 1964. During that January-June period Canada sent crude oil to the U.S. at the rate of 299,100 barrels a day, exceeding interior department forecasts by about 25,000 barrels daily. Deliveries have tapered off since then.

Interior Secretary Udall, in releasing Tuesday the regular six-month forecast of all crude oil and liquid petroleum gas imports, also said a public hearing, will be launched in March into the U.S. import program.

Preliminary studies into the domestic industry have been proceeding for some time but the public hearing is a new development.

The department's forecasts, if adhered to, will cut oil imports from Canada below the actual level reached in the first half of 1964. But in the vital area east of the Rockies, where Canadian oil is competitive with U.S. oil, the estimate of some 154,500 barrels from Canada daily from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1965, is about 9,500 barrels higher than the delivery rate during the last half of 1964. It also is higher than the actual deliveries of about 153,800 barrels a day in the first half of this year.

West of the Rockies, where Canadian exports are limited only by how much the importing refineries can sell, Canadian oil imports are forecast at 141,000 barrels a day.

HAVE EXEMPTION

Canada and Mexico have an overland exemption from the U.S. oil import program. Canada's slice of the U.S. market is expected to rise about 10 per cent a year.

The fact that her actual slice had run ahead of forecasts prompted independent American producers, a minority group, to suggest to Udall recently that a certification system replace the loose system of import forecasts for Canada. Importing U.S. refineries would file certificates for Canadian oil and be made to stick to them. There has been no indication publicly by the interior department that it is worried about the growth of Canadian imports. In the past however, Udall has warned that Canadian expansion in the U.S. market must be temperate.

Under the Canadian national oil policy laid down in 1961 in an effort to boost output, Canadian producers, who are dominated by big international concerns, were to expand exports to the U.S. and domestic sales as far East as the Ottawa Valley.

The Canadian market was to assume a larger role as imported crude and products were "backed out" of Ontario. This has been proceeding.

Under Canadian oil policy, output has risen about 300,000 barrels daily from the 544,000 barrels daily produced in 1960. Exports to the U.S. played a major part.

Trade Minister Sharp told Canadian producers in February the government expects the industry to "foster exports to the U.S. in a reasonable and non-disruptive manner".

TRADING SUSPENDED IN ACE MINING SHARES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange suspended Ace Mining Co. Ltd. from trading shortly after noon Tuesday because of a rush of sell orders.

Jack Van Luven, executive vice-president of the exchange, said irregular trading made the suspension imperative.

"There were more sell orders than buy orders and traders couldn't match them," he said.

The stock was offered at $1.44 at the time and was quoted at 70 to 80 cents on the unlisted board two hours later.

Ace owns a gold-antimony property in the Bridge River area of the B.C. Cariboo.

In mid-May the stock was selling at 12 to 16 cents.

Canada, U.S. Lag In Productivity

WASHINGTON (CP)—Canada, the United States and Britain seem to be lagging behind Western Europe and Japan in growth of productivity rates, a North American automation conference was told Tuesday.

Besides that, labor shortages exist in those countries, said Patrick Boarman, representing the U.S. National Association of Manufacturers.

The three-day conference, under the auspices of the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development, continued today.

Dr. Ewan Clague, commissioner of U.S. labor statistics, suggested Europe has to meet a volume of demand for housing and manufacturing plants on an urgent basis and that troubles loom for European economies when they get closer to the Canadian and U.S. conditions.

PRICES REMAIN STABLE

He said Canada and the U.S. so far have managed to maintain fairly stable prices, but "I don't know if unemployment is the price of that."

Others suggested that many of the foreign workers needed in France, Germany and elsewhere are doing semi-skilled work comparable to the Mexican Braceros in the southwestern U.S.

Harry J. Waisglass, research director for the Canadian section of the United Steelworkers of America, said it is a matter of "great regret and serious consequence" that Canadian governments haven't done more about creating labor demand rather than attempting to deal mainly through educational and other methods with surplus labor.

Stormy Meeting Of Bank

TORONTO (CP)—Two shareholders in the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce turned the bank's annual meeting into a shouting match Tuesday before they were finished questioning the organization's operation and decline in profits last year.

Both Terrence Howes and a business associate, H. G. Janssen, had also been vocally critical at last week's Consumers' Gas Company meeting.

Mr. Janssen started the session by asking N. J. McKinnon, chairman of the meeting, to account for a decline in the growth of reported profit to 4.99 per cent between 1963 and 1964, from 6.23 per cent between 1962 and 1963.

DECLINES ANSWER

Mr. McKinnon declined to answer two further questions put by Mr. Janssen, who asked whether the bank buys houses for its managers, and whether it is the bank's practice to make up shortages in cashier's accounts by deductions from the cashiers' salaries. Mr. Janssen said he had heard the bank had purchased a house in the Bahamas for £62,000.

Mr. Howes and Mr. McKinnon engaged in a shouting match over Mr. Howes' right to present several motions. Mr. McKinnon repeatedly ordered Mr. Howes to sit down until the latter finally complied.

J. P. R. Wadsworth, president of the bank, said in his prepared address that further diversion of funds to public uses could either retard Canada's economic growth or increase its dependence on foreign capital.

He said that growth of productive capacity depends on the ability of the private sector of the economy to undertake new, large-scale capital projects.

However, he said the nation's economy appears to be in good balance and strength is continuing to flow from many sources. He said there are indications that capital investment will continue high in 1965.

Alcan Forms New U.S. Subsidiary

NEW YORK (UPI)—Aluminium Ltd. of Canada announced the formation today of a new United States subsidiary to run the five-state chain of fabricating companies it is acquiring from U.S. metal interests.

The new firm, Alcan Aluminum Corp., will have assets totalling $120 million when all the previously announced acquisitions take effect.

These assets include the aluminum fabrication operations of National Distillers and Chemical Corp's Bridgeport brass metals division, aluminum fabricating facilities of Cerro Corp. and a 100,000-ton aluminum hot mill at Oswego, N.Y.

Aluminium is buying out the interests of three partners in the Oswego plant, National Distillers, Cerro, and Scovill Manufacturing Co.

The Canadian company is the country's largest single supplier of foreign-made aluminum, almost entirely in primary form. Over the years Aluminium has made a selling point of not competing with its ingot customers by selling its own fabricated products in their markets.

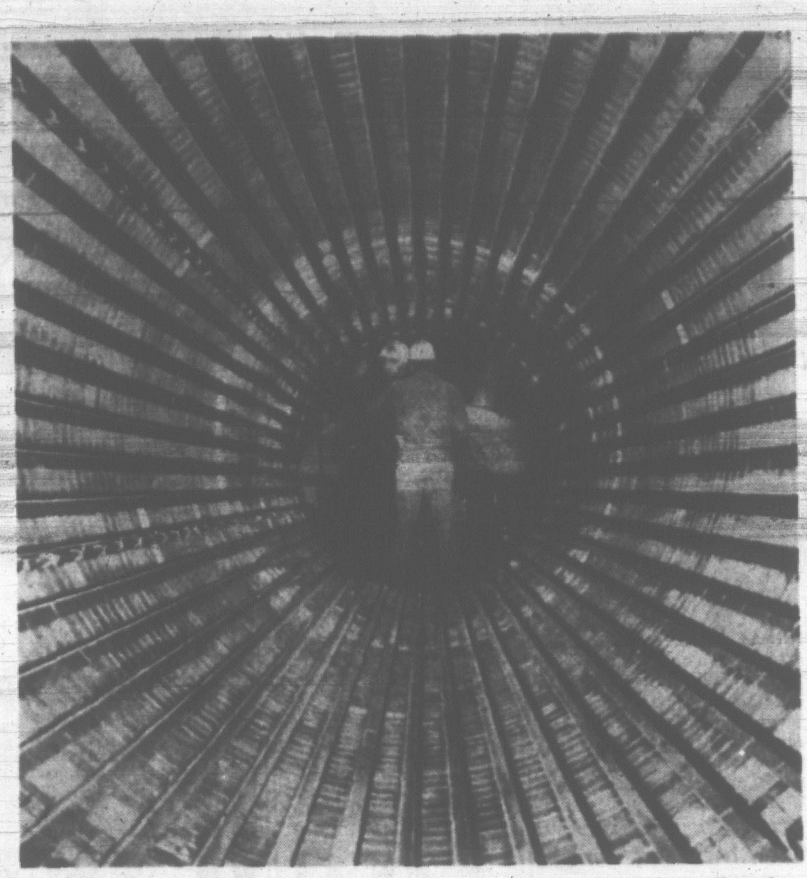

Eric A. Trigg, presently treasurer of Aluminium, will be president of the new Cleveland-based subsidiary.

LOAN REPAYMENTS

U.K. Caught in Squeeze

OTTAWA (CP)—The British may soon ask for deferment on their $1,250,000,000 post-war loan from Canada.

A $37,000,000 repayment is due this month. At the same time the British normally would be paying three times that amount on an American loan.

A request for deferment would be logical in view of the British balance of payments difficulties.

Published speculation in London last week was that such a request would be made by Prime Minister Wilson in his discussions this week with President Johnson and Prime Minister Pearson.

However, it is understood that the subject is more likely to be handled at the ministerial level. It is regarded as an unlikely topic for the leaders.

In any event, there is considerable doubt here whether any such request will ever get as far as the Canadian government. This arises from the nature of the loan agreements. In 1946 the Canadian loan and the $3,750,000,000 U.S. loan—both intended as export credits—were in effect wrapped into one package with complicated provisions for deferments of principle and interest.

CHANGE AGREEMENT

In 1957 the agreement was changed to allow Britain to seek deferments on seven occasions before the end of the loan in the year 2000. One deferment was made in 1957, during the Suez crisis. That year's instalment now will be paid in the year 2001.

Each time, the agreement imposes two conditions on Britain:

—She must claim to be in financial difficulty. That would not be hard to substantiate in this case.

—She also must ask both the U.S. and Canada for the same deferments; she can't ask one, and not the other.

And there's the rub.

Will the British feel that it would embarrass the United States to ask for deferment this year in view of the U.S. balance of payments problem, and the massive American aid in helping to prevent the run on sterling?

If such a request is not made to the U.S., naturally it can't be made to Canada. The upshot would be that Canada will be collecting millions from Britain at a time when she can least afford it, and when Canada is in a relatively good position to forego the payment.

B.C. Sugar Refining Profit Jumps

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Sugar Refining Company Limited this week reported a net profit of $4,374,874 compared with $2,780,018 the previous year.

The company report said that after paying a dividend of $2,000,000 to its parent B.C. Sugar Refinery Ltd., the operating company increased its retained earnings to $13,592,056 compared to $11,217,182 at the end of the previous year.

The net operating profit of the operating company was slightly down at $9,347,864 compared with $10,084,271.

A spokesman for CIL said production at the two plants will be about 1,000 tons daily. Ammonia is basic to fertilizer production.

CANADIAN STOCKS

Dramatic Shift In Capital Flow

OTTAWA (CP) — In two years and nine months foreign investors have re-sold to Canadians about $1,858,500,000 worth of Canadian common and preferred stocks.

This outstripped their purchases of outstanding Canadian equities by some $348,000,000 in the same period, to the end of September.

The figures were included in Tuesday's monthly statement by the bureau of statistics on international securities trading.

The figures illustrate the dramatic shift over this period, which actually started in the final quarter of 1961, in capital flows for portfolio investment in Canadian equities.

Added to the $348,000,000, to get a total "repatriation" picture, would be retirements of Canadian stocks held by foreigners minus the net proceeds of new stock issues sold to non-residents.

In the 30 months up to the first quarter of this year this total net repatriation was calculated as $492,000,000. Subsequent developments in the second and third quarters this year would put it over $500,000,000.

INFLOW CONSISTENT

In contrast, Canada had consistent capital inflows between 1951 and 1961 in this international trading in stocks. In one year alone in that period, 1956, there was a $250,000,000 inflow.

The shift has been attributed to various factors, including the altered U.S. tax status of the non-resident-owned investment funds, the U.S. interest equalization tax, the hydro takeovers in Quebec and British Columbia, and more generally the improved prospects in European stocks.

The bureau said the net repurchases of outstanding Canadian equities continued to the tune of $10,000,000 in the third quarter of this year.

However, this was a lower level than in most preceding quarters. For example the outflow was $42,000,000 in the final quarter of 1963 and $44,000,000 in the first quarter of this year, though it dropped to $8,000,000 in the second quarter.

Ireland Moves Peking Entry

Support Spreading at UN To Seat Communist Regime

By MARMAN CUMMING

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—A plan to bring Communist China into the United Nations was put forward by Ireland Tuesday—along with a warning the Peking government would have to live up to UN standards.

Ireland's external affairs minister, Frank Aiken, said China, as the world's fifth nuclear power, should be given a permanent seat on the 11-country Security Council along with the U.S., Russia, Britain and France.

But he said it would be intolerable if this were done by denying UN membership to Nationalist China, which now holds the permanent Chinese seat on the council.

Ireland voted last year against seating the Peking regime and Aiken's plan appeared to reflect an increasing feeling at the UN that little progress could be made on disarmament with one member of the nuclear club absent.

The seating of Peking is expected to be rejected at this assembly as it has been for the last 14 years, but there is a belief among many Western delegations that next year will see the Communist regime admitted provided the Nationalist government on Formosa is allowed to retain membership.

WANTS 'CLIQUE' OUT

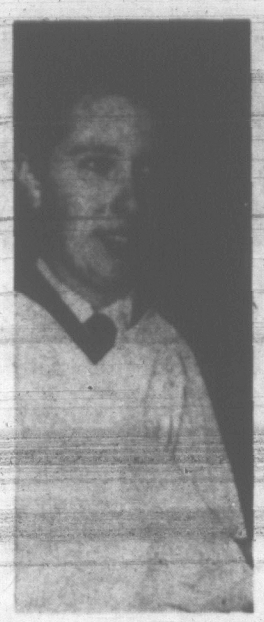

Peking has said it won't enter the UN until the Nationalist "clique" has been expelled.

Aiken proposed that representatives of the four other nuclear powers and Secretary-General U Thant be asked to negotiate with Peking and Taipei between now and the next session to see if agreement could be reached.

He sugested the basis might be that the Nationalists take an assembly seat while Peking assumes the position of a permanent council member, "accepting to be bound by the purposes and principles of the charter, by a non - dissemination agreement, and by an agreement that all other nuclear states would go to the assistance of a non-nuclear state attacked by a nuclear power."

Canada is expected to vote against seating the Communist regime again this year, despite a stronger British campaign for admission. The Canadian position apparently is based mainly on concern for the future of Formosa and a desire not to leave its U.S. ally out on a limb.

But an eventual change in the Canadian attitude appeared to be foreshadowed in External Affairs Minister Martin's statement to the assembly Tuesday that university of membership "must remain our ultimate goal."

Crew Members Fined

QUEBEC (CP) — Five members of the crew of the Polish liner Batory were fined a total of $600 Tuesday after they pleaded guilty to bringing goods into Canada without paying duty.

Phone Talk May Take High Bounce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Europe and North America may start using a satellite regularly for trans-Atlantic telephone communications as early as next May.

This was disclosed in a statement of project plans filed by the Communications Satellite Corporation Comsat with the federal communications commission Tuesday.

The statement said the 85-pound first Comsat satellite, known as Early Bird, is to be launched in March into a high-altitude orbit, 22,300 miles above the Equator.

Hovering roughly over the area of the Cape Verde Islands in the Atlantic, it will be capable of transmitting television, computer data, telegrams and other types of record traffic as well as two-way telephone conversations.

Palace Denies Story Of Prince Book Sale

LONDON (Reuters)—Buckingham Palace has denied a report in Time that Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip keep their son Prince Charles short of pocket money.

The denial, sent to the editor of the magazine, referred to a report about the disappearance of an essay book belonging to the heir to the throne, who attends the Gordonstoun school in Scotland.

The palace press secretary, Cmdr. Richard Colville, in a letter, published in the latest edition of Time to reach London, said:

"There is no truth whatever in the story that Prince Charles has sold his autograph at any time. There is also no truth whatever in the story that he sold his composition book to a classmate. In the first place he is intelligent and old enough to realize how embarrassing this would turn out to be, and, second, he is only too conscious of the interest of the press in anything to do with himself and his family.

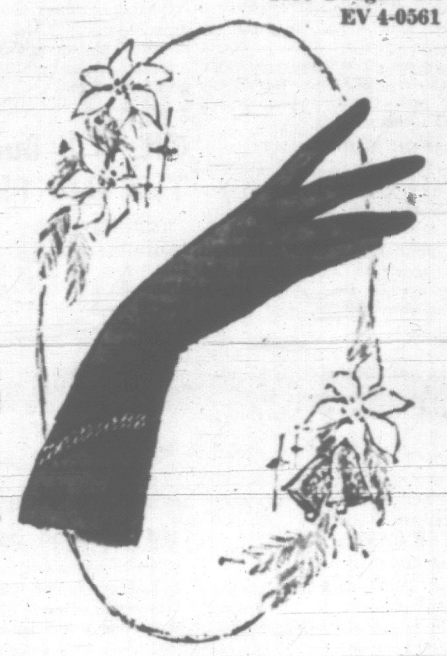

SUGGESTION

"The suggestion that his parents keep him so short of money that he has to find other means to raise it is also a complete invention. Finally, the police would not have attempted to regain the composition book unless they were quite satisfied that it had been obtained illegally."

Prince Charles' essay book was reported missing last September. Essays purporting to be from it were later published in a German magazine.

It takes a long time to break an old habit.

60 seconds.

You know what you like in whiskies. You've probably been living with the one kind for five, ten, maybe twenty years.

All we ask is one minute.

We think that's all it will take to change your mind. That, and merely one taste of a whisky called Time.

You'll find you have never known a rye like this. The taste is light, warm, smooth. A gentle whisky—but not at all kind to old habits.

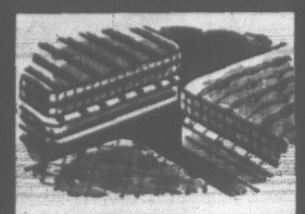

It gives you a lot to think about for 60 seconds.

Time enough.

HE GETS A KICK OUT OF SOCCER

Lawrence Freedman, 54, a London business executive, likes to play the British soccer pools. He's good at it. This week forecaster Freedman parlayed his five-shillings (70 cents) investment into all the correct answers and a cheque for £301,739 ($910,000). Talk about rewarding hobbies!

PILOUS, IMLACH HUDDLE

PLAYER SHIFTS EXPECTED

New Pattern for Leafs?

Rudy Pilous and Punch Imlach were due to huddle in Toronto today and out of the session could come a new pattern for Victoria Maple Leafs.

Imlach, manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, promised last summer that the National Hockey League club would place a contending team in Victoria this season as the city returned to the Western League.

Although looking like a possible contender at times, the Vicleafs haven't been able to live up to Punch's promises and are currently deadlocked with San Francisco Seals in last place. The time has come, Pilous believes, for definite action.

When Pilous headed east there were indications that a major shakeup of the Victoria club was planned and Imlach may be asked to switch some players within the Toronto organization, which includes teams at Rochester (American League) and Tulsa (Central League).

Aiding chances of player shifts is the probability that defenceman Fred Hucul, who retired from the Victoria Leafs last week, will return to action if traded to another club.

Victoria manager Buck Houle was optimistic that Pilous would make headway.

"We have never quit trying to improve ourselves and I think we are just about ready to get some things accomplished," said Houle.

"We're going to make some moves and I feel Victoria fans will support us if we can give them better hockey. That's our problem and we intend to find an answer."

Irish Support Nanaimo In Boxla 'Word War'

The manager of New Westminster's entry in the Inter-City Lacrosse League feels "Nanaimo should improve its club or get out."

That starts the annual war of words between Vancouver Island interests and the mainland.

New Westminster's Jack Fulton said Nanaimo hit the bottom of the league in 1962 and "has weakened every year since."

He noted the loss of Tom McVie and John Ferguson by the Island club and said it appears that 1953 league scoring champion Terry Davis will play in Ontario this year.

"If Davis doesn't come back, Nanaimo might as well pack it up," Fulton said. "It has nothing coming along to replace him. He was its only drawing card."

LACK OF INTEREST?

Nanaimo has no potential without a junior team to supply players and spends three times as much on travel each season, he said. The city had little interest in helping itself.

Nanaimo president Bill McFarlane promptly fired back at Fulton and Victoria Shamrocks, motivated by economics, rushed to the defence of their Island rivals.

"Nanaimo," said McFarlane, "has no intention of withdrawing from the league.

"It's true we have a player problem," he added, "but it's not as bad as Fulton makes out. We've got a good executive at work now, and with a little co-operation we can come back.

MAINLAND BLOCK

"The biggest problem in the league is not Nanaimo, but the mainland clubs. They can't see past their noses. They don't think of what is good for lacrosse, but what is good for them."

Victoria president Buss Morgan made it quite clear today that the Shamrocks "will support Nanaimo all the way."

"We need them in the league," he said.

"Without Nanaimo, our travelling expenses would put us out of business before you could bat an eyelash."

Fulton's tirade was sparked by the announcement earlier this week that Coquitlam plans to seek an ICLL franchise.

Gump Expects 'Quite a Game'

The Gumper and The Bear meet in Montreal Friday night.

Sounds like the title for a wrestlin' match, wot?

It isn't.

The Gumper—Lorne "Gump" Worsley—is one of six members of Quebec Aces who will line up with Montreal junior Canadiens against the world's best amateur hockey team, the Russian Nationals.

Both sides will have their problems, Worsley said today.

"The game will be played under international rules and this is automatically a drawback for our club," said Worsley.

"In pro hockey and to a certain extent in junior hockey, taking a man out and running him into the boards seems to be the prime concern," he went on. "And this is where we may have problems because you're not supposed to do that under international rules."

Worsley said he was "looking forward" to the game, but added that "I would have preferred to see the complete Quebec team face the Russians. Then we probably would get a better idea of just how good they are."

Worsley, like teammate Doug Harvey who is one of two defencemen from the Aces who also will be playing Friday night, has only seen the Russians on television.

"They play the type of game which thrives on passing and positional hockey," he said. "They seem to be fair skaters and shoot fairly well.

"It should be quite a game," the Gumper added.

Fielder Retains Top Spot

Center Guyle Fielder of the Seattle Totems picked up seven points in four games last week to keep one point ahead of Los Angeles Centre Norm Johnson in the Western Hockey League individual scoring race.

Fielder's 38 points are made up of six goals and 32 assists in 26 games.

Johnson, with 37 points, had played only 23 games.

ANKLE INJURY

Johnson, however, was hit in the ankle by a puck in the game Saturday against San Francisco and was expected to be out of action for four to six weeks.

Billy McNeill, captain of the Vancouver Canucks, moved from fourth to third place last week with a total of 15 goals and 20 assists for 35 points.

DICKIE MOORE

Moore's Future Doubtful

TORONTO (CP)—Dickie Moore's comeback attempt with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League appears to hinge on whether he can recover from a back injury suffered two weeks ago at New York.

The 33-year-old left winger, picked up by the Leafs for $20,000 on waivers from Montreal Canadiens last spring, was hurt when he was bounced into the boards backwards.

He managed to conceal the injury—a bruise to the base of the spine—until late last week when he could no longer skate.

Moore said Tuesday night he has definitely not thrown in the towel on his attempt to pick up where knee injuries forced him to leave off with the Canadiens more than a year ago.

REST ORDERED

He said he had "tried to skate out" the back injury but finally gave in to medical treatment. A shot of cortisone didn't affect him, he said, and now doctors have ordered rest.

Leafs gave him permission to return to Montreal to look after his business interests there.

"I was going to go Tuesday morning," he said, "but I decided to go back to see the team doctor. I may see him again before I leave. I haven't said anything about quitting to anyone."

Olympic Track Stars Sign With NFL Teams

NEW YORK (AP) — Dallas Cowboys and New York Giants, destined to finish far up the track in this year's National Football League race, should have speed to burn in 1965.

Sprinters Bob Hayes and Henry Carr, double gold medal winners at the Tokyo Olympic Games, signed contracts Tuesday with Cowboys and Giants, respectively.

The NFL clubs, running sixth and seventh in the Eastern Division with one game remaining, outbid American League rivals for the speedsters, who hope to make the grade as flankers or defensive backs.

Hayes, who played his football at Florida A and M, was a future choice of both Dallas and Denver Broncos of the AFL in the 1963 draft. Carr, of Arizona State University, was a future pick of the Giants and Kansas City Chiefs of the AFL in last month's pro draw.

Hayes, 21, played flanker, running back and safety for the Rattlers while handling the punting and place - kicking duties. The 5-foot-10, 186-pound flash holds world's records in the 100-yard dash, 9.1 seconds, and 100-metre event, 10 seconds. He won the 100 metres at Tokyo and anchored the winning U.S. 400-metre relay team.

ANCHORED RELAY TEAM

Carr, 6-3, and 195 pounds, played one season at Arizona State, missed the next year because of injuries and passed up the 1964 campaign for the Olympics, where he captured the 200 - metre sprint and anchored the American foursome that won the 1,600 - metre relay.

He had a year of college eligibility left but chose a pro contract, prompting his coach, Frank Kush, to blast the Giants as "unethical" for signing him. Arizona State lost halfback Larry Todd, who also had another year of eligibility, to Oakland Raiders of the AFL last week.

The Giants are counting on Carr to bolster their pass defence. "We are getting old in our defensive backfield," New York coach Allie Sherman said, "and that is where we will try him first."

SIX OTHERS SIGN

NFL clubs added six other collegians to their rosters Tuesday.

Western Kentucky linebacker Dale Lindsey, Grambling defensive back Mike Howell and Louisiana Tech punter Dave Lee signed with Cleveland Browns; Penn State fullback Tom Urbanik agreed to terms with Washington Redskins; San Jose and end Dave Johnson signed with Baltimore Colts and Grambling guard Woodrow People with Minnesota Vikings.

The AFL came up with three plums, Buffalo Bills signing Notre Dame centre Norm Nicola, Virginia State halfback Lynwood Hart and Boston U tackle John Henry.

Marty Rosen, South Carolina halfback, and Stan Napper, Western Kentucky end, signed with Ottawa Rough Riders and British Columbia Lions, respectively, of the Canadian League.

NFL ALL-STARS

Colts, Green Bay Dominate Voting

NEW YORK (AP)—Baltimore Colts and Green Bay Packers each placed five men on the annual all-National Football League team selected today for The Associated Press.

The selections were made by a 42-man committee of three from each of the 14 league cities.

Quarterback Johnny Unitas of the Colts and fullback Jim Brown of Cleveland Browns were near-unanimous choices for the offensive team.

Johnny Morris, Chicago Bears' record - breaking pass catcher, was an overwhelming choice for flanker back. Lenny Moore, Baltimore's big touchdown punch, scored decisively as the running back.

SEVEN REPEATERS

Frank Clarke of Dallas Cowboys took over the split-end job, won by the ailing Del Shofner of New York Giants in the previous three years. Mike Ditka, the Bears' powerful tight end, was one of seven repeaters.

Dick Schafrath of Cleveland and Forrest Gegg of Green Bay again were the offensive tackles, although Greg moved to guard in mid-season when Vince Lombardi shuffled his Packer line.

Jim Parker of Baltimore, a hardy perennial, was an All-Star guard again but Ken Gray of St. Louis Cardinals took over the other guard job, held for two years by Jerry Kamer of Green Bay who recently underwent surgery.

GETS CENTRE JOB

Mick Tingelhoff, signed by Minnesota Vikings as a free agent in 1962, took over the first-string centre job from Jim Ringo of Philadelphia Eagles.

Green Bay put four men on the defensive unit, Willie Davis at end, Henry Jordan at tackle, Ray Nitschke at middle linebacker and Willie Wood at safety. Gino Marchetti, veteran Baltimore end who came out of retirement just before the season started, and Bob Boyd, a corner back, were the Colts' contribution to the defensive team.

Bob Lilly, Dallas giant who is regarded by many as the best lineman in the NFL, made the club at defensive tackle.

Joe Fortunato, the consistent Chicago left linebacker, and Maxie Baughan, who had a fine year for Philadelphia, were the corner linebackers.

The only rookie to make the first team was Paul Krause, Washington Redskins' fine safety whose 12 interceptions led the league. Pat Fischer, at 5-foot-9 the smallest man to play regularly, won the other corner-back job on his great season as a pass interceptor and defender for the Cardinals.

The repeaters from 1963 were Ditka, Gregg, Schafrath, Brown, Jordan, Fortunato and Parker. Y. A. Tittle, the All-Star quarterback of the Giants and also the most valuable player in 1963 did not receive a vote.

. . . expected back

Haidas Ready To Move

Victoria Haida Chiefs can start to fill up their Christmas stocking tonight.

The fourth-place Chiefs host last-place CYO in an Inter-City Basketball League game at Central Junior High at 9 p.m.

Victims of some quaint scheduling that has seen them play five of their seven games on the road—four of them back-to-back double-headers against different teams—Chiefs go into this one with four days' rest.

Chiefs will also have Darrell Lorimer and Bill Spotswood out. This pair missed Chiefs' last two games because of university exams.

A victory over CYO, who might have B.C. Lions' Greg Findlay and Pete Ohler in strip, plus a conquest of Alberni here Saturday, could put Chiefs atop the league.

Bays Stretch Streak; Claremont Scores Win

Oak Bay is still cutting an unbeaten trail through the day section of the Inter - High School Basketball League.

The Bays kept their season's record unblemished at Esquimalt Tuesday by handing the Dockers a 46-39 defeat.

Brian McIntyre fired 17 points to give Esquimalt the game's top scorer while Bob Burrows and Tom Child were leading the Oak Bay attack with 16 and 14 points.

In a night section tussle, the losing team also had the top point - collector as Claremont tripped St. Louis College.

Jim Lynch poured in 20 points for St. Louis but Claremont's balanced attack negated Lynch's brilliance and led to a 57-44 win.

Rod Sutton (15 points) and Ray Galey (13) sparked the winners.

Piersall Battling Domestic Problem

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Baseball's Jimmy Piersall, 35, recently named the American League's comeback player of the year by The Associated Press, is accused of extreme cruelty in a separate maintenance suit filed by his wife.

The Piersalls have nine children.

Mrs. Mary A. Piersall, 36, in a complaint filed Tuesday, said the Los Angeles Angels outfielder kept community funds from her. She demanded that these be awarded to her.

She asked $1,280 monthly alimony and child support.

The couple married in Scranton, Pa., Oct. 22, 1949, and separated a week ago.

Mrs. Piersall asked custody of the children, Ellene, 13; Doreen, 12; Claire, 11; James Jr., 10; Maura, 8; Kathleen, 6; Ann, 5; Christopher, 1, and Patricia, 4 months.

A hearing was set for Dec. 22.

Racing Group Packs It Up

LONDON (Reuters) — The British racing partnership, one of the big private entrants in the world championship racing driving series, has decided to withdraw from formula one racing.

Ken Gregory, managing director of the parthership, which has Stirling Moss among its directors, says there were three main reasons for the decision—increasing costs, dwindling income and the unequal distribution of payment made by race organizers.

As a result of the decision the contracts of two prominent Grand Prix drivers, Innes Ireland and Trevor Taylor, will not be renewed at the end of the year.

'Ever Been Kicked by Determined Guy?'

NEW YORK (AP)—Why sit in the corner, even if you don't have feet?

That is the question 17-year-old Jack Rice, defensive guard for Barrackville, W.Va., high school, asked Kyle Rote, Southern Methodist and New York Giant great, at the football foundation's Hall of Fame football banquet.

Rote, one of 10 men inducted into the Hall of Fame, presented a plaque to Rice who lost both legs between the knee and ankles in a railroad accident eight years ago.

Despite the handicaps, young Rice won three letters in football at Barrackville, a city of 2,000. The first two years he was middle guard on defence only, but during 1964 he played guard on both offence and defence.

Rice, a B-plus student, wears plastic sleeves on the stumps of his legs. Rubber feet are attached to the sleeves.

Although his agility is impaired, Rice was mobile enough to scoop up seven fumbles during the 1964 season. A year ago Barrackville had a 7-2 record; this year it slumped to 2-6.

Young Rice said:

"I forget that I am handicapped once the game starts."

"There is only one thing he hates," whispered Larry Jump, principal of the Barrackville High School. "And that is for a player either from his own team or the opposition to stop and help him up after he has been knocked down.

"No matter who it is, he will kick them. You ever been kicked by a determined guy whose legs are made of plastic?"

AFTER EIGHT YEARS

They Shook Hands

HOUSTON (UPI) — The old man and "the kid" shook hands and made up again after eight long years.

It all happened bang-bang, just like that, in the crowded hotel lobby of baseball's convention headquarters at the weekend.

Suddenly, Billy Martin strode up to Casey Stengel, extended his hand and said: "Hi, Case. Good to see you again."

For once in his life, Mighty Casey was speechless. But he reacted quickly by putting out his right hand, too.

Martin's words of greeting were the first that has passed between the two since he was traded by the New York Yankees to Kansas City Athletics on June 15, 1957.

Billy the Kid had been "Casey's boy" for a long time, but that deal put an abrupt end to their warm association. Martin felt Stengel had sold him down the river and they didn't speak to each other again until the weekend.

* * *

But when they finally did get together, it was just like old times. They sat down on a lobby sofa, side by side, and that was all Casey needed to get him started.

Stengel then went on to relate how he uncovered Martin at Oakland.

"I had this college shortstop I was looking at in a workout," he recalled. "He was neat as a pin. Did everything according to the book. Wore his pants just so, put his cap on straight and looked like something outta Spalding's guide.

"I made up my mind to sign him for $4,000 when the club trainer, Red Adams, came along and said I was signing the wrong guy. Told me he had a much better looking prospect. 'Show him to me,' I said.

"Well, he brings this kid out and you never saw such a sight in your life. It was Martin here and you oughtta see him. Uniform all dirty, one pants leg rolled up and the other falling down. Never saw anything like it before in my life."

* * *

But the talent was there and Martin, of course, went on to play for Oakland and subsequently move up to the world champion Yankees.

The two talked for a long time. Maybe even about a possible trade. Martin, who been scouting for the Twins, recently was named one of their coaches and knows as much, if not more, about the personnel in both leagues as any manager around.

"You know that old man was mighty good to me," Martin said. "I'm glad we're talking again."

Casey also had something to say.

"That fella had his ups and downs," he remarked to a bystander who had been in the group. "But he really looks good. I think he's gonna make them a great coach. He's got a lot on the ball."

BOWLER OF THE WEEK

Selection as Times Bowler-of-the-Week in women's fivepin category marks "first victory of any description" for Peggy Marsh. She accomplished it by rolling 267-262-315—844 series in City Police League at Gibson's Recreation. Mrs. Marsh, a bowler for eight years, now is eligible to compete in Times' Bowlerama in May.

CLAY BACK IN FORM

Mouth Operation Might Do the Job

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A Negro night club here buzzed as never before Tuesday night as the self-styled king, Cassius Clay, rocked the place with his banter.

"I'm feeling good," said the heavyweight boxing champion who is recovering from a hernia operation.

Clay said he was on his way to Miami to pick up a bus he has purchased.

The champ appeared more subdued than in the past, and when someone pointed it out to him, he said, "I've changed my style but I'm still the king."

Warming up as his audience grew larger, Clay said, "I'm 22 now and I'll be champ for 10 more years.

"I'll beat Liston, and then I want the Rabbit.

"I want the Rabbit bad. He talks too much. I'm after the Rabbit."

Clay revealed that the Rabbit is former champ Floyd Patterson.

Then he said, "but the Rabbit has to get by the Water Woman first." The Water Woman turned out to be George Chuvalo of Toronto, who meets Patterson in New York Jan. 29.

First New Player Signed by Champs

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The Grey Cup champion British Columbia Lions Tuesday signed two-way end Stan Napper, an all-Ohio Valley Conference selection from Western Kentucky State College.

The Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League and Houston Oilers of the American League were also said to be interested in Napper, 6' 4" and 230 pounds.

Although Western Kentucky plays in an obscure conference, it produces its share of professionals, Napper was the fourth player from this year's squad to sign a pro contract.

Napper played the flanker on Western Kentucky's wide set formation, but it was expected the Lions may use him as a tight end.

Canadiens' Laperriere Another Doug Harvey?

By The Canadian Press

The expression "there'll never be another Doug Harvey" is heard less frequently in Montreal these days as a young defenceman named Jacques Laperriers dazzles Forum fans and crunches Canadiens' opponents.

Now they're saying 23-year-old Laperriere, Rookie of the Year last season, may be even greater than Harvey—a player named the league's top rearguard six times and an All-Star on 10 occasions with Montreal and once with New York.

The Toronto-Montreal game will be telecast over Channel 8 starting at 5:30 p.m.

Laperriere's sparkling play last year, which sparked Montreal to a National Hockey League title, caused NHL president Clarence Campbell to remark:

"In all the years I've been associated with hockey I have never seen a first-year man take over and lead a team like Laperriere did this last season."

FLATTENED MIKITA

Laperriere is constantly improving. His puck-carrying and passing are weak but getting better, he is anticipating more shots and going down to block them, and his body-checking is fast becoming phenomenal.

Fans are still talking about the check he delivered to Chicago's Stan Mikita in Montreal's 5-3 victory last Saturday, a jolt that sent Mikita's stick and gloves flying in opposite directions and left him "finished" for the rest of the game.

Montreal coach Toe Blake feels Laperriere falls down in handling the puck, which was Harvey's method of controlling a game almost single-handedly. But the coach agrees he's "stronger and more aggressive" than Harvey.

'LONG WAY TO GO'

"But Jacques has an awful long way to go before anyone can compare the two of them. I always considered Harvey the best defenceman I ever saw in hockey. The guy could do everything."

Time will tell, of course, and Laperriere already has the jump. He was named an All-Star last year at 22, while Harvey didn't make the dream team until 27, his fourth year in the NHL.

Laperriere will be in action tonight at Toronto when the Canadiens face the Leafs in a head-on clash to decide second place. Both teams are tied with 25 points, three behind leading Detroit.

The other game scheduled sends Chicago Black Hawks to New York for a renewal of their feud with the Rangers, who lead the fifth-place Hawks by six points in the standings.

Frank Mahovlich, out for 12 games with a mysterious ailment, may see action with the Leafs. He wants to play and coach Punch Imlach says he'll get the chance.

Venturi Selected 'Golfer of Year'

KEN VENTURI

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Ken Venturi, who made one of golf's greatest comebacks with a victory in the U.S. Open, was named player of the year Tuesday night by the Professional Golfers Association.

Lloyd Mangrum and the late Ed Dudley were elected to the PGA's Hall of Fame in ceremonies at the association's annual banquet.

Venturi, 33, edged PGA tournament champion Bobby Nichols by 35 votes for the honor.

Venturi won this year's U.S. Open in Washington, D.C., the American Golf Classic and the Insurance City Open.

Mangrum, a pro since 1929, won 37 major tournaments including the 1964 U.S. Open, and finished among the top three in 100 others.

Dudley played on three Ryder Cup squads during a career that included victories in the California, Los Angeles and Western Opens.

World Record Billiard Break

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuters)—South African Mannie Francisco set an amateur world record break of 518 in the world amateur billiards championships Tuesday.

The previous best of 390 was set by Jack Karnehm of England in the championships last Thursday.

Only Clark McConachy, world professional champion, has a higher break under the new rules. He had a break of 608 here three weeks ago.

CHICAGO (AP)—Goalie Glenn Hall of Chicago Black Hawks will sit out the Hawks' next three National Hockey League games at his own request.

Denis Dejordy, recalled from the Hawks' Buffalo team in the American League, will replace Hall at New York tonight, at Boston Thursday and at Detroit Saturday.

Coach Bill Reay said Hall asked for a rest.

Title Bout Draws Courthouse Hook

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP)—A Superior Court judge ordered Joe Giardello Tuesday to show cause why he should not be restrained from fighting Rubin (Hurricane) Carter for the world middleweight boxing championship Monday in Philadelphia.

The order was signed by Judge Morris Pashman on the request of the promoters of a fight in Atlantic City last year in which Giardello won the title from Dick Tiger.

The order is returnable in court Friday.

The plaintiffs contended that Giardello signed an agreement with them on Sept. 11, 1963, giving them exclusive rights to promote all his future championship fights should he defeat Tiger.

The petitioners are Murray Goodman of Rivervale, Lou Duva of Totowa and Sam Bartoletta of Teaneck, along with Garden State Sports, Inc., and Murray Goodman Associates, Inc.

Nationals Cut Three Players

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Gord Simpson has released three players from Canada's national hockey team.

The three, defencemen Danny Summers and Sheldon Bloomer and forward Ron Farnfield, were members of the 1964 Allan Cup champion Winnipeg Maroons.

RUSTPROOFING?

WE SPILL MORE THAN OTHERS USE.

We don't just gloss over the winter rust problem. Our unique deep-dip rustproofing seeps into every nook and cranny to seal out the ravages of rust!

Some years ago we took a long, hard look at the winter rust problem. Normal rustproofing methods weren't adequate. Spraying and coating provide some protection, certainly, but not enough. They miss one crucial thing. They don't really get inside. They don't really seep into a car's body for truly effective protection.

That's why our engineers went to work on a solution. Why not dip our cars in rustproofing—right up to their rooflines! Time consuming, yes. But well worth it—for you.

But wait. We didn't stop there. One more step was necessary. For complete rustproofing, the metal surface must be properly prepared. To ensure proper bonding it must be absolutely clean and free of all impurities.

And that's where we start. The body of every '65 Rambler is submerged right to its roofline in six separate tanks. In each tank, the metal is cleansed, scoured and purified.

Then in a seventh tank, the car is completely dipped again in rustproofing primer paint, flooding every nook and cranny. A second primer is sprayed on for good measure and then baked. A thorough wet-sanding removes any blemishes. Fifteen pounds of rustproofing primer coats the steel.

And we're not through yet. Three coats of chip-resistant, salt-resistant, super enamel are sprayed on and baked. Corrosion-resistant wax and sealer compounds are sprayed inside girders, rocker panels, fenders and on underbody areas—those critical places where rust does its worst damage.

Because we take this much care, put this much effort into rustproofing, Rambler is the world's most completely rustproofed car. Every 1965 Rambler can beat the worst slush-and-salt winter conditions—mile after mile, month after month, year after year.

Exclusive Deep-Dip Rustproofing is just one of the many ways Rambler builds a longer-lasting, better-designed car for you.

Stick with Rambler and let the rust of the world go by.

MERCHANTS ACCUSED OF TRICKERY

BANNF, Alta. (CP) — Charges by the customs and excise branch of the federal government have been laid against 13 Banff and Lake Louise merchants for misrepresenting the origin of imported goods.

RCMP in this Rocky Mountain resort centre say the charges were laid against novelty and souvenir shops for removing made-in-Japan labels from imported souvenirs and trinkets.

The merchants will appear in Banff RCMP court Wednesday and Dec. 15.

The charges were laid after several months investigations by the customs and excise branch.

ISOLATED

Prisoners Transferred 'For Safety'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A news leak revealing that four prisoners have been flown from Montreal here will make it necessary to keep them in a special security unit at the British Columbia Penitentiary, Warden John Maloney said Tuesday.

The men, all crown witnesses in three separate Montreal cases, were moved Monday from Quebec provincial police cells for their own protection.

Warden Maloney said they will be placed in a rooftop segregation area at the penitentiary with 10 other men hated by the main body of prisoners as informers or child rapists.

The transfer involved Leopold Desarais, 40, and Louis Piche, 52, crown witnesses in the murder trial that grew out of the slaying of underworld figure Keith (Rocky) Pearson; Georges Stanino, serving a 15-year term at Stony Mountain Prison in Manitoba and brought to Montreal as a witness in another case; and a fourth unidentified man believed to be a crown witness who helped crack a stolen auto ring.

Canada Helps Train Army Of Tanzania

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will send a Canadian military training and advisory team of about 30 members to the United Republic of Tanzania, Prime Minister Pearson announced Tuesday.

The Canadians will presumably work alongside Chinese Communist military advisers who have already been sent to the East African Commonwealth country at the request of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

Mr. Pearson said in a statement that the commander of the Canadian team and a small advance party are expected to arrive at Dar-es-Salaam in about a month.

The work of the Canadian team in Tanzania will be supplemented by the military training of selected Tanzanian personnel in this country.

Canada will also assist in the construction of a permanent training centre in Tanzania. Canada is giving similar aid to two other African Commonwealth countries, Ghana and Nigeria.

Manslaughter Conviction

VERNON (CP)—An assize court jury has convicted Esko Kumpulainen, 58, of Chase, on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the Aug. 23 shooting death of Martin Harby, 66.

Kumpulainen was charged with capital murder following the shooting of Harby as he climbed a fence into an orchard.

Testimony established that the pair had been drinking on the farm where Kumpulainen was caretaker.

Kumpulainen said he warned Harby to stay out of the orchard. He said he caught Harby going over the fence and tried to wound him in the leg with a .22-calibre rifle.

The bullet hit Harby in the back, and he died in hospital two days later.

Kumpulainen was remanded for sentence at the end of the assizes.

SURPLUS SALE REAL BARGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee has reported that values placed on equipment are "frequently unrealistic" and suggested an overhaul of the department's accounting techniques in this field.

In a report tabled in the Commons, the standing committee on public accounts said members were concerned about large quantities of surplus material and small amounts recovered through their sale.

A report by the auditor general showed that new and used surplus equipment valued at $29,000,000 was disposed of that year by Crown Assets for a recovery of $715,106.

"Good Reason to Approach the New Year with Confidence"

"Trends within the economy may be more varied and increases in output more moderate than in 1964 but, in general, economic conditions should continue to be favourable," said J.P.R. Wadsworth, President, addressing the 98th Annual Meeting of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

We meet today at the close of a year that has been favourable for Canada in many respects. Economic conditions within our country have been generally good with each major region continuing to participate in the general prosperity. Total Gross National Product in 1964 is now expected to exceed $46 billion, an increase over last year of some 6 per cent in volume and approaching 8 per cent valued in current dollars. This is the fourth year of steady growth achieved without marked pressures on labour and materials and within a framework of comparatively steady prices. It is a good record of sustained expansion.

The strong rise in output this year has been achieved primarily through a sharp increase in export sales and a substantial rise in private capital investment.

Exports

On the export side, strong demand from the United States, the United Kingdom and other overseas customers has resulted in high volume sales of Canada's major traditional export items including wheat and flour, newsprint and pulp, lumber and plywood, and various semi-processed non-ferrous mineral products. In addition, there has been a sharp rise in shipments of iron ore and concentrates, and there have been substantial sales of aircraft and parts, semi-fabricated steel, industrial and farm machinery and automotive products. Exports of products from the secondary manufacturing industries have shown encouraging gains in volume and variety, and the delivery of a substantial portion of the 250 million bushels of wheat sold to the Soviet Union has been a major supplement to the usual flow of exports. The total value of merchandise exports from Canada is estimated at $6.2 billion for the first nine months of 1964, an increase of about 23 per cent compared with the corresponding period last year.

Capital Investment

Capital investment has also been the source of substantial stimulus to the economy. The estimate of total outlays for private and public investment including housing is $10.8 billion for this year. If this program is accomplished it will mean an increase in outlays over last year of about $1.5 billion, by far the sharpest increase since 1956.

The sharp rise in capital investment in the business sector has resulted from a combination of developments. World demand for the products of our mines and forests has increased in a number of the basic resource industries to an extent that warrants further expansion of capacity. The development of extensive energy resources is going ahead following the consummation of agreements for the sale of power to the United States.

Industrial Production

The general pattern of industrial activity has reflected the stimuli from exports and capital investment as well as the strength of domestic demand. Industrial production rose sharply during the latter part of last year and has moved gradually higher in a saw-tooth pattern through 1964. The average level of industrial production in the first eight months of this year was 9 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of last year.

Agriculture

The outstanding development in the agricultural sector has been the very high volume of wheat exports in the crop year ending July 31, 1964. Wheat and flour exports amounted to nearly 600 million bushels, almost 80 per cent higher than in the previous year and almost double the average for the preceeding ten-year period. The dollar value of wheat exports in the last crop year was more than $1 billion and the major export market for Canadian wheat was the Soviet Union which purchased about 40 per cent of total export shipments.

The wheat crop this year is estimated at some 600 million bushels, 17 per cent below last year's record harvest but still the fourth largest on record.

Consumer Sector

Personal expenditures advanced markedly during the last half of 1963 and the early part of this year. The rate of spending for durable goods was especially strong, paced by record purchases of automobiles. Outlays for imported goods and for travel abroad increased quite sharply, following the pattern of previous business expansions. In the second quarter of this year consumer expenditures increased only slightly but the year-over-year increase was still almost 7 per cent.

Personal income has followed a similar pattern, rising sharply in the fourth quarter of 1963 and the first quarter of this year.

Government Sector

In the first seven months of the current fiscal year, April to October, the Federal budgetary surplus was $451 million compared with a deficit of $128.6 million in the corresponding period of 1963. In the seven-month period this year expenditures were up $75.5 million but revenues were up $655 million, which suggests there is some possibility of balancing the Federal budget in the current fiscal year.

Employment

The advance in economic activity this year has been accompanied by some increase in employment. The total number of people at work in September was estimated at 6,754,000, an increase of 189,000 over a year earlier. Unemployment was estimated at 218,000 in September 1964, some 32,000 under a year earlier.

The employment picture, in terms of the utilization of the labour supply, is the most favourable since 1957 and in some regions there are indications of considerable pressure on the supply of certain types of labour.

Balance of Payments

Canada's balance of payments for the first half of 1964 showed a deficit in the current account of $518 million compared with a deficit of $452 million in the corresponding period last year. Exports and imports were up substantially in volume, each gaining over 20 per cent. Merchandise exports for the six months' period amounted to $3,927 million and imports were valued at $3,767 million; the resulting favourable balance on merchandise trade was $160 million, up $12 million from a year earlier. At the same time, the continuing deficit on non-merchandise transactions increased from $600 million to $678 million, chiefly the result of larger deficits in the travel account and the interest and dividends account. In total, the current account deficit increased by $66 million.

In this connection it is important to note the very sharp increase in the deficit on current account transactions with the United States built up principally as the result of the much larger inflow of merchandise imports although there was also some increase in the deficit on non-merchandise transactions.

Outlook for 1965

It is from a record level of economic activity in the final quarter of this year that we move on into 1965. The levelling out which appeared in some areas of the economy around mid-year turned out to be temporary and the strong upward trend in total output was resumed in the fall. The economy still appears to be functioning in good balance, inventory-sales ratios in manufacturing are satisfactory by historical standards, the volume of unfilled orders is substantial and competition is keeping a tight rein on prices. Strength is continuing to flow from many sources.

There are indications that the surge in capital investment will continue through next year although the increase in volume may be somewhat less than this year.

The climate for Canadian exports may not be quite as favourable next year. Assessments of the economic outlook for the United States in 1965 indicate a somewhat slower rate of increase in economic activity than this year. Overseas there has been some slowing down in growth rates in a number of countries which purchase substantial quantities of Canadian products.

Consumer expenditures and government outlays for goods and services, the other two major sectors of final product demand, have provided firm support to the economy through this year. Changes in detailed patterns of expenditure in these areas are to be expected as demands change in response to shifting income flows, population groupings and various special influences. However, there does not appear to be any reason to anticipate marked changes in the general trends of demand in these two sectors.

During the coming year, the economy will continue to be affected by events and changes in policy at home and abroad that are difficult, if not impossible, to foresee. With this important proviso in mind, there is good reason to approach the new year with confidence. Trends within the economy may be more varied and increases in output more moderate than in 1964 but, in general, economic conditions should continue to be favourable.

Saving and Investment in the Canadian Economy

There has recently been a good deal of discussion in Canada about the extent to which Canadians are themselves providing the necessary financing for their economic development.

The largest single source of savings, and hence of investment funds, is from the retained earnings and depreciation allowances of corporations. The most important use of such savings is to finance additional real investment in Canada covering new construction, new machinery and equipment including mining equipment and drilling costs. The second major source of investment funds is personal savings.

The savings derived from the business and personal sectors of our economy would normally be more than adequate to finance the real investment required by the private sector. This, however, is not the whole story, since the various levels of government also draw heavily on the savings of the community, and the net borrowings of the government sector have the effect of reducing the amount of savings available for investment in the private sector of the economy. The extent to which the volume of domestic savings falls short of the achieved level of investment, both private and public, is also the measure of our net import of foreign capital. If the problem is examined in these more fundamental terms, there are two courses of action, each of which could help to reduce the gap between the actual volume of domestic savings and the volume required to meet the demands in Canada for private and public investment. The first approach is to try to encourage a greater flow of domestic savings; in this connection, taxation policies are obviously of great importance. The second is to reduce the net diversion of investment funds to all levels of government, leaving a larger portion of present savings available for productive employment in the private sector.

Canada Pension Plan

The Canada Pension Plan now before Parliament will have an important influence on the flow of savings and the pattern of investment. It is important to consider what the impact of the plan will be on the availability of investment funds for use in the private sector of the economy as well as its effect on the over-all rate of growth in Canadian productive capacity. Much will depend on the ways in which the funds are used by the responsible government authorities and on whether the availability of these funds tends to encourage increased government expenditures.

Another aspect of the problem is the way in which savings are mobilized and made available to those requiring them to finance economic activity. As already indicated, business enterprise may use its own savings directly for investment purposes, but its ability to do so frequently depends on the availability of working capital loans from the chartered banks. Insurance companies and pension funds also play a very important role in the process of gathering together savings and making them available in an economical and effective way for a wide range of economic activities. An important factor is that these institutions operate through a market process so that borrowers, whether private or governmental, have to compete for funds on a price basis, and lenders obtain a return which corresponds to the value placed on their funds in a free market.

Role of Chartered Banks

The chartered banks, of course, have a crucial part to play in the whole operation of the capital markets. As a major depository of the savings of the community they are also a major source of financing for business, personal, and governmental operations. The funds entrusted to the banking system, whether as savings deposits, demand deposits, or other types of liabilities, are in no sense idle funds. They are constantly at work in the form of loans and investments in every branch of economic activity in Canada.

The Chief General Manager has dealt with two of the major restrictions in the present Bank Act which inhibit the employment of bank funds. The ceiling on lending rates and the prohibition against taking conventional mortgage security serve only to reduce the availability and increase the cost of credit in certain important areas of financing. The removal of these arbitrary limitations would mean that the funds entrusted to chartered banks could be used even more broadly and more effectively in ways which could provide an added stimulus to the Canadian economy.

William M. Currie, Chief General Manager, reviewed the balance sheet, highlights of which are summarized:

The Bank's 98th Annual Statement reflects a growth in assets of approximately $255,000,000 to a total and new peak of over $5,500,000,000. The pace of the economy was reflected not only by an increase of $188,000,000 in total deposits but also by an increase of $286,000,000 in commercial and other loans.

Deposits with other banks increased by $24,000,000, Government of Canada direct and guaranteed securities were reduced by $78,000,000, and call and short loans to investment dealers and brokers were lower by $47,000,000.

The liquid position of the Bank continues to be strong with quick assets at $2,560,000,000, equal to 48.99 per cent of the Bank's total liabilities to the public.

The growth in commercial and other loans of almost 14 per cent was widely spread over the full range of the Bank's lending business.

Bank Premises shows a net increase of $3,600,000 after depreciation. During the year 62 branches were opened and 11 closed, to bring the total number of branches and banking offices to 1,334, of which 1,302 were located in Canada and 32 abroad.

Total deposits, up $188,000,000 to $4,971,000,000, reflect an increase of $123,000,000, or 5.6 per cent in personal savings deposits, and a substantial increase in the total number of savings bank depositors. Other deposits increased by $110,000,000; included are other Canadian deposits on demand and payable after notice and deposits in foreign currencies.

Throughout the Bank there were gratifying increases in the total number of current and personal chequing account customers during the year.

Turning to the statement of undivided profits, the net profit of $21,402,602 represents an improvement of $1,017,543 over last year. Earnings per share were $3.07 as compared with $2.93 in 1963. Total dividends of $15,678,000 were paid at the rate of $2.25 per share, leaving $5,724,602 which, together with the balance of $2,364,265 in undivided profits carried forward from 1963, made up a total of $8,088,867 from which $5,000,000 was transferred to Rest Account. The balance of $3,088,867 was carried forward to the 1965 fiscal year.

Paid-up Capital, Rest Account and undivided profits totalled $277,768,867, and the Bank's shareholders increased by 1,282 to 27,098.

Growth in loans and deposits is perhaps the best evidence of the part played by the Bank in meeting the credit requirements of Canadians in every walk of life. The chartered banking system could finance a much wider range of Canadian needs. Two of the restrictions imposed by the Canadian Bank Act, the six per cent ceiling on loan interest and the prohibition against loans secured by conventional mortgages, prevent the banks from competing with other lending organizations whose rates would be lower if faced with chartered bank competition. Large segments of the public thus are forced to pay higher rates than they would if the banks were permitted to compete in these fields.

During the past two years data processing centres were opened in Montreal and Vancouver and this year a second computer has been added to the Toronto centre. Presently, the bookkeeping of over 200 branches in these three centres is largely done by this electronic equipment and the number of branches within the system is steadily increasing. Cheques processed in the Toronto centre alone have been increasing at a rate of 10 per cent per annum and the annual volume is now in excess of 100 million individual cheques. Modern electronic data processing eliminates much of the tedious bank work and releases personnel for more challenging and constructive work.

Important as these installations are, Canada's need for wide and diversified financial services extends to the smallest hamlet. In most cases chartered banks, including many of this Bank's 1300 Canadian branches, provide the only financial services available at such points, bringing to them every facility available in the largest metropolitan centre.

Such services are costly to maintain and reasonable charges for the many services performed are justified. The banking system provides these services at uniform cost, regardless of location or the volume of business handled at individual branches.

As an example, customers depositing cheques drawn on other banking points receive immediate credit and can use the funds immediately, as though they had been borrowed for the time being, notwithstanding that the negotiating branch bank does not receive settlement at one of the central clearing points until some time later. The organization required to perform the clearing function is a complex and costly one which carries on around the clock.

Opportunities for rapid promotion in a satisfying career in the Bank are offered to ambitious individuals. While planned, on-the-job training is the primary means of equipping personnel with basic knowledge and special skills, there are in addition widespread training facilities designed to assist officers of both sexes to equip themselves for increased responsibilities. A Staff College in Toronto and Career Centres in four major centres across the country provide instruction in a wide range of subjects. Men and women are encouraged to participate in the Fellow's Course in banking, and scholarships awarded annually present an opportunity to acquire a full university education. Officers of the Bank regularly attend executive development programs at Canadian and other universities. In recent years an increasing number of the women have been promoted to senior positions and every encouragement is given them to advance to positions of senior responsibility.

The progress of the Bank during the year could only have been accomplished by men and women confident of their role in our future progress, devoted to the ideals and objectives of the Bank and willing to put forth a full measure of thoughtful effort. To all members of the personnel I extend the thanks of General Management and our compliments on a job well done.

The full text of the President's and the Chief General Manager's addresses may be obtained by writing to the Secretary, Head Office, Toronto.

NDP LOSES SPLIT DECISION

TORONTO (CP)—The New Democratic Party lost a split decision in an experimental bid to inject over party politics into Metropolitan Toronto's municipal elections Monday.

Three candidates ran under the New Democrat banner in suburban Scarborough Township's Ward 1 and one was elected.

Stephen Lewis, member of the Ontario legislature for Scarborough West who engineered two New Democrat by-election victories in the fall, directed the experiment in Scarborough.

Aldermanic candidate Robert Collie, sheet metal mechanic, teamed with two candidates for board of education—Keith Brown, air craft factory mechanic, and David Mochan, editor of a union publication.

Mr. Collie lost out to incumbent alderman Karl Mallette, a striking newspaper printer, who polled 3,939 votes to the New Democrat's 2,846 and a third candidate's 619.

TOPPED POLL

In the board of education race, in which the top two candidates are elected, Mr. Brown topped the poll with 3,759 votes. But Mr. Mochan was edged out by Andrew Wilson, 3,020 votes to 2,917.

Mr. Lewis, who directed campaigning for New Democratic victories in the provincial riding of Toronto Riverdale in September and the federal riding of Waterloo South last month, said it would take time to evaluate the Scarborough results before deciding whether to extend the program in future.

3 ARRESTED

Brass Filings Sold for Gold Dust

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Wlosowicz, 63, of Toronto, pleaded guilty here Tuesday to a charge of possessing stolen gold.

He was one of three men arrested here this week for whom warrants had been issued in Winnipeg, Kamsack, Sask., and Elliot Lake, Ont., in connection with a series of fraud complaints.

Detectives found three ounces of gold, worth about $105, in Wlosowicz's room.

Police testified he worked underground in a gold mine near Rouyn, Que.

Wlosowicz was remanded in custody for sentence Dec. 15.

Joseph Zodworney, 64, also of Toronto, and Marion Banaszek, 37, of Windsor, Ont., were charged with fraud. Banaszek has been in jail since his arrest Sunday.

Police said complaints centred around an operation which sold brass filings for gold dust and took in at least $100,000. The victim was first shown real gold dust, for which brass filings were substituted when a transaction was completed. One man reported the loss of $9,000.

A police spokesman said Zodworney and Banaszek will be sent to Elliot Lake, about 83 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, to stand trial.

MARINA WANTS MORE TIME AS HOMEMAKER

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet working women here are asking for less hours on the job and more time for household chores.

Trud, the Soviet labor newspaper, said Tuesday they should have their way.

The paper told of a woman named Marina, a duty officer in a Moscow subway station. After the birth of her son, she applied to work half a day. She was told she had to work a whole day or not at all.

Trud said living standards here have improved making the housewife's job easier.

"But we have to do immeasurably more," it added.

The newspaper implied that until housewives have more equipment to help with the home chores, they should be allowed to spend less time at the office or plant.

UFO Sighted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The local flying saucer club has appealed to the public for more information about an unidentified object reported to have hovered over the city late Saturday. More than 100 persons reported seeing the flying object, described as an orange or gold sphere which circled the city, hovered overhead and then sped off.

Truck Hits Bus

DETROIT (AP)—An oil tank truck veered across a median and smashed into a school bus and a station wagon in suburban Detroit. The school bus driver was killed and 18 persons were injured.

Owners Seek To Free Ships From Seaway

TORONTO (CP)—Four ships caught in the Great Lakes by the Dec. 5 shutdown of the St. Lawrence Seaway may be forced to return to Toronto for the winter.

Lawyers, ship agents and embassies of the countries involved were deluging the transport and external affairs departments in Ottawa Tuesday in a bid to have the seaway reopened to free the ships, trapped outside the Iroquois Lock 30 miles west of Cornwall.

The vessels are the Orient Merchant of Greek registery, the Olau Gorm of Denmark, the Vanfu of Nationalist China and the Flying Independent of the United States. All are owned or chartered in the U.S.

Agents have obtained berths for the ships in Toronto Harbor, but were awaiting final word on the efforts of the diplomatic representations to the government.

Company officials said the operating costs of the ships vary from $1,000 to $3,000 a day and the total cost of time lost in an idle winter could reach $1,560,000 — plus expenses for berths, services, cargo and crew removal.

CARRYS MILITARY AID

The Flying Independent was causing the most concern since it is carrying military aid, equipment and food for foreign countries. The Orient Merchant has general cargo, the Olau Gorm carries flour and the Vanfu has scrap.

The official closing date for the seaway between Montreal and Lake Ontario was Nov. 30, but weather conditions permitted it to stay open until Dec. 5.

The vessels' owners have only themselves to blame for their trouble, John Akin, information officer for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said Tuesday in Ottawa.

He said masters of all ships entering the Welland Canal were advised of the closing date and other warnings were issued through department of transport notices, telegrams to the Shipping Federation of Canada and bulletins issued to the press and marine radio.

Six inches of ice and a six-inch weekend snowfall forced the system to close.

Conspiracy Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto men were arrested Tuesday night on charges of conspiracy with persons in Ontario and Quebec to defraud creditors through bankruptcies. Miklos Koves, 40, a partner in Acadia Import Company, and Sandor Katz, 43, were charged in connection with the bankruptcy of the Montreal Wholesale Company, which authorities said had resulted in losses of $30,000 to creditors.

SEGREGATED SCHOOLS HIT WITH 'SIT-OUT'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — More than 10,000 Negro pupils are dramatizing what they call deficiencies in the mostly-segregated schools of Jacksonville with a technique called a sit-out.

Negro leaders, claiming that Negro students are getting the worst of a bad school system, urged the students to stay home again today and then return to school Thursday.

The boycott weakened the second day. More than 53 per cent of the 32,000 Negro pupils stayed out of classes Monday. The figure was about 33 per cent Tuesday.

BUT FEAST MUST GO ON

All Dressed Up and No Place to Get Tied

LONDON (AP) — Horace Davison and Jean Dixon dropped in on the local vicar in Nedworth, County Durham, again this week in a new effort to get married.

Their first one didn't work but they had a whale of a wedding reception for 80 guests.

Davison, 32, and Miss Dixon, 28, showed up Saturday at St. Nicholas Church, he in his best bib and tucker, she in a lacy bridal gown.

Vicar James Beattie said he was sorry but he had forgotten to put the thing down in his book and the banns had not been announced, so no wedding.

Halfway between embarrassment and anger, the bridal couple trooped out followed by their guests. They all repaired to Jean's home where Dad Edward Dixon manfully carried on.

Said her father: There should have been a wedding, everybody is dressed up for it and what's more important the wine is chilled.

So the party went on, Jean in her pink honeymoon dress and the almost-groom in his travelling suit.

The vicar meantime got busy on the banns and a special licence. At today's parley it was arranged to conduct the ceremony next Saturday.

The reception was just a rehearsal, the couple said.

Hats of the Edwardian era are back in style this fall and winter, influenced by the movie "My Fair Lady." The hat (left) is worn by Audrey Hepburn in the movie and the one (right) worn by a model is the new style. Velvet and feathers and plumes adorn the wide-brimmed hats. (CP photo.)

Opulence of Edwardian Days Now Revived Through Influence of 'My Fair Lady'

LONDON (CP)—Hats of the Edwardian era are back in style this fall and winter, influenced by the movie My Fair Lady.

For daytime wear women will not take to the overpowering hats of that period. But much of the ladylike elegance then prevailing is noticeable in this season's millinery.

For evening there is a definite Edwardian flavor. The little topknots are adorned with standup feathery quills, surrounded by small flowers. Or the elegance of the era is achieved in brimmed significance.

Velvet and feathers and plumes were typical of those days. Feathered hats were worn by active sports. The huge plumed cartwheel known as the Merry Widow hat was even worn by some with a riding habit.

Exaggerated trimming was quite usual for street wear. By 1907 theatres were forced to ask women in the audience to remove their hats. No one could see over or around them.

LADEN WITH FEATHERS

One "moderately large" hat was described by a 1908 fashion writer as being one foot high and four feet around the brim. All were extravagantly trimmed. Early in the century they were loaded with ostrich plumes, paradise and heron feathers, aigrettes and even whole small stuffed birds.

Many of the most beautiful birds could only be caught during nesting time. When the parent birds were killed, the young also died. Public indignation finally stopped the slaughter. The National Audubon Society was formed in the United States and a law was passed preventing the killing of native birds. It also forbade importing birds of paradise and aigrettes. Millinery then took to goose and chicken feathers.

The interest in velvets and plumes actually predates the Edwardian era. It started with Eugenie, the Spanish beauty who married Napoleon III in 1853. She rapidly became the leader of fashion. Eugenie was fond of a forward-dipping saucer with an ostrich plume curled across one cheek. The fashion carried over into the Edwardian period and was even revived after the Second World War.

In the 1880s Paris was designing such luscious millinery as a pale blue felt toque, silver banded, with blue ostrich plumes standing straight up from a bed of pink satin roses.

At the turn of the century, the pompadour hair styling elevated hats still higher. They perched straight up and, as before, the trimming stood straight up too. The Edwardian love of velvets and plumes was a carryover from the late Victorian days. Now hats took a sideways tilt, often with the underbrim covered with flowers. Then the floppy Gainborough hats of the 18th century were revived.

In 1908 the immense Merry Widow velvet cartwheels were the latest trend. They were named after the new and successful operetta by the Viennese composer Franz Lehar.

Then hats began to flatten out. Veils became important, especially to anchor a large hat when the wearer went bicycling or driving in an open automobile.

Only 10 years after the Edwardian era ended with King Edward's death in 1910 women began to cut their hair and the tight-fitting cloche hat was introduced.

A season or so ago a Lawrence of Arabia period prevailed. Hats were desert draped. Pith helmets were all the rage. Now another movie sets the style. This time it is a pretty mood, with velvet and feathers.

EDGED IN SEED PEARLS

Exquisite Bridal Gown of Nylon Chiffon

A floor-length gown of white nylon chiffon was worn by Mary Anne Fairbairn when she exchanged marriage vows with William Andrew Mason on Friday evening in St. John's Anglican Church.

The bodice of the gown featured a portrait neckline, highlighted with seed pearl embroidery, and lily point sleeves. French lace insets accented the full skirt. Her nylon chiffon veil misted to her fingertips from a coronet of seed pearls. Only jewelry was a crystal necklace and earrings, gifts of the groom. She carried a crescent bouquet of red roses.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fairbairn, 4291 Caen Road, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mason, 2100 Cadboro Bay Road. Mr. Fairbairn gave his daughter in marriage.

Bronze and champagne-toned chrysanthemums decorated the church for the ceremony at which Canon George Biddle officiated.

Mrs. T. Askey was matron of honor for her cousin. Senior bridesmaids were the Misses Heather Fairbairn, sister of the bride, and Linda Linton, the bride's cousin. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Pamela Fairbairn. All wore shell-pink brocade gowns and toning headpieces, edged with illusion veils. They carried bouquets of pink carnations and white feathered chrysanthemums.

Frocks of off-white brocade were worn by flower girls, Heather Hoff and Susanne Hawes. Both wore matching flower headbands and carried colonial bouquets.

Best man was Brian Sneade. Walt Slocum and Bill Hooson ushered guests to pews marked with pink and yellow roses and white satin ribbon.

A three-tier wedding cake, topped with bronze and gold chrysanthemums, centred the bride's table at a reception which followed in Holyrood House. Arrangements of toning chrysanthemums completed table decor.

Douglas Banks proposed the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip touring Vancouver Island, the bride donned a teal blue, French boucle wool suit. A black velvet pill box hat, edged with a tiny veil, and black accessories completed her ensemble. The couple will make their home in Esquimalt.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Dad's Presents Are A Problem No More!

By Penny Saver

Now is the time when all youngsters who have religiously saved their pennies go downtown to buy a present for Dad. He always seems to be the hardest person to buy a gift for, too. Well, Penny is going to solve that problem for the children, today. She has found a store which will dissolve the "Daddy's present dilemma," immediately.

If the man of the house is inclined to carpentry or woodworking, this store has just the items for his presents.

One of the handiest gifts for a part-time handyman is an angle saw. These have a stainless steel blade with "ever-sharp" teeth. The carved wooden handle is easily gripped for cutting and will not slip out of your hand accidently. A fitted wooden box with angled grooves is included for those hard-to-cut angles when refitting a rumpus room or den. Price is 99 cents.

For carrying in your glove compartment, Penny found a little screwdriver kit that contains drivers to fit any bolt. These are especially useful in a car or boat for fixing those annoying little rattles or repairing breakdowns.

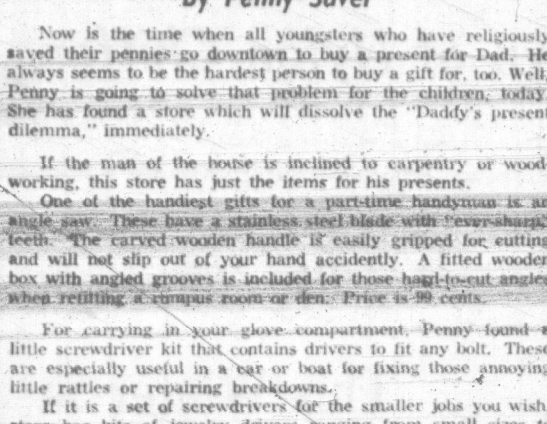

If it is a set of screwdrivers for the smaller jobs you wish, store has kits of jewelry drivers ranging from small sizes to almost infinitesimal points. The smaller sizes enable a man to repair articles with tiny screws. These cost 99 cents.

Also in this store, I found a set of chisels and punches—handy for the man of the house and for the women, too. Men will find them useful for fitting articles and Mom will like them for attaching dome fasteners when sewing. A kit sells for 99 cents.

Wood-carving is a hobby popular with many men. To increase pleasure in such a pastime, he should have the proper tools to work with, such as the ones Penny discovered, selling at 99 cents a kit. They have a polished wooden handle which is strong enough to resist the pressure involved. The stainless steel blades come in a variety of styles, such as the grooved style for wood-cuts or the flat blade for edging and finishing.

Call Penny at 382-3131 if these gifts interest you.

President, Mrs. R. S. Butt, welcomed Mrs. J. L. Brenz and Mrs. Doris Webb, who has recently come from Vernon where she was a member of the Kalamalka Toastmistress Club.

Mrs. Harry Winstone presented a lesson on "Press and Publicity." A letter of invitation to a ladies' night and Christmas party was read from the Thunderbird Toastmaster Club.

Mrs. Gordon Cook was awarded the oscar for her evaluation of the table topic. Toastmistress was Mrs. William Howe. She was introduced by Mrs. E. R. Ashbridge.

General evaluator, Mrs. H. L. Brigham was assisted by Mrs. Sybil McCulloch, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. George Love, Mrs. J. W. Gillis and Mrs. R. J. Doore.

Timer was Mrs. Margit Relling and grammarian, Mrs. H. J. Wende. Mrs. T. F. Howe gave the inspiration and Mrs. Peter Small, the closing thought. The vote of thanks was presented by Mrs. Frank Dearman.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Select Colors and Lighting Which Are Best for You

Yesterday I brought you some hints for the woman lecturer. Many of these ideas can be used in private life also.

Lowman

Lighting has such a drastic effect on the way we look. Direct overhead lighting is as aging in your home as it is on the lecture platform. It throws shadows on the face and brings out any lines or droops you may have. You probably look 10 years younger in bright daylight than when in this kind of light.

Also, artificial light drains the color out of your face and your makeup. Therefore, most women profit by the use of some rouge at night even though they do not use it during daytime hours. For the same reason night-time makeup should have more color in it. The powder should be pinker and the lipstick a bit more vivid.

The way colors reflect light is a real factor in how young or how old we appear. Light colors in clothes will light up any shadows in your face. Stand in front of a mirror when you are wearing a black or dark-colored dress. Look at yourself carefully. Now drape something white over your chest up to your neck. See the difference? The shadows have disappeared. This is one reason why a white collar on a black or navy blue dress is so flattering.

It is a wise woman who sees to it that the interior of her home is decorated with colors and lighting which highlight the color of her hair and eyes and complexion rather than make her appear older and less pretty.

Certain colors are especially becoming to the woman who has grey hair, depending on the color of her eyes. For instance, grey hair and blue eyes are flattered by blue, especially the grey-blues. However, dark blues are good, too. Dark greens and rosy pinks are also simpatico.

If a woman has grey hair and hazel eyes she will look especially well in beige, blueish-green, very dark grey and red.

If you have grey hair and brown eyes you will be lovely in deep yellow, orange, rosy-red or medium blue.

So select your colors and lighting carefully if you wish to look your best in that most important place of all—your home.

If you would like to have my free leaflet "Clothes to Fit Your Figure and Personality" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet 54 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

SEW SIMPLE WITH Eunice Farmer

Buttonholes Are Great —But Interfacing Pulls

Dear Eunice:

First, let me tell you that my buttonholes (the Farmer method) are the very greatest, they are not only easy to make, but wow! What an improvement over the ones I made the way I learned to do it in school. One problem, they seem to pull the interfacing too tight. What am I doing wrong?

Mrs. V. H.

Dear Mrs. V. H.

Thanks for the compliment, I'm always delighted to hear from you readers when you have tried one of my methods and like it. I have an idea that you didn't read your instructions carefully enough. You NEVER make your buttonholes through the interfacing, it's too heavy and will certainly pull the garment front too tight.

Fold the interfacing out of the way, baste a strip of organdy on the wrong side of the fabric and make your buttonholes. After they are completed, carefully cut away the organdy from around the buttonhole. Baste the interfacing in place again.

Carefully cut an oblong the size of your buttonhole through the interfacing, bring the welts through the interfacing and catch-stitch in place.

Invited guests included Mrs. A. Phillips, Mrs. E. Elwell, Mrs. F. Pitts, Mrs. G. McKenzie, Mrs. W. Rothery, Mrs. N. Patterson, Mrs. W. Christensen, Mrs. A. Bell, Mrs. R. E. Stearn and Miss Jane Edmison.

The Misses Jane and Nancy Edmison were co-hostesses at a dessert party held in the Mount Joy Avenue home of Mrs. H. M. Edmison. Mrs. A. W. Johns presided at the refreshment table that was centred with a small pink Christmas tree flanked by pink candles.

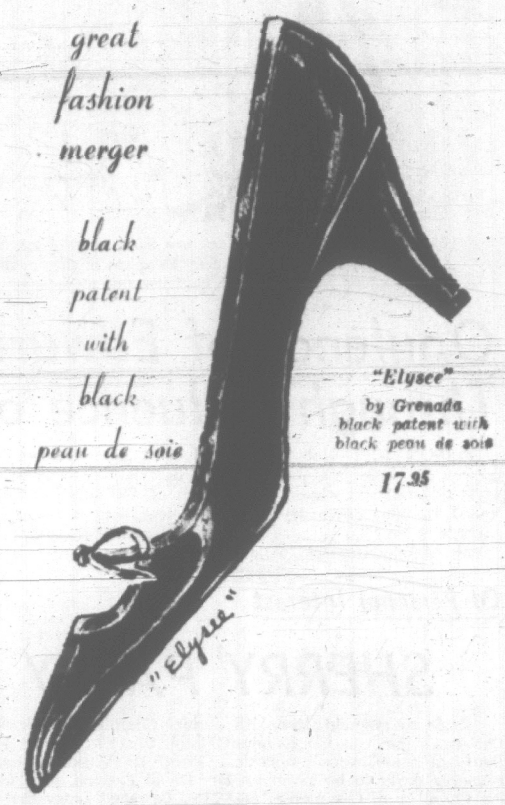

Gifts were contained in a pink and white decorated laundry basket.

DEAR ABBY . . .

You're Out!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee, 29, with two children and am considered attractive. About a year ago I spotted an eligible bachelor in town, so I moved into his apartment building hoping to make his acquaintance. I made his acquaintance all right, but that's about all. He says hello pleasantly when we meet in the hall, but I've never been able to get him into my apartment. I telephoned him one evening to tell him my bedroom window was stuck (it really was) so he sent a janitor up with a hammer. He's not going with anybody special and he's not a goody goody because I've seen him entertain women in his apartment. None of them is as attractive as I. How can I get him interested without having it look like I'm chasing him?

GETTING NOWHERE

DEAR GETTING: It's not easy to chase a man without doing what you're doing. Face it. He's not interested in you. And any more moves in his direction will make your scheming so obvious that he's apt to hide when he sees you coming.

DEAR ABBY: I was one of nine children in a very poor family so I had to quit school in the 6th grade. I always wanted to get a better education but I never had the chance. I feel so bad when my 8th grade son asks me to help him with his homework and I am too dumb to help him. My husband can't help him either, as he never got through the 7th grade himself. I asked around and found out there is a night school for grownups. I could go four nights a week from 6 to 8. My husband laughed at me and said he never heard of a 32-year-old woman going back to school. My heart is broken. Please tell me what to do.

WANT TO LEARN

DEAR WANTS: Your husband should quit laughing long enough to learn a few things. Adult education has been a lifesaver to many who have decided to complete their educations in their 40's, 50's and 60's. You are to be commended.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a very nosy neighborhood. Yesterday, the woman next door ran to her window the minute she heard a car pull up in front of my house. I saw her peeking through her Venetian blinds. And she saw me, too. Then she called me on the phone and said, "I didn't mean to be nosy. I just wanted to see who it was, and by the way, I didn't recognize him. Who WAS he?" Another neighbor stopped me in front of my house and said she had heard I was collecting welfare money and she was curious to know if I got it by the month or by the week and how much was it.

I have always minded my own business and have never seen the equal of such nerve. I am not able to cope with it. What do you suggest?

FLABBERGASTED

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: Go on minding your own business and ignore those who insist on helping you do it.

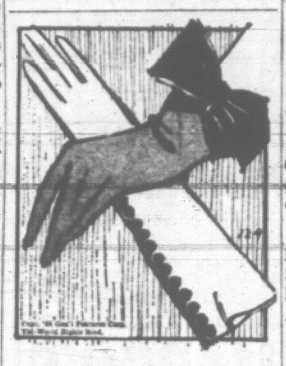

DEAR ABBY: How can my husband and I invite friends for dinner, but tactfully ask them not to bring their children? Abby, we love children, and have three of our own, but we never drag them along to the homes of friends when we are invited for dinner. Would it be rude if I said specifically please to leave their children at home?

Mrs. H. IN ONTARIO

DEAR MRS. H. If you don't want people who "bring their children," don't invite people who "bring their children."

TODAY'S RECIPE

PEACHY DOUGHNUT SQUARES

One can (1 lb. 13 oz.) cling peach slices, 1 pkge. (13¾ ozs.) hot roll mix, ¼ cup warm water, 1 egg, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, shortening or salad oil, sugar, 4 teaspoons cornstarch, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 4 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine.

Drain ½ cup syrup from peaches. In large warm bowl dissolve yeast from package, mix in water. Stir in ½ cup peach syrup and egg. Add dry mix and nutmeg. Mix well. Grease top of dough. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in size. Knead 8 to 10 times on floured board. Roll out to 18x9-inch rectangle. With sharp knife cut into 3-inch squares. Place squares on well floured cooky sheet. Let rise until doubled (about 45 minutes).

Heat shortening in large saucepan or electric skillet to 375 degrees. (Have at least a ½-inch depth fat.) Gently lift squares of dough from cooky sheet into hot fat. Do only a few at a time. Fry 1 to 1½ minutes on each side, turn only once. Drain on paper towels.

While still warm, roll in sugar. Drain peaches. Place in saucepan and mash. Stir in ¼ cup sugar, cornstarch, cinnamon and lemon rind. Cook and stir until mixture is thickened and bubbly; stir in lemon juice and butter. Cool.

Cut deep slit in one side of each doughnut; fill with peach mixture.

Makes 18 filled doughnuts.

Brazilian Woman Blinded In Teens Honored for Her Help to Portuguese

NEW YORK (UPI) — What seemed the end of the road for Mrs. Edward H. A. Nowill (CQ) turned out to be a new and living start for her—and for thousands of others like her.

Mrs. Nowill, a Brazilian, was blinded by a retinal hemorrhage when she was 17, but went on to pioneer the production of books in braille for the Portuguese. Now, she is president of the far-reaching foundation of books for the blind, a project unique in Latin-America and one which in the last five years has distributed 100,000 books printed in the blind's method of fingertip reading by raised dots.

Last week in New York, Mrs. Nowill, 45, and the mother of five children, was honored with a $1,000 cheque and a citation as the winner of the International Volunteer Award sponsored annually by Lane Bryant Inc. Cited for their work domestically were Mrs. Dorothy Y. Goble, a San Jose, Calif., woman honored for her efforts to provide education for Mexican migratory workers, and "Operation Crossroads Africa, Inc.," a New York group.

Crossroads runs a program of study and service to relate the youth of America and Africa at the student and teacher level.

Mrs. Nowill talked of the work of her foundation and of others assisting the blind worldwide during an interview before the presentation.

"There are an estimated 14 million blind in the world," she said. "My country alone has 350,000, a very high percentage. So many are blind because we do not have sufficient preventive measures.

"Two-thirds of all blindness could be prevented. And unless there are more programs for prevention the number soon will go to 20 million. The rate runs high in the underdeveloped countries partly because of poor nutrition, lack of vitamins, not enough trained eye specialists . . .

"I call this the unjust blindness."

Dorina de Goueva Nowill, a native of Sao Paulo, attended the city's normal school—the first blind student to be accepted by a Brazilian institute of higher learning. She graduated at the top of her class and went on then, via scholarships including one from the American Foundation for the Blind, to study education and rehabilitation at the Michigan State Normal School at Ypsilanti, and at Columbia University's Teachers' College.

In 1946 she and some friends organized the Brazilian Foundation and with a grant from the Kellogg Foundation to buy equipment began printing the first Braille books in Portuguese. Today the foundation —supported by private contributions and federal, state and municipal funds — provides books not only to all of Brazil but to Angola and Portugal.

It also spread its activities to include establishment of rehabilitation centres, study of methods of preventing blindness, training of more teachers, and campaign for legislation enabling the handicapped to work in civil service.

INEXPENSIVE GIFTS

Bleach Bottles Start New Fad

NEW YORK (UPI)—Take an empty chlorine bleach bottle, the plastic type, add some imagination and you're on the way to making simple and inexpensive Yule presents.

The bottle-craft fad first gained popularity when the Clorox bureau of bleaching information put out a kit showing how to make piggy banks out of the empty white bottles.

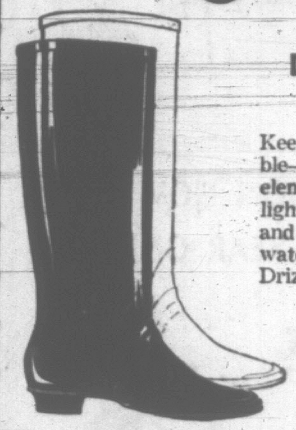

Shut-ins, sportsmen, gardeners, women's club program directors, amateur interior decorators and homemakers deluged the bureau with additional ideas.

In addition to the bottle and imagination, you need a sharp cutting knife or single-edged razor, grease pencil, India ink or one of the new felt-tipped marking pens.

Use the latter when painting designs. Enamel, spray, nail polish, swatches of wallpaper, sequins and felt scraps add decoration.

She Feels Canadians Make Poor Parents

Always a fighter for the rights of children, Jacoba Coster was instrumental in the formation of UNICEF—the United Nation's international children's emergency fund. (CP photo.)

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Jacoba Coster has been battling for the young for 30 years.

She helped save Jewish children from the Nazis during the Second World War.

She was instrumental in the formation of UNICEF—the UN International Children's Emergency Fund.

And she has long campaigned against corporal punishment for children.

Still remarkably active at 70, Mrs. Coster says there's a big job to be done in Canada, where, she insists, "parents are worse than anywhere else I've ever been."

"Canadian parents must learn to have respect for their children. These are small human beings but adults don't realize that, very often. It's shocking, some of the things I've seen and heard."

Wife, mother, psychologist, music and art teacher, sculptor, educationist and master linguist, this Dutch-born woman draws her convictions from the philosophies of Dr. Alfred Adler, the famed child psychologist, and Dr. Maria Montessori, the revolutionary educationist.

Her indefatigable career began when she left school at 18 with the intention of becoming either a concert pianist, or a recital singer. Instead, she married at 21 and travelled with her husband to India and other parts of Asia where he established plantations and factories.

HOMELAND OCCUPIED

In 1927 the Costers returned to The Netherlands. There she was elected a member of the Royal Society of Musicians, a member of the Federated Holland Societies of Artists, Sculptors and Engravers, and later, a member of the American Association of Adlerian Psychology, a branch of the International Association of Mental Health.

She founded a branch of the Society of Philosophy and Psychology in Bussum and Hilversum, and took part in the founding of schools and branches in the Montessori movement.

During this period Mrs. Coster translated eight philosophical books from English and German into Dutch. She also speaks Malay and French.

Actively interested in education trends in Holland, where use of the strap in schools has been outlawed for more than a century, she began her own observation studies in schools founded by Dr. Montessori, in which non-punitive methods are employed to discipline children.

During the war she founded the Children's Aid Society for Foreign Children—an extension of the Kindercomite she created in 1936—and smuggled Jewish children to relatives and foster families in England and North Africa after her homeland was overrun by the Nazis.

MOVED TO CANADA

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Coster moved to Canada in 1958 to join her two children.

Today, from her home near the Lake Huron shore, she is still working for the young—attempting to educate parents in humanitarian methods of rearing children.

She is the organizer of activities for the Canadian Mental Health Association in Sarnia and district and advises on the benefits of the Adlerian and Montessori systems of raising and educating children.

Mrs. Coster has strong opinions on how youngsters should be treated.

"Psychiatrists should keep their hands off children; shouldn't be allowed near them. Very often they advise parents, or attempt to help a child, and nothing but harm comes from it."

A child has many "almost instinctive needs" that adults unthinkingly curb, she says.

"Most parents will tell their children not to touch things, at the dinner table or elsewhere, but this is very wrong. To a small child the sense of touch is that child's way of learning about the world. He should be allowed to sense everything . . ."

Mrs. Coster says that although Canadians fought for freedom in two wars and abhor authoritative, dictatorial government, "they raise their children in an authoritative, dictatorial educational system in their private homes and in schools."

"How many destructive character traits can develop in the minds of children in the cases of authoritative mishandling is shown by the records of juvenile delinquency."

She uses her knowledge of music and art to entertain the children she teaches every week, helping in "this reality of creation, observable all around, in nature, in human beings, in everything alive."

She has conducted a course in modelling and sculpture for the extension departments of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and recently set up a painting group for some 60 acquaintances who now share in those rare moments of relaxation when she sits before an easel and paints.

The meeting was held in the social suite and chaired by Mrs. F. G. Matkin, president. Annual reports were presented and new business discussed. Luncheon was served in the form of a box social. A program of community carol singing followed the meeting.

Rector Opens Salt Spring Bazaar

Proceeds amounted to more than $300 when the Salt Spring Island Anglican Woman's Auxiliary held a Christmas bazaar in St. George's parish hall, Ganges.

The hall was decorated in a seasonal theme for the affair that was opened by the rector, Dr. R. B. Horsefield. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Horsefield and auxiliary president, Mrs. E. Worthington. Both were presented with bouquets of chrysanthemums.

Mrs. George Laundry was general convener and Mrs. William Palmer and Mrs. H. Ashby were in charge of the tea room.

An arrangement of yellow and white chrysanthemums, flanked by white candles, centred the refreshment table at which Mrs. Alan D. Hedger, Mrs. Cecil Springford, Mrs. W. Y. Stewart, Mrs. H. T. Minchin and Mrs. V. C. Best presided.

Serviteurs were Mrs. Walter Stone, Mrs. R. T. Meyer, the Misses Margaret Motherwell and Patty Wilson.

In charge of the needlework stall were Mrs. A. W. Barber and Mrs. V. L. Jackson; miscellaneous, members of the Evening Branch of the auxiliary who included Dr. Marjorie Jansch, Mrs. A. K. Wilson, Mrs. Nelson Warren, Mrs. Denis Seward, Mrs. E. H. Gear and Mrs. G. A. Spencer; tea tickets, Mrs. N. A. Howland, and contests, Mrs. Harold Price and Miss Elaine Young.

It's Cover Up 'Down Under'

MELBOURNE (CP) — Australia's notoriously fickle summer has arrived with an unexpected storm — a blast from angry matrons protesting against scanty bathing costumes on Melbourne's bayside beaches.

The first thunderclaps came from an organization representing 18,000 Roman Catholic mothers who asked 19 councils controlling various city and nearby beaches to ban bikinis.

Since then the controversy has been blowing hot and cold as the women, young and old, have their say and the men, for the most part, keep a respectful silence.

The first hot weekend brought Melbourne residents flocking to the beaches in the thousands. Monday had hardly arrived before the Victorian Federation of Catholic Mothers' Clubs demanded: "We want bikinis banned from our beaches to protect the morals of our youth."

'DANDY PICTURE,' SAYS JOB OFFICIAL

Economy Rolls Merrily Along

DUNCAN — Business is really booming in the Cowichan Valley.

Despite worsening weather "it's a dandy picture," says local National Employment Service manager Robert S. Robinson.

"Employment conditions are better than they've ever been at this time of year."

Major sawmills in the area maintained a high level of production.

HIRING FOR MILL

And recruiting will start soon for men to man the new $18,000,000 extension to the Crofton mill.

Completion date is scheduled for the spring.

Focal area of construction in the district is the Crofton complex of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Some 275 workers are employed on the site.

SPRING FINISH

Thirteen contractors are engaged in construction and installation of machinery at Kraft Paper Mill due for completion early spring.

Work is also proceeding on the $20,000,000 expansion to the newsprint mill, expected to be in production by 1957.

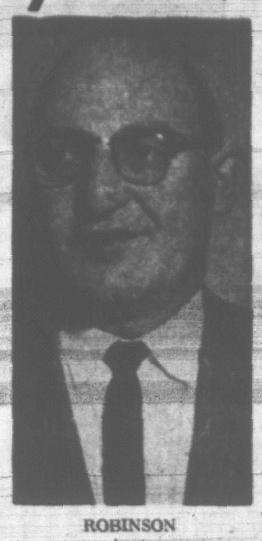

Business in the retail trade has increased, providing an unprecedented level of employment in the district.

Vacancies for sales personnel are few and there is a continuing surplus of inexperienced sales people, Mr. Robinson said.

Even so the number of unemployed men rose by only 50 to 289 and women from 180 to 247.

Good progress has been made with the schools in regard to potential drop-outs.

The special services officer of NES has helped several youths return to school.

NANAIMO (CP) — Nanaimo Hospital Society will meet Jan. 7 to vote on re-affirmation of a decision made last month to tear down the vacant Nanaimo General Hospital building.

The society approved demolition last month, but some members are now petitioning the health department to retain the building.

UBC AYRSHIRE TOP PRODUCER

DUNCAN — Oyster River Farm, owned by University of British Columbia, has been awarded the Stevenson Trophy for the higest producing Ayrshire cow on Vancouver Island.

The cow, Ubyssey Duke Francis, gave 17,747 pounds of milk and 683 pounds of butterfat in 305 days.

Runners-up were Stratford's Pollie, owned by Donald C. Morton; Oakridge Royal Jo, J. A. N. Balme, and Sacille Daisy 5th, also owned by Mr. Balme.

During presentation ceremonies at the Silver Bridge Inn here it was announced the 166 Ayrshire cows on V.I. had given 120 per cent more of breed class average during the year, an increase of 34 over last year.

This makes an increase of 73 per cent in two years.

ALL NANAIMO DENTISTS SUPPORT FLUORIDATION

NANAIMO (CP)—Dr. J. J. Eakins says that all 13 dentists in Nanaimo are in favor of fluoridation of the city's water supply as a means of combatting tooth decay.

Dr. Eakins told city council that one part of fluoride in each 1,000,000 parts of water would "reduce the rate of dental decay by approximately two-thirds."

He also said that a cost of about 10 cents per person per year, a saving of $6 out of every $10 spent would result.

Meanwhile, a newspaper survey disclosed that 17 Nanaimo doctors had sent almost 2,000 letters to patients urging a "yes" vote for fluoridation on Saturday.

Minister's Aid Requested In Bus Fight

PORT ALBERNI—Irate parents here will seek the help of Education Minister Peterson in their bid to lay on a school bus.

A telegram was sent to the minister today asking him to order an investigation of the problem.

The parents have tried several times to persuade Alberni District school board to provide a bus for the 1½-mile trip from Arrowsmith Heights to school.

At present, 28 children have to walk the distance each day along a lonely, unlit road.

Earlier, school board chairman James Macfie said trustees would not be swayed by Victoria pressure.

AWAY FROM SCHOOL

To back up their protest, parents have been keeping their children away from school.

This week they allowed them to return for Christmas examinations.

They are hoping to be able to muster enough cars to provide transport each day to and from school.

A meeting between parents and board members Monday ended in deadlock.

Mr. Masfie pointed out eight other areas in Alberni where children thave to walk from 8 miles to 2.3 miles to school.

All would be asking for buses if this one was granted, he claimed.

A parents' representative said there had been four complaints of molesting of children in the area since 1961.

Blood Donors Holding Back

QUALICUM BEACH — Are residents here a bloodless lot? The Red Cross is beginning to think so.

At a recent blood donor clinic in the area only 87 pints were given — insufficient to meet the district's needs.

Last year 93 pints were given and the year before 127.

It was hoped to collect around 200 pints this year.

REEVE TELLS ELECTION MEETING

Pay Increase Next Year For C. Saanich Council

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Members of Central Saanich council will receive a salary increase next year.

Reeve R. Gordon Lee told an all-candidate meeting at the Brentwood Women's Institute Hall Tuesday that indemnities are far too small for the work and time spent on municipal business.

The reeve receives $700 a year and councillors $300.

Under the Municipal Act, maximum honorarium allowed members of council serving a municipality the size of Central Saanich is $2,000 for reeve and $700 for councillors.

NOT MAXIMUM

But the reeve said it is not the intention of council to claim the maximum.

"I feel they are entitled to some increase," he said. "Municipal business is increasing every year. Councillors don't get their gasoline and oil free."

The reeve also said street lighting in the municipality will be improved next year under a new B.C. Hydro street lighting financing plan.

TOO HIGH

"We deferred our street lighting program this year because costs to install lights were too high," he said.

He said B.C. Hydro is expected to come up with a scheme early next year whereby it would pay costs for installing street lights.

"Under the program we would not be involved in any capital expenditures," he explained. "But we would pay for the lights on a rental basis."

Some 60 residents attended the meeting to hear five candidates contesting three council seats. Three are incumbents. There were no controversial issues.

Coun. T. G. Michell, who is serving as chairman of the public works committee, said the municipality would like to do more to improve its road system, but this would involve considerable money.

56 MILES

"We can only do so much at a time without boosting taxes," he said. "We have 56 miles of road to maintain."

He said improvements to three roads in the Brentwood area have been delayed because within the next two or three years residents of the district may be called upon to vote on a sewer scheme.

"If we had gone ahead with the road work and residents later approved a sewer scheme, it would mean tearing them up again," he explained.

Mrs. Margaret Salt, running for the first time for a council seat, said if elected she would give full time to municipal business.

FULL TIME

"I'm retired now and can give all my time to municipal business," she said.

Coun. Albert Vickers said he would like to see council approve a long-range road building program.

"I realize our budget is limited for this purpose," he said. "But I feel we should have a program to determine what roads should receive priority and the amount of improvements to be carried out annually."

Coun. A. K. Hemstreet, chairman of the parks committee, said he would continue to do all he could to improve municipal parks.

"We have done many improvements in the past four years," he said, "but there is still lots to be done."

Peter P. Lazarz, the fifth candidate, returned from a business trip to Vancouver too late to attend the meeting.

Gov't Asked To Buy E & N Timberlands

COURTENAY (CP)—E. Davie Fulton has urged the B.C. government to buy out timber resources of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway on Vancouver Island to give small loggers a chance to cut.

The E&N, a branch of Canadian Pacific Railways, last month sold 229,000 acres of timber to two large timber companies for an estimated $50,000,000.

It still holds rights to some 1,000,000 acres of land on the Island, at least half of which contains valuable timber.

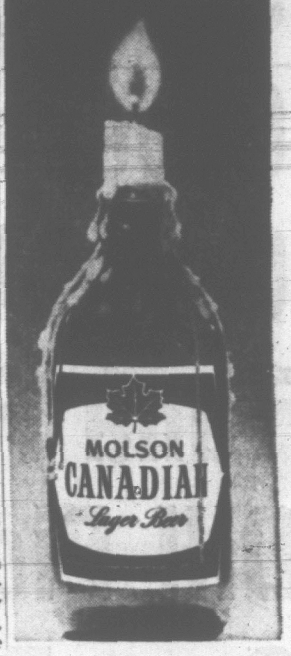

The provincial Conservative leader suggested in a speech here that the government establish a sustained yield unit on the railway lands to allow small loggers as well as large firms to bid for timber sales.

Two of the largest firms in the province, MacMillan, Bloedel & Powell River Company and Crown Zellerbach Limited, combined for the E&N purchase last month.

"There is no criticism of the actions of the two big companies," said Mr. Fulton.

SAANICH CANDIDATES' THEME:

Careful Planning, Minimum Taxes

By LESLIE MILLIN

Fifteen candidates for Saanich office spoke to a public meeting Tuesday night that was much quieter than the election meetings that rocked the municipality two months ago.

On the stage at Mt. View High School were 13 council candidates and two School District 63 trustee hopefuls.

They are scrambling for three council seats and one trustee's job, up for election on Saturday.

Three of the council candidates and trustee Reg Sinkinson are incumbents.

Five of the challengers for council also ran in the colorful October by-election when the reeveship and one council seat were open.

Almost all candidates stressed the need for careful planning, orderly growth, and minimum taxes in Saanich.

Incumbents Joseph Casey, Leslie Passmore and Harold Todd defended the progress made by council.

They pointed to rapid strides in the area of public works, but also mentioned the problems of keeping up with a rapidly expanding population.

"SQUARE DEAL"

Coun. Casey and Coun. Passmore told the 110-member audience about their affiliation with the "old guard" on council.

"I happen to be the oldest of the old guard," said Coun. Passmore.

"I've been on council for 22 years. For 22 years I've had the confidence of the ratepayers, and I've always tried to get them a square deal."

"We have been called the old guard," said Coun. Casey.

"We have guarded the rights of the people of Saanich. Two years ago, we fought against amalgamation, and thank God we were successful."

Biggest challenge to the old guard came from two young educators, candidates Pat Thomas and Alan Newberry.

"I am not happy with the leadership that our council has shown," said Mr. Newberry.

He recommended a 10-point program that included appointment of a municipal co-ordinator for Saanich, a speed-up in public works, and a system of tax incentives for home improvements.

Mr. Thomas said it is time Saanich "moved out from behind the walls."

He said it is time Saanich stopped guarding and started moving forward.

Mr. Thomas supported regional planning, and pressure on the provincial government for a relocated, enlarged Pat Bay Highway.

Addressing his first election campaign meeting was bus driver David Dickinson.

He said the controversial fire chief appointment first interested him in municipal politics, and said his 24 years experience with the transit system would be helpful when council has to face the problem of having the bus service handed over.

WISE SPENDING

Sandy Noel, also a newcomer, promised to fight for the best spending of the tax dollar.

Ed Lum, twice-defeated in tries for the reeveship, made a brief speech.

He stressed the need for a businesslike approach to municipal government, a stepped-up planning program, and a recreation centre as a centennial project.

Mr. Lum said the way to obtain a better Pat Bay Highway and liquor stores for Saanich "is to sit down with the parties concerned and talk it out."

Don Mathison pointed to the 180 accidents and eight deaths this year on the Pat Bay Highway, and said a new highway is needed before any more Saanich citizens commit "Swartzicide" on the "Swartz Bay Highway."

Aubrey Squire argued for the instigation of a regional hospital board, and said Saanich council has been remiss in failing to apply pressure for a liquor store.

Erling Olson said he favors encouraging industry in Saanich to relieve the tax burden on homeowners.

City fireman Ed Ball said he favors more recreational facilities for Saanich, and the floodlighting of one of the parks for winter juvenile sport.

Harry Shergold said he has two years' experience with the Saanich advisory planning commission.

He gave guarded approval to the idea of the proposed joint services board, and said having more industry in Saanich might not necessarily be any tax boon.

Trustee Reg Sinkinson stood on his 14-year record with School District 63.

He said he had served the ratepayers well, and would continue to do so.

Mrs. Nora Lindsay, a housewife making her first try for office, felt long-range planning and long-range financing for schools, coupled with standardized plans, would be a more sensible approach to financial problems.

She said ratepayers are losing confidence in the school board because they feel they are not getting full value for their money.

TAYLOR PLAN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Malcolm Taylor, president of the University of Victoria, said Tuesday that some duplication of courses is necessary in new universities located near older and larger institutions.

"But we have to get rid of the old idea that every university must offer every field . . ." he told a group at the University of British Columbia's faculty club Tuesday night.

He said that the newer, smaller universities have a difficult problem creating individuality when they are located near larger universities.

However, he said the new universities can "build a nutritious intellectual menu out of left-overs.

"We prefer, in Victoria, to be selective and in the areas we have selected, to be extraordinarily good."

Dr. Taylor is former principal of the University of Alberta, Calgary.

Goat Club Trophies Presented

Five members of the North and South Saanich 4-H Goat Clubs were awarded achievement trophies at a joint annual dinner held in Brentwood United Church recently.

The trophies are awarded to members who receive the highest marks in club activities during the year.

Winner of the senior achievement trophy in the North Saanich club was Margaret Lord. Kathryn Logan received the junior award.

In the South Club, Denise Bailey took the senior trophy; Lindsay Bowen, the intermediate; and Bill Bailey, the junior.

About 75 persons attended the meeting, including several former members of the executive of the Lower Vancouver branch of the Goat Breeders' Association of B.C. who were instrumental in starting the first goat club in Saanich.

Awards and trophies won by members at agricultural fairs and inter-club competitions during the year were presented to the winners by Ken Jameson of Duncan, district agriculturist for the B.C. Department of Agriculture.

Sieg. Peterson, B.C. supervisor of 4-H clubs, was also present.

ICE CAPADES DEBUT will be made here Dec. 16 by Gabrielle Weidert of Garmisch, Germany, when she performs in Pink Champagne solo at Memorial Arena.

Cole Porter Gets Ice Capade Salute

Wander into any music store and head for the counter that holds the anthologies of popular composers. You'll find at least six different ones devoted to the life and musical outpourings of the late Cole Porter, one of the most prolific writers of our time.

Appropriately, the 1965 Ice Capades, playing Dec. 16 to 19 this month at the Memorial Arena, honors the late music man in one of their six production numbers "A Salute to Cole Porter."

While Porter's music was both a challenge and an inspiration for choreographer Ron Fletcher, it also proved to be a natural for Ice Capades to translate into a colorful presentation on ice. The choice of music, varied in rhythm and musical mood, seemed to dictate the course of the number.

Porter's music runs a lively gamut in tempo and mood from international airs such as I Love Paris and Wunderbar to homey American ballads and popular jazz.

Silver brocade costumes, trimmed in orange ermine is the costume theme, and stars in the number are adagio team the Maxfields and Norway's Per Larsen. Also in the number, a newcomer to Ice Capades and Victoria audiences, is Gabrielle Weidert of Garmisch, Germany.

The 42-member skating ballet and soloists skate to such Porter standards as I've Got You Under My Skin, C'est Magnifique, I Love You and My Heart Belongs to Daddy, plus many more Porter melodies.

Other production numbers in the 25th anniversary edition of Ice Capades are Viva Italia, Kiddie Circus, Masquerade, Annapolettes and Hallelujah plus 20 specialty acts. The show plays five performances beginning Dec. 16, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m., and a matinee on Saturday at 2 p.m. Advance tickets are on sale at the Hudson's Bay Company and the Arena.

'Eyesore' Villages Like Move

NATAL, B.C. (CP)—Village Commissioner Siro Cimolini says the people of Natal like the idea of moving out.

They have given an enthusiastic reception to a government plan to relocate them at Sparwood, 3½ miles away.

The proposal is to move Natal, Michel and Middleton—mining communities with a combined population of about 1,300 — off trans-provincial highway No. 3 to give a better impression to tourists entering British Columbia.

Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell has called them an eyesore. Tiny homes blackened by dust from the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company line the highway.

Natal residents own their property and homes. Middleton and Michel are company towns.

Student Jailed On Drug Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—A magistrate sent a young writer and a university honors student to jail Tuesday, warning that the court has a duty to stop "this marijuana kick with the so-called intellectual set."

"A number of young people recently charged with possession of marijuana have received suspended sentences," said Magistrate Les Bewley.

"But this will no longer be the case.

"With more than 10,000 students at the University of B.C., most of them outside parental supervision, it is up to the court to protect the students and society."

The outspoken magistrate gave Barbara Anne Budd, 21-year-old UBC English student, six months for possession of marijuana. She pleaded not guilty, but a detective said he found marijuana in her purse.

Martin Jensen, a 24-year-old writer, was given a year when he pleaded guilty to possessing heroin and will serve a concurrent six-month term for possessing marijuana.

Jensen and Miss Budd shared a house with nine other occupants. She denied a suggestion that it was a "Beatnik house."

FIGHT FOR TOURISTS

Classless Russ Ship Has Capitalist Look

By EDDIE GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union's first effort at building a luxury liner lay anchored here Tuesday—19,860 tons of a Russian concept of capitalist comfort.

"It's a classless ship," said Capt. Mikhail Grigorov.

But some of the cabins are more classless than others.

"There are differences between cabins, and there are differences in prices," said the captain.

The Ivan Franko — spearhead of a methodical assault on the tourist market—brought 642 Soviet tourists on its maiden voyage.

"On this and other luxury Soviet ships," Capt. Grigorov went on, "every passenger will enjoy Russian hospitality—a warm reception from the hearts of the Russian people."

The Ivan Franko has a lot of the trappings of capitalism all right.

A music salon with a palm court orchestra.

A chrome-decorated hall labelled in Russian and English "gambling machines."

A steam-heated swimming pool.

Coalition Likely To Bump Jagan

BURNHAM
. . . new premier?

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

GEORGETOWN (AP)—A pro-Western coalition government appears in prospect for British Guiana.

With returns nearly complete from Monday's national election, Marxist Premier Cheddi Jagan had the most votes, but he failed to win the majority necessary to retain control of the National Assembly.

Returns representing 91 per cent of the vote gave Jagan's People's Progressive party 103,222 votes. Opposition Leader Forbes Burnham's People's National Congress 87,448, and industrialist Peter Daguiar's United Force 20,846.

On this basis, Jagan's party will get 24 seats, Burnham's 22, and Daguiar's six or seven. The opposition parties thus could outvote Jagan's forces.

Governor Sir Richard Luyt is expected to call on Burnham, a pro-Western socialist, to form a coalition government from his party and the United Force.

CLASHES CLAIM 167

Burnham, 41, a massively built Negro lawyer, has his chief strength among the Negro population. Jagan's strength is among the colony's East Indians, who outnumber the Negroes two to one. Terrorism and clashes between the two races during the last year have taken 167 lives.

Jagan's failure to retain the legislative majority he won in 1961 resulted from a new system of proportional representation. With the assembly's seats allocated according to the total vote won by each party, he needed more than half the total vote to get a majority of the 53 assembly seats.

Jagan, 46, is a U.S.-educated dentist of East Indian ancestry. His wife, Mrs. Janet Rosenberg Jagan, is a native of Chicago who belonged to the Communist Youth League during her student days in Illinois.

U.S. officials feared the Castro-admiring Jagan would turn British Guiana into another Cuba once it gained independence.

Britain has postponed any decision on independence, and the past year's upsurge of racial strife make the prospects for an end to British rule uncertain.

FOUR RUN

Vancouver To Select Mayor

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 240,000 voters are eligible to go to the polls today to elect 16 civic officials including a mayor and six aldermen.

City officials were forcasting a record turnout of about 130,000 voters—about 25,000 more voters than the record-set two years ago.

Mayor William Rathie is seeking a second term in office. He is opposed by Alderman Tom Alsbury, a former mayor, and Alderman Marianne Linnell, who is hoping to become Vancouver's first woman mayor. Fourth mayoralty candidate is William Shenton.

Another 41 candidates are seeking six council seats, five school trustees and four park commission vacancies.

About 121,000 property owners are eligible to vote on a variety of money bylaws and plebiscites. These include the city's proposed five year development plan and an $8,000,000 coliseum.

The coliseum bylaw seeks ratepayer permission to turn over a $2,000,000 piece of downtown porperty to Toronto Maple Leafs who have promised to build a coliseum on it.

The weatherman was forecasting cloudy skies with sunny periods for today.

Miners End Strike

GLAMORGAN, Wales (Reuters)—A stay-down strike of 43 miners in the 1,000-foot-deep Merthyr Vale coal mine ended here Tuesday. The men, down for 20 hours, were protesting working conditions.

NOVA SCOTIA TRIP LEAVES CUBANS COLD

HALIFAX (CP) — Eighteen blanket-wrapped Cuban fishermen and 15 shivering Japanese fishermen - instructors arrived here Tuesday aboard a Cuban-owned fishing vessel which has no heating system.

The 387-ton, white-painted Aguja, built in Japan in 1962 and one of eight such trawlers manned by mixed crews under Cuban ownership, berthed to unload 60 tons of frozen crayfield tails. The tails will be flown to France as Christmas delicacies.

"She is a nice boat," Capt. Goichi Mikimi said. "The only fault with her—no heat. She was built to fish in tropical waters but here we are in Nova Scotia."

Ex-Fighter Hears Death Sentence

EDMONTON (CP) — Thomas Louis Wolfson, 44, a burly former wrestler, was convicted Tuesday in Alberta Supreme Court of capital murder and sentenced by Mr. Justice Neil Primrose to be hanged Feb. 24.

The verdict will be automatically appealed.

Wolfson, who suffered a heart condition and underwent psychiatric treatment while waiting trial, was reported to have lost about 40 pounds. He was charged in the July 24 fatal shooting of Peter Chamczuk, 34, of Edmonton. Chamczuk's body was found in a gravel pit just north of Wetaskiwin, 40 miles south of Edmonton.

A six-man jury deliberated one hour after a two-day trial before returning its verdict. It made no recommendation for mercy.

Two police witnesses testified during the trial that Wolfson told them he had planned a week to kill someone—"it didn't matter who it was."

A defence psychiatrist said Wolfson told him that he knew God didn't want him to be on earth any more. Therefore, he had decided to shoot someone and face execution for it because he was afraid to commit suicide.

'ANGELS COULDN'T DO JOB'

By ROBIN MANNOCK

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) Some came for adventure and some for pay. Some came for a chance to serve the cause of a peaceful Africa, as they see it.

These are the men the world calls Premier Moise Tshombe's "white mercenaries" — several hundred volunteers spearheading Tshombe's drive against the rebels in The Congo.

Although most don't speak a word of French, they prefer to be called by the term Les Mercenaries—it seems to add class to their trade.

What are they like?

Take Lieut. Jeremy Spencer, 25, a scion of a rich north of England family.

Pay meant next to nothing to him: Adventure did and he died with a rebel bullet in his head as he sat in the front line in a deckchair, languidly directing the battle with a sword.

Grizzled and tattooed veterans of many wars, whose every second word is a curse, still go misty-eyed when they talk of him.

They miss the way this tall, slender Englishman gave orders. They miss, above all, his ice-cold nonchalance in the face of danger.

SOME DISAPPROVED

Yet there were groans of disapproval when he was first promoted to lieutenant at the mercenary training base at Kamina in North Katanga province. Among many who had joined because they were civilian misfits, Spencer seemed the most misfit of all.

The last month of fighting their way 600 miles to Stanleyville, capital of the rebel Congolese People's Republic, has thinned mercenary ranks down to a lean, mean residue.

For almost every one of the 200 or so soldiers from South Africa or Rhodesia still in The Congo, a would-be mercenary fighter has been put aboard a south-bound plane for home or has deserted without waiting for his pay.

"There were drunks, drug addicts, coffee shop cowboys, homosexuals and cowards," says Maj. Michael Hoare, the tough chief of Tshombe's English-speaking men.

There still are some unlovely specimens among his men: Killers of unarmed civilians and looters.

"Let's face it," says Hoare. "If we had only hired angels, we'd have never got together the labor force needed for this sort of job."

Hoare, 44, a veteran of war behind the Japanese lines in Burma and in Tshombe's once-secessionist state of Katanga, has little more than his own personality to back up his orders. The Congolese army's disciplinary code is almost non-existent.

ANSWERS WITH FISTS

Said Lieut. John Peters, a former British paratrooper from Leeds: "If any of my men answers back, I take him round the corner and use my fists."

Peters is second in command of 57 commandos, a collection of near-throwouts who these days usually get chosen as the spearhead on dangerous missions because of their cool discipline under fire.

Their commander, Capt. Ian Gordon, a Briton who now lives in Johannesburg, South Africa, never raises his soft voice. His men will follow him, as another officer says, "through the front door of hell and out the back way."

Gordon, like several of Hoare's most trusted officers, fought for Tshombe in his secessionist days. They formed the small nucleus who recruited the others through advertisements in South African and Rhodesian newspapers.

Men flocked to sign on for base pay of £130 ($390) a month as volunteers. Officers earn up to three times more. Mercenaries also are paid about $16 a day danger money when they are in battle.

Only half of their pay is in foreign currency sent to their banks at home. The rest is paid in Congolese francs which cannot be taken out of the country.

GIVEN TWO WEEKS' LEAVE

Each man is entitled to two weeks' paid home leave at the end of his six-month contract.

Each man also has a life insurance policy for $20,000 payable to his next-of-kin. Nearly 20 families of Hoare's men already have qualified.

For almost three months, Hoare's men were paid nothing. A political battle between the South Africans and Belgian army technical assistance officers held up the money until the eve of the recent battle for rebel-held Stanleyville.

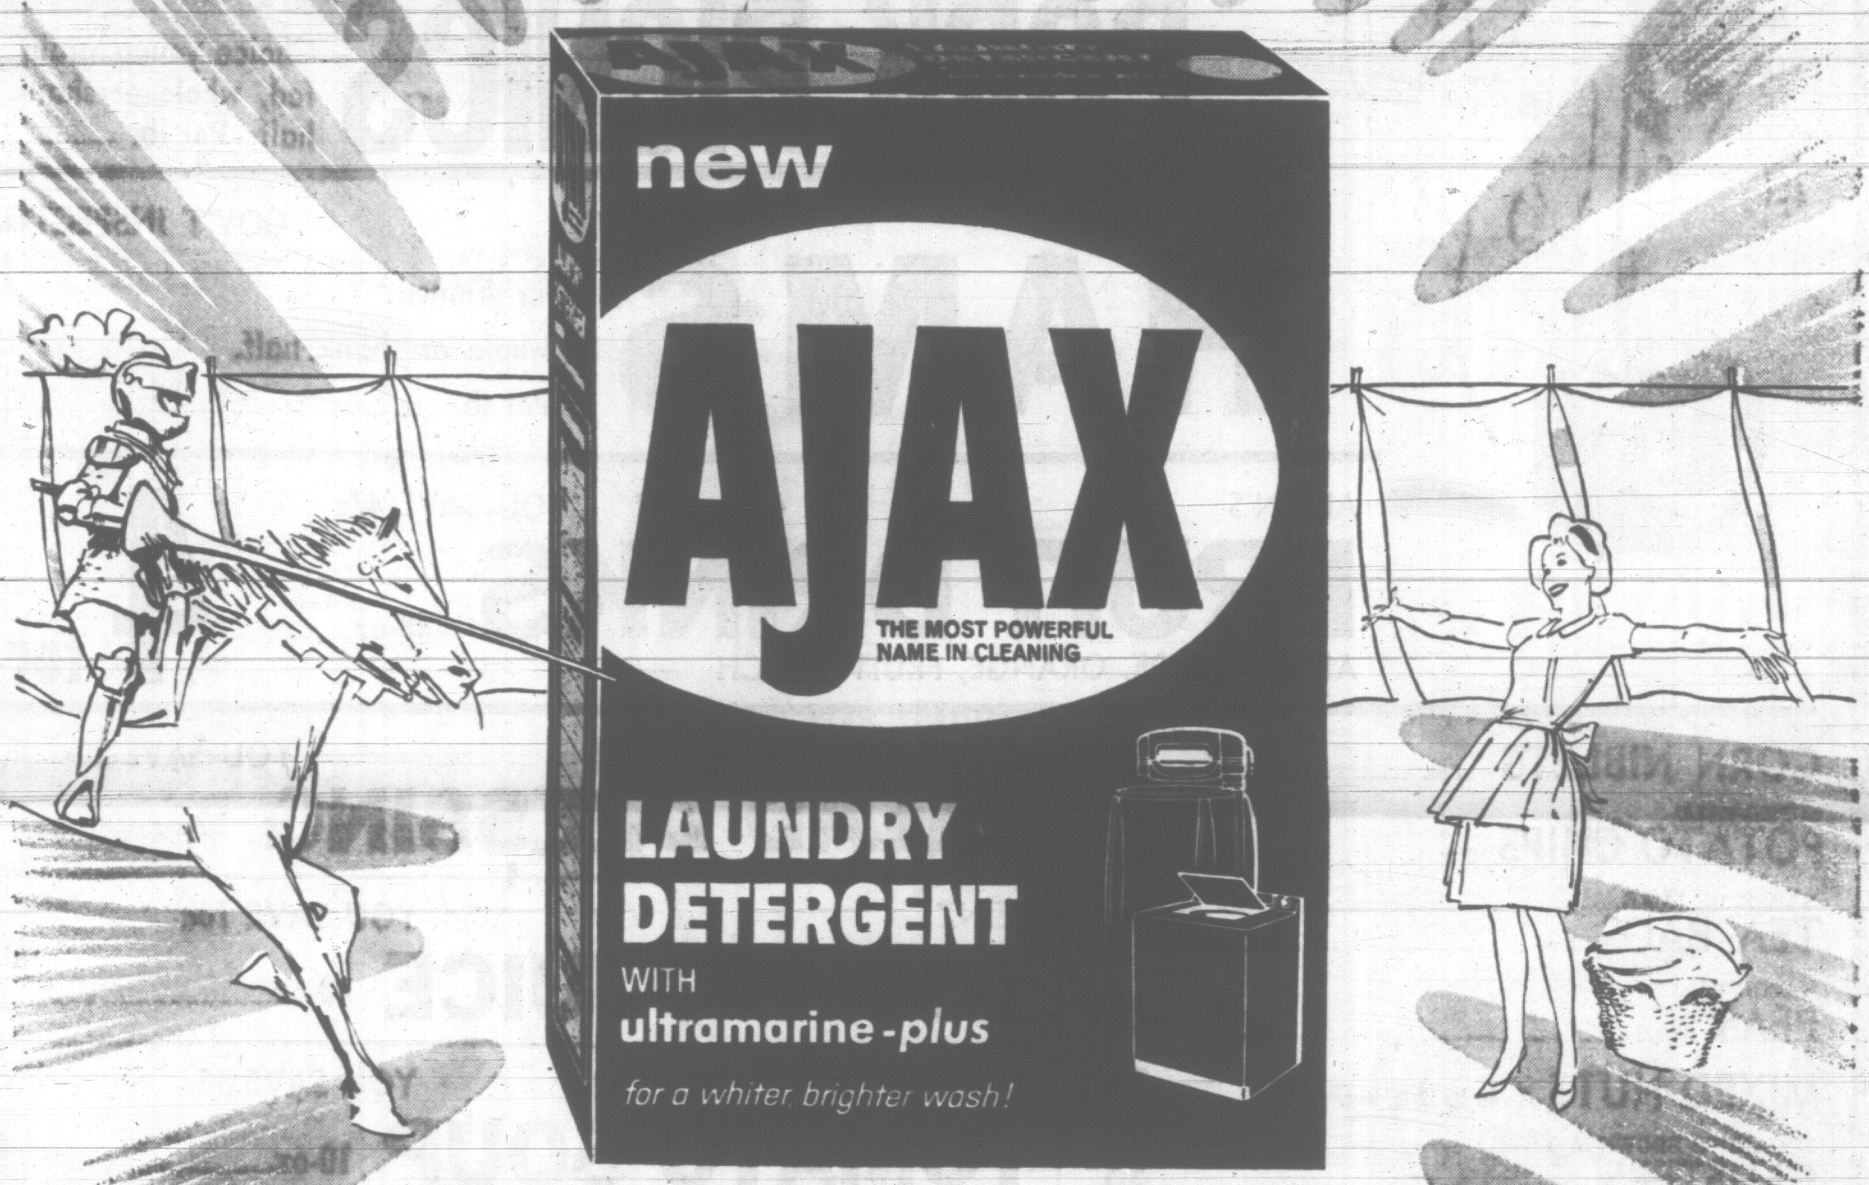

Nearly 40 men deserted in disgust. To earn their pay, the white men must brave not only the rebels but also a frightening lack of doctoring if they are wounded or fall sick.

LONDON (Reuters) — Princess Margaret has declined an invitation to visit Canada next March in time for the 25th anniversary celebrations of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, her press secretary, Maj. John Griffin, said Tuesday.

Most Candidates Like Joint Services Idea

THE QUESTION of who should speak first and last is always a touchy subject with election candidates. A hat did the trick in this case. It was used by Linda Gower, Miss Victoria, to decide the order of priority of speakers at a civic forum to be held at Sir James Douglas auditorium tonight at 7:30. Holding the hat is Digby Kier, co-chairman of the Jaycee economic affairs committee. There will be nine candidates at the meeting. (Times photo.)

Bennett Sees Approval Soon For B.C. Bank

Premier Bennett, Tuesday, indicated private talks he had in Ottawa with a number of senators made him optimistic that the Bank of B.C. charter will be approved next week.

The premier was interviewed in Vancouver after his return from the east.

"We agreed not to sell any shares in the bank until the (federal) Bank Act is revised as it is every 10 years," he said. "I expect this likely will come this session.

"Under these circumstances even the most diehard senators should agree to our bank."

Mr. Bennett last week told reporters he would agree to withhold—but not abandon—government participation in the bank until the revisions were made.

Reports from Ottawa indicated that such an agreement likely would produce a favorable vote for the charter in the Senate.

NOT SNUBBED

The premier said he did not go to Ottawa to meet with the Senate banking committee, so that reports suggesting he was "snubbed" by the adjourned committee were exaggerated.

He also said it would be "unthinkable" for the Social Credit party to merge with the Progressive Conservatives as some speculate reports have suggested.

'Blackmail' By Industry Claimed In Smoke Fight

The concept of joint services in Greater Victoria appeals to most aldermanic candidates in the Victoria civic election.

The nine prospects spoke briefly at a luncheon forum arranged by Victoria Kiwanis Club Tuesday noon at the Empress Hotel.

One of them, Victor Williams, called for an end to diplomacy in dealing with the air pollution problem caused by heavy industry. This would be a tangible benefit of joint services in the area of pollution control.

'BLACKMAIL'

Heavy industry "blackmails" the city with its large capital investment, threatening to move from Victoria rather than spend $25,000 on smoke suppression, Mr. Williams charged.

Touching on downtown improvements, Mr. Williams added:

"We don't get clean buildings with new paint as long as we have old smoke."

The aim of Victoria in the long run "has got to be amalgamation . . . Eventually we must decide we all belong to the world, to Vancouver Island, to B.C."

Other candidates expressed these views:

HARRY FANTHORPE—"My decisions will all be based on the amount of good for the community as a whole rather than for any particular group."

CLYDE SAVAGE — Amalgamated services would help solve the smoke problem. "If air pollution is coming from here and there and everywhere, the city alone can't do it. The area as a whole can do a lot." He predicted amalgamation "very shortly."

ALD. AUSTIN CURTIS — Transit: "The provincial government has no right whatever to turn it over to the municipalities and I'll fight it."

ALD. CECIL PARROTT—Approved joint sewerage board study in Greater Victoria area, endorses downtown cleanup, and urges solution of the transit problem.

ALD. A. W. TOONE—Joint services study: "All matters should come back to council for ratification (instead of being passed into provincial legislation without local approval)."

REV J. L. W. McLEAN — "There must be amalgamated services." Juvenile delinquency: "Make far-sighted plans to make particular use of Crystal Garden for young people of the community."

MRS. EVELYN MACKENZIE —Doubts the advisability of joint services board. "Would it mean a fourth level of taxation?"

WESLEY DICKIE — Transit: B.C. Hydro bought out all B.C. Electric operations including public transit. "The province should not be allowed to unload the unprofitable part of that package."

GUNS IN CAR BRING FINES

Two men were fined $25 each in Sooke court Tuesday for carrying loaded firearms in a car.

They are Walter Leberge and Telford Kirkland, both of Sooke. Leberge was also fined $10 for improper tagging of game.

Ex-Candidate For Reeve Seeks Seat

Five candidates will line up against each other Saturday in a struggle for the three vacant council seats in Esquimalt.

"Outsiders" D. H. (Bert) Nelson and Russell Atkinson have the toughest task.

They are trying to jump into seats which have been kept warm by the same three men for several years.

Here are some personal details of the five men and what they stand for:

JAMES BRYANT, 70—Second longest serving member of council, standing for his eighth consecutive time.

Retired civil servant he is FOR extending the municipal boundary to include View Royal panhandle; AGAINST the Joint Services Board.

In addition to being a councillor he is a police commissioner, a member of the intermunicipal committee and Greater Victoria Centennial Committee and is Esquimalt's representative on the Capital Region Planning Board. His home is at 1140 Esquimalt Road.

EDWARD DE COSTA, 46—Three times successful in seeking election.

An engine fitter at HMC Dockyard, he intends advocating local improvement of street lighting, sewerage, recreation facilities and parks.

Married, with five children, he lives at 1126 Old Esquimalt Road.

* * *

WALTER LOCK, 45 — A technician with the federal forestry department, he will be asking the voters to elect him for the third consecutive term.

If elected he will plug for renewal of the entire Greater Victoria sewer system to prevent pollution of beaches.

He also believes Esquimalt needs more playgrounds and an indoor swim pool. Earlier this year voters turned down a similar proposal. He is in favor of amalgamation with View Royal.

RUSSELL ATKINSON, 36—Defeated in his first council attempt last year, the father of three will fight for more open council meetings.

He would like to see all council business handled by every councillor instead of the present system of committees.

He favors amalgamation with View Royal and will seek a long-range park development and municipal improvement program. He is against allowing apartment blocks to be built in all areas slated for multiple dwellings.

Mr. Atkinson lives at 1094 Gosper Crescent.

The photographic section at HMCS Naden is under investigation by RCMP, naval authorities confirmed today.

The probe was started several weeks ago after complaints that photographic supplies are missing and some have turned up in the possession of a city studio.

A navy spokesman said it is not known when the investigation will be completed.

It is reported that photographic supplies were sold at cut-rate prices and that considerable quantities of the supplies have ben impounded by police.

Emily Carr Painting Brings $2,300 Bid

A Victoria seascape by Emily Carr entitled Shore, B.C., was sold for $2,300 at an art auction at Lunds Tuesday evening.

The painting was bought by a Vancouver art collector.

This was the top price paid in a sale of 150 paintings which fetched a total of more than $15,000.

A group of four small paintings by Emily Carr went for $420 and a drawing by Victoria artist Herbert Siebner was sold for $45.

A Group of Seven work, Algonquin Park by Lawren Harris, raised the bidding from $500 to the accepted price of $1,025.

Cornfield Near Doon by F. H. Varley sold for $650.

A Franklin Carmichael painting, unsigned but certified as genuine by his wife, fetched $650.

HARD TO GET

"This was a low price for the work of a painter whose canvases are hard to get," said auctioneer Wilf Lund.

A painting by J. E. H. MacDonald was sold for $575 and Franz Johnson's April in Quebec fetched $325. Arthur Lismer's B.C. Forest fetched $250 and A. Y. Jackson's Athabaska Valley, $300.

Bidding among the 300 people attending the auction was slow and some paintings were said to have been sold for less than the value of their frames.

Victoria Firm Lowest Bidder

Works Minister W. N. Chant Tuesday announced $247,412 was the lowest of five bids for construction of a new provincial government office building at Ganges.

The bid was entered by E. J. Hunter and Sons of Victoria. Mr. Chant would not say when a contract would be signed.

The building, to be located on high ground behind Ganges, may include a magistrate's court as well as provincial offices, he said.

"It will have possibly the best view and setting of anything I know of in B.C.," Mr. Chant said in describing the site.

NEW GROUP PLANNING WAR ON WAR TOYS

A group of 15 men and women have formed themselves into a "Toys for Living" committee, it was announced today.

"The new committee has taken an immediate stand against war toys which they define as toys that glorify war," said committee chairman W. T. Lawson, a social worker.

"Particularly criticised are replicas of modern weaponry, weapons of mass destruction and their advertising promotion," he said.

The committee grew from a public meeting last month on the subject, "War Toys—What's All the Fuss."

The committee will campaign actively against war toys, said Mr. Lawson.

B.C. Hires Experts In Gas Export War

Internationally-known consultants will be hired to help with a crash study of natural gas markets, B.C. Energy Board Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said in Vancouver Tuesday.

The study was ordered by Premier Bennett to provide ammunition for B.C.'s battle with Alberta over the California export market.

Dr. Shrum said the board's executive secretary Dr. J. J. Southworth was dispatched immediately to discuss the study with top consultants in the east.

The inquiry will cover the province's gas reserves situation and produce a report by March 31 so it can be used by B.C. at the National Energy Board meetings in the spring.

GAS EXPORTS

The issue will revolve around an Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board permit to a Canadian subsidiary of Pacific Gas and Electric of San Francisco to boost natural gas exports from 4.3 trillion to 6.4 trillion cubic feet.

Spokesmen for the B.C. gas industry say that if the Alberta gas exports to California are expanded, it will set back B.C. production for many years.

Premier Bennett already has outlined his argument that the cheaper Alberta gas should be sent to eastern Canada so that B.C. could develop its "only natural market" which lies in the U.S.

Orderlies Plan Joint Campaign

Nursing orderlies at federal government hospitals here and in Vancouver said today they are in complete agreement in their dispute over pay and conditions.

Repesentatives from the men at Veterans Hospital and Vancouver's Shaughnessy Military Hospital met here privately Tuesday.

Afterwards a spokesman said both groups would work together in their separate associations to develop a national campaign to improve wages.

Vancouver orderlies are members of the Civil Service Association of Canada. Here, they are members of the Veterans Department National Employees Association.

Orderlies, whose wages range between $240 and $304 a month here, have not received an increase for two years.

APPEAL WORKERS CELEBRATE VICTORY

'Job's Been Done . . . Thanks to You'

Victoria's successful 1965 United Appeal campaign ended Tuesday night.

To celebrate the victory more than 300 people sat down to dinner in the Empress Hotel.

They represented the many organizations which have won awards for donations and Appeal organizers.

Hero of the evening was Don Lawson, this year's Appeal chairman.

He was presented an award of his own—"for distinguished service to the people of the Greater Victoria area."

It was largely due to his determination that the Appeal managed to top its $410,000 goal.

In turn, Mr. Lawson thanked everyone in the district for their support.

He said: "The job has been done, thanks to you and hundreds like you, who have recognized the need and given your time and pledged your money to meet that need."

Community Chest president J. Allan Baker said of the payroll deduction plan: "It takes a load off the shoulders of the organization."

Mrs. Foster Isherwood, president of the Family and Children's Service, said not every campaign committee in B.C. achieved its goal.

She said: "Victoria canvassers seem to be achieving a technique the public can't refuse."

She described the task as similar to knitting a sweater for a camel—"Mr. Lawson finally reached the point where he could say 'at last I'm over the hump'."

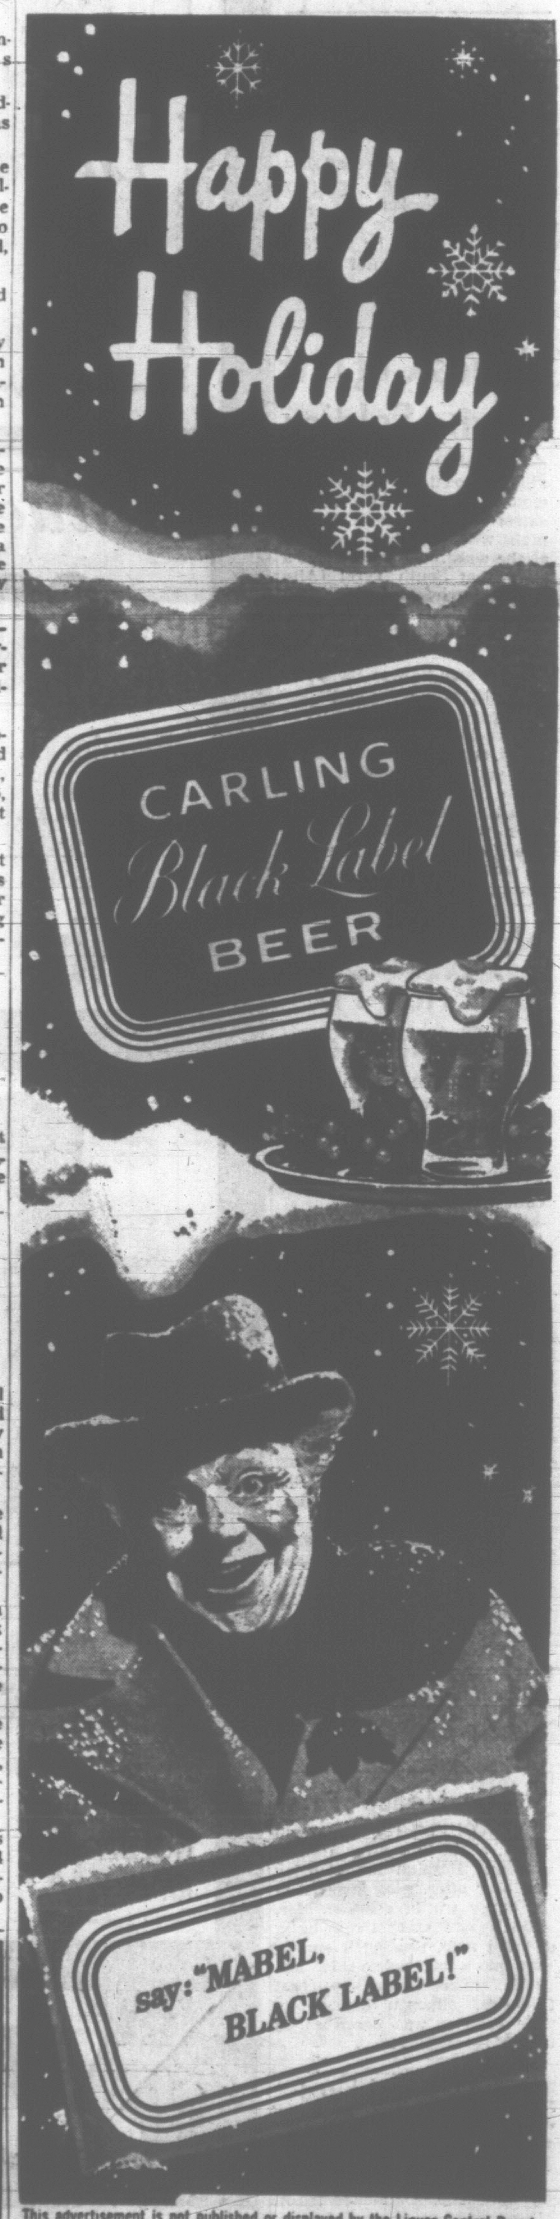

Representatives of more than 100 local firms stepped forward to receive plaques and awards from Daily Colonist publisher Richard J. Bower.

'Underdog' Asks Probe In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Underdog leader David Cowlishaw Monday night asked city council for an inquiry into the dismissal of welder John Dawybida, 46, from the Winnipeg engineering department.

Council took no action on the request, but referred letters of complaint from Underdog to the utilities and personnel committees.

Cowlishaw, of Vancouver, formed Underdog to fight against injustice, according to his publicity material.

He told council Dawybida had been railroaded out of his job two years ago because he had discovered dishonesty and inefficiency in the engineering department.

"PEOPLE WILL HEAR"

If council fails to reopen the case, Cowlishaw said, then "we will bring it forward in such a way people will hear about it."

Cowlishaw threw a carton of beef blood onto the floor of the House of Commons Aug. 28 to attract attention to the case of Calvin Macdonald, who claimed he was suffering hardship because the RCMP refused to acknowledge him as a former undercover agent.

A judicial inquiry here absolved the engineering department of waste and inefficiency charges levelled by Dawybida. The announced reason for his dismissal was for fighting on the job.

Hands Cut Off Young Soldier

BOLZANO (AP)—An Italian alpine soldier in civilian clothes staggered into the outskirts of Bolzano Monday night with both hands cut off at the wrist. He sobbed out a story that South Tyrol (Alto Adige) terrorists had gagged him, bound him to the tracks and let a train run over his arms.

Police said he was Paolo Zanella, 22, serving with Italian military forces stationed in this troubled frontier region to guard against terrorist bombings and snipings.

The South Tyrol was transferred to Italy from Austria after the First World War. The German-speaking region is seeking greater autonomy from Italy.

New Charges Of Price-Fix In Cosmetics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department stepped into the cosmetics field again this week, charging Charles Pfizer and Company with conspiring to fix prices for its Coty cosmetic products.

In a civil anti-trust suit filed in U.S. district court, Kansas City, the department accused the firm's Coty division with violating the restraint of trade provision of the U.S. Anti-Trust Act.

It said the alleged conspiracy began early in 1959 and continued at least until last August.

The department asked the court to bar Coty from continuing the alleged price-fixing practices and to require the firm to advise all wholesalers and retailers that they may advertise and sell Coty cosmetics to whomever they choose and at whatever prices they choose.

The suit charged that Coty has policed its customers to ensure who did not.

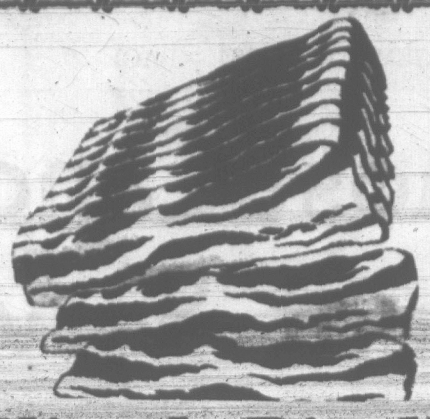

The department has similar cases pending against Max Factor and Revlon. Pfizer has headquarters in New York City. It acquired Coty in December, 1963.

Mr. Rida's car was struck by a second auto, sending it smashing into a tree, police said. Mr. Rida suffered extensive chest injuries, although damage to the vehicles was described as "light."

'Never Dull' In Arctic Says Artist

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A Canadian wildlife artist says if he had the money he would live four months of the year in the Arctic, four months in the wilds of B.C. and the remainder in Tahiti.

Hugh Monahan of North Vancouver, who is in Victoria for an exhibition of paintings opening at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel today and Thursday, said the north is "never dull . . . one of the most fascinating places to live."

"I've never seen a grey sea in the Arctic," he said. "It's either green, deep blue, magenta, but never grey."

The artist, acclaimed in the U.S. and Canada for his paintings of the north, has made several trips to the Arctic and the Northwest Territories on behalf of the National Museum in Ottawa and the Dominion Wildlife Service.

HOPES TO RETURN

"I hope to return there soon," he said. "There is no end of material in the north for a painter."

Born in Dublin, the artist was educated at Stoneyhurst, Cambridge University and took his art studies at the Royal Hibernian Academy in Dublin and the Slade School of Fine Arts in London.

Before becoming a full-time artist, he was a regular army officer with a Gurka Brigade, serving first on the northwest frontier of India and then with the Eighth Army in Italy during the Second World War.

In his opinion there is no better infantryman than a Gurka.

"This is chiefly due to his endurance and ability to find his way in the dark without a map," he said. "He is tough and can take it."

HUNTER

Apart from painting, Mr. Monahan's other occupation is hunting. He has hunted in Central and Eastern Europe, India and in America.

He praised the Dominion Wildlife Service and the B.C. game branch for the part they are playing in conserving birds and game animals.

"They are not only conserving, but providing games for hunters," he said. "This isn't an easy task."

The artist has just completed six large wildlife tableaus for the National Museum of Canada and is holding another exhibition of his works in Montreal.

His exhibition at the Oak Bay hotel will feature about 24 paintings, some dealing with the far north and waterfowl. His works were on show at HMCS Naden Tuesday.

Fireworks Bring Fines for Pair In City Court

Two men charged with separate offences of setting off fireworks heard their behavior described as a "nuisance" or "downright dangerous" when they appeared in city police court Tuesday.

John Leadley, 229 Government, and Robert Turnbull, 1158 Yates, pleaded guilty to violating the Victoria traffic bylaw.

Leadley, who was observed by police throwing lighted firecrackers onto Fisgard Street on Oct. 30, was told his actions were a nuisance. He was fined $5.

Turnbull was charged after police saw him hold a lighted firecracker outside the window of a car at Yates and Douglas.

It spewed colored balls of fire that bounced off buildings and landed on the sidewalk, the court was told.

Turnbull denied there were any balls of fire.

He was told his actions were "downright dangerous" by Magistrate William Ostler and fined $15.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

CBS-TV is waging a successful fight to get back into the forefront of the television ratings.

Early reports had ABC-TV up top almost exclusively, but now Nielsen ratings show that CBS produced almost half of the 15 most-viewed television shows during the two weeks ending Nov. 27.

Stephen

It produced seven of the top-rated programs, compared to five for ABC-TV and three for NBC-TV.

The top-rated show was NBC's "Bonanza," followed by ABC's "Bewitched," and CBS' "Gomer Pyle, USMC."

The remaining shows, in order of ratings, were: "The Andy Griffith Show," CBS; "The Fugitive," ABC; "The Red Skelton Hour," CBS; "The Munsters," ABC; "The Lucy Show," CBS.

"The Jackie Gleason Show," CBS; "Peyton Place," ABC; "The Ed Sullivan Show," CBS; "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color," NBC; "Bob Hope's Chrysler Theatre," NBC; "The Dick Van Dyke Show," CBS, and "My Three Sons," ABC.

There is always a search for some new method of rating television programs which would be more indicative of individual preferences.

A company based in Florida is developing a method which it regards as revolutionary.

The system involves an electronic eavesdropper that can be operated from an airplane. It's called Airborne Television Audit and is the brainchild of two electronics-computer engineers.

The device can zero in on any neighborhood the airplane flies over and then electronically collect and record signals given off by TV sets. In the space of 18 seconds, it covers an area three-quarters of a mile long and one mile wide. All this while the plane is zipping along at 150 miles per hour and at an altitude of 2,000 feet.

And its developers say it can't be tricked or fooled by such things as putting 1,000 TV sets in one room and tuning them all to the same channel or mixing up the channels.

The president of the firm, Television Audit Corporation, 30-year-old David L. Nicholson, believes they have the perfect technique for determining scientifically and with accuracy the number of TV sets tuned to given channels at a given program time.

The firm's technical chief, 32-year-old Steve Mixsell, says the system has the electronic capacity to count 1,250,000 actually operating TV sets an hour.

The TV-rating field is dominated by A. C. Nielsen Company which puts out the Nielsen television index. Its ratings are based on recording devices in TV sets in 1,200 selected households.

AFTER SIX-DAY INQUIRY

Crash Cause Mystery

By RUSSELL PEDEN

MONTREAL (CP) — One thorny question, put to several expert witnesses, remained unanswered Tuesday when an inquiry into Canada's worst single plane disaster ended public hearings after six sitting days.

The question was: What caused a giant DC-8F airliner, that appeared to be normal in all respects, to go into its fatal dive north of Montreal Nov. 29, 1963?

Experts drawn from the department of transport, the National Research Council, the Douglas Aircraft Company and elsewhere said there was nothing seriously wrong with the plane's structure, engines or flight control systems at the moment of impact.

They ruled out the possibility of large - scale fire or explosion aboard the aircraft prior to impact and said there was no reason to suspect illness, psychological disturbance or intoxication on the part of the crew.

Yet the huge jet plunged steeply to earth, at a speed in excess of 500 miles an hour and at an angle of about 55 degrees, carrying 111 passengers and the crew of seven to their deaths.

Site of the crash was a swamp near Ste. Therese, 20 miles north of Montreal. The plane had been in the air five minutes after taking off from Montreal on a flight to Toronto.

QUERY STABILIZER

A number of witnesses referred to, or were asked about, the fact that the plane's horizontal stabilizer was found to be in a nose-down position—that is, set in such a way as to give the aircraft a nose-down attitude of about 1.8 degrees.

In this respect, the Air Canada disaster resembled a DC-8 crash earlier this year in Lake Pontchartain north of New Orleans, which also occurred shortly after takeoff.

Orville Dunn, 47, chief of aerodynamics in the Douglas Company's heavy transport division, testified that in both cases the stabilizers were set at "something approaching full nose - down position" of two degrees.

Mr. Dunn said the proper stabilizer setting in the Air Canada jets situation would have been two degrees nose-up. He, like other witnesses, was unable to suggest why it had been set in a nose-down position, although he said "there are ways the pilot could be given erroneous clues or become disoriented."

This recalled a hypothesis put forward last week by Dr. A. C. Bryan of Toronto, who heads the RCAF's aviation physiology section.

Dr. Bryan speculated the pilot initiated the dive deliberately when his physical sensations and his instruments told him — erroneously — that the plane was nosing up sharply.

'GIVE FALSE READINGS'

He said aircraft attitude indicators have been known to give momentary false readings under turbulent conditions and this, coupled with the physical sensation of climbing, might have induced the pilot to push the plane's nose down.

Also, gusts of wind might have reduced air speed and reinforced the impression that the plane was nosing up.

Dr. Bryan's theory was discounted Tuesday by Capt. George B. Lothian of Montreal, superintendent of flying for Air Canada, who said he had never experienced instrument failure through turbulence alone.

Capt. Lothian had no alternative theory, however, and he was unable to suggest a reason for the nose-down setting of the stabilizer.

Mr. Justice George S. Challies of Quebec Superior Court, who conducted the inquiry, said in concluding hearings that any interested parties are welcome to make written submissions until Dec. 30.

He said he and his technical advisers will meet early in 1965, probably Jan. 4, to deliberate and prepare a report.

Soft Pyjamas Vital For Putting On Dog

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't tell Fido, but to keep up with the real top dogs this Christmas, he must have flannel pyjamas, heated sleeping pad and a self-service biscuit dispenser.

At least, that's the word from the pooch fashion front.

For the dog of real distinction, these other items are being shown in the doggy departments of stores:

A striped Arabian tent, complete with mattress, where the dog tired-of-it-all can rest in privacy, $14.95 up.

A nylon ski jacket and cap, for the outdoor dog who likes to hear the whistle of the wind in his ears, a nifty outfit, $7.98.

Ear muffs with attached tinkel-bell topped beret, for the indoor dog who still must go outdoors occasionally, $2.98.

The dog biscuit dispenser, like a coin machine, is for the dog who likes to eat between meals. One paw push and a biscuit falls out, $6.95.

Does a dog really need pyjamas ($2.49), to sleep in, one store official was asked.

"We sell quite a lot of pyjamas," he replied. "When one store official was asked.

"We sell quite a lot of pyjamas ($2.49), to sleep in, the heat dies down late at night a dog gets cold. He can't wrap up in a blanket like a human, you know."

Three-Way Talks Held On Finance

A three-way meeting in the Parliament Buildings Tuesday began serious discussions aimed at getting the most out of the ratepayers' dollar and also saving some money.

It was the first formal meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities executive and the B.C. School Trustees Association executive under the sponsorship of the provincial government.

Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell, who suggested the meeting in view of continuing conflict between the two groups, said it will become an annual event.

He added that discussions were open on the possibility of civic parks and school playgrounds being put to joint use so that civic revenues are stretched further.

He also said savings could be realized if the two groups worked together in questions of employees and wages.

Education Minister Peterson also attended the meeting.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Harry Belafonte agreed to appear on the Dinah Shore TV show next February only if he could plug the Peace Corps. So Dinah is making the organization the theme of her program for that night . . . Tin Pan Alley is buzzing with a rumor that there will be an out-of-court settlement on the "Hello, Dolly" song suit . . . MGM is offering Jonathan Winters a five-picture contract on the strength of his performance in "The Loved One". . . . While the Hollywood experts predict that Cary Grant might well win an Oscar for "Father Goose," let us not forget that Peter O'Toole's performance in "Becket" won glowing notices from the critics and wild acclaim from moviegoers — especially the ladies and the discerning, or maybe it was the other way around.

Never a dull moment for Jack Benny. The kid must be a billionaire, but he's still in there trying — has a world-wide concert tour planned for 1965 . . . Jack Kerouac, considered the crown prince of the beatnik authors, is becoming a historian. He's written a book covering the whole movement, which Coward-McCann will publish next spring under the title "Desolation Angels." Pretty, isn't it?

★ ★ ★

The high-priced call girls, who made more than most of the World's Fair exhibits during the World's Fair season, are heading to Miami for the winter . . . A Broadway actor-writer, popular in show business circles, is in hock to a group of very rough Hartford, Conn., loan sharks. He owes them a mere $7,000, but it might as well be a zillion.

Leslie Caron's estranged husband, Peter Hall, has agreed to call off his portion of the divorce suit, which means that there will be a much tidier ending to their problem. After that, the next voice to be heard from should be Warren Beatty's.

★ ★ ★

Johnny Podres, the L.A. Dodgers pitcher, has resumed his romance with Peppermint Lounge dancer Marlene Klaire after giving it a good rest for about seven months.

Herman's Hermits, the new British combo "on the charts," as they say in the record business, are led by a 17-year-old who describes his group this way: "We're quite different purely because we're quite normal." True. They don't go in for sloppy clothes or messy hairstyles . . . Gary Smith, former producer of the ill-fated Judy Garland Show, will be in charge of NBC's new big one for 1965 — "Hullabaloo." And he wants Judy's daughter, Liza Minnelli, for one of the variety shows featuring young talent.

★ ★ ★

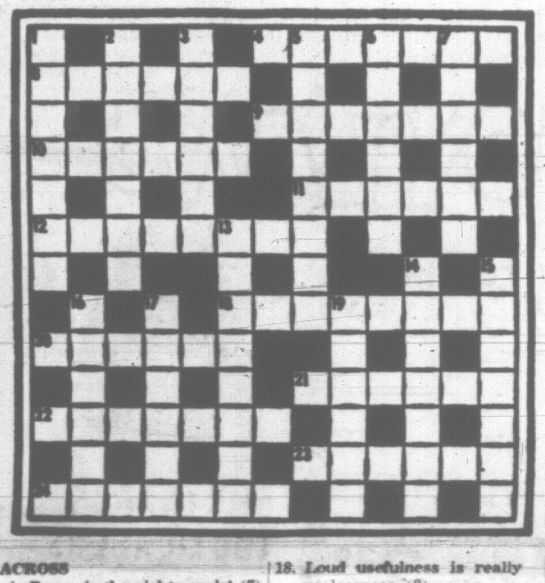

Michael Redgrave's year-and-a-half-old granddaughter Natasha Jane is making her film debut as one of the airline passengers in the climactic scene of "The Loved One." Not only is she a marvellous actress who can wail on cue, but she's the daughter of the film's director, Tony Richardson . . . Buddy Rich's pretty wife, ex-showgirl Marie Allison, is slated for serious eye surgery after the first of the year. . . . There's talk in "the industry"—meaning Hollywood—that George Murphy's first day as a United States senator will be covered as a movie short, made and distributed by those who know and love him best, out there.

Lone Monk Rebuilds U.S. Post

OXFORD, Mich. (AP) — The only Lutheran monk in the United States has rebuilt his unique outpost of the ecumenical movement.

Rev. Arthur Krenheder, founder and sole member of an unusual monastic order, said construction crews completed the building of St. Augustine's House last week. It replaces a retreat house destroyed by fire in the summer of 1963.

Roman Catholics, Lutherans and other Christians pitched in "as a labor of love" to make the rebuilding possible, the 59-year-old Father Krenheder said.

The $35,000 building requires only interior decoration and furnishings to be complete for use in retreats by Lutherans and non-Lutherans who seek brief respites through religious exercises from their bustling normal lives.

Father Kreinheder, sole member of the Congregation of the Servants of Christ which he founded in 1958, said he seeks reunion of Lutherans and Roman Catholics but knows it "needs a lot of patient labor." Martin Luther left the Catholic church in the 16th century.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Terry Charlton, age 13, of Calgary, Alberta, for his question:

How do they manufacture all the salt we use?

Millions of tons of this gritty white chemical are made ready for market every year. Its chemical name is sodium chloride. We call it table salt, though only 5 per cent of the amount produced is used to season our food. The rest is used to perform some 15,000 chores in the busy world of industry.

It is possible to make table salt in the laboratory. Chemists call it sodium chloride because it is a compound of the elements sodium and chloride. Sodium is a soft, corrosive metal, and chlorine is a poisonous yellow gas. When a bit of sodium is dropped into a flask of chlorine, atoms combine into molecules of sodium chloride with no outside help. This chemical trickery soon produces a deposit of gritty white crystals of table salt.

It might seem simple to manufacture salt by this method, but the two ingredients are hard to come by. In the earth's crust, chlorine is scarce though sodium is plentiful—but neither element occurs in pure form. Extracting them from ores and compounds is costly, and when extracted the elements themselves are dangerously hard to handle. Fortunately we do not have to use this method to manufacture our salt. Most of the work already has been done. In nature, whenever sodium and chlorine atoms come in contact, they combine by themselves to form table salt. Huge deposits of sodium chloride are found in the ground, and more than 37 quadrillion tons of it are dissolved in the salty waters of seas.

Table salt has been extracted from the ocean since ancient times. Troughs of salty sea water were set in the sun, and as the water evaporated its load of dissolved chemicals was left behind. More than a fifth of our supplies still come from the ocean and from salty wells, but the process of evaporation is now speeded up by boiling the water. The bulk of our sodium chloride is taken from vast underground deposits of a mineral called halite.

Swamped by Sea Water

Halite is a rough, brittle rock made of ordinary salt, often tinted blue or red or dirty white by impurities. Shafts and tunnels are dug in the buried deposit, and the rocky mineral is mined like coal. Near the mine is a tall tower called a tippler in which the halite is changed into usable sodium chloride. The lumpy rock is elevated to the top of the tippler. As it descends it is crushed and screened, graded and finally packed into sacks.

In North America, many of the deep layers and humped domes of halite date back to the Silurian Period of some 300 million years ago. Vast areas of land were swamped several times by sea water. The climate was very hot and dry, and the shallow seas became overloaded with dissolved chemicals. Layers of gypsum, sodium chloride and other salts were deposited on the bottom, often sandwiched between layers of other rocky minerals. Later the seas receded. The buried halite waited through the ages to be mined and processed for use in our salt shakers and for its many duties behind the scenes in modern industry.

Andy sends a 15-inch World Book Globe to Marvin Heim, age 10, of St. Paul, Minn., for his question:

What is sidereal time?

The word sidereal is coined from an older word for the stars, and sidereal time is reckoned by the motion of the stars over our skies. Our clocks are governed by the motions of the sun, and we live, you might say, by the local or solar time of the solar system. Sidereal time, you might say, is the cosmic time of the wheeling stars.

In a sidereal day, the stars seem to make a circle around the sky. It is measured from the highest point a star reaches on its daily journey. The length of a sidereal day is the time it takes the star to return to this highest point the next day. The sun takes a little longer to make its daily journey, and the sidereal day is about four minutes shorter than our local solar day.

Flying Hunters Win Concession

A provincial Cabinet order today rescinded a requirement that hunters using planes to reach hunting areas file special reports and obtain a separate permit.

It also does away with a regulation prohibiting hunters from tracking game in a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

A game branch spokesman said both regulations were found to be unwarranted and difficult to enforce.

However, the regulations still prevent any hunter from actually shooting at game from an airplane or motor vehicle.

Youthful Tycoon Accused Of Slaying Twin Brother

YOUNG HEIR Timothy Nicholson, right, enters sheriff's office in Temple City, Calif., in custody of Deputy Jack Ferguson to be booked on suspicion of murder in the shooting of his twin brother. (AP Wirephoto.)

TEMPLE CITY, Calif. (AP) — A wealthy young real estate developer was booked Tuesday on suspicion of murdering his twin brother.

Sheriff's deputies said Timothy Nicholson, 22, told them "it was an accident." Todd F. Nicholson was shot to death with a 22-calibre rifle in the brothers' $400,000 54-unit luxury apartment in this Los Angeles suburb.

Deputies said they were told that the twins were heirs to portion of the Cudahy Meat Packing and Pullman railroad car fortunes, and that each received $500,000 at age 18.

Todd had been living in Phoenix, Timothy here, friends said.

HORSE PLAY

Deputies told this story:

Monday night, while Todd was packing to return to Phoenix to complete transfer of his business operations, came the shooting. He was hit in the heart. Neighbors said they heard no disturbance, but the two had indulged in "horseplay" over the weekend.

The apartment manager, Shuey Greenberg, said Timothy rushed into his apartment and said: "I just shot my brother." Timothy's account, officers said, was not completely clear.

Officers said they found Timothy walking up and down in front of the apartment when they arrived. They also learned, they said, that he flew to San Diego and back Monday in his private plane.

Young Love Thaws Cold War Barriers

By ROBERT HOLTON

MERRICK, N.Y. (AP)—Two Russian and three American youngsters clasped hands across the threshhold of an American home the other day and the cold war, for the moment, melted.

The pair of Moscow teenagers and my three eldest children conducted in our home last Tuesday what probably was the first small fry-East-West summit conference in history.

The experiment was a smashing success.

Timothy Holton, 7, and Yuri Popov, 14, agreed to exchange backyard fort-building plans.

Peg Holton, 6, and Irene Tolstikova, 13, pledged to keep each other abreast of youthful fads in their respective countries.

And Jane Holton, 3, fell in love with Yuri.

"Mommy," she said after the 10-hour visit ended. "I love Yuri. He's so handsome and he's so kind."

Irena and Peg hit it off beautifully from the moment they met until they kissed goodbye.

WILL NEVER FORGET

"I have enjoyed myself in your home, Peggy, only I wish I had enough time to teach you to say 'I like you very much' in Russian," Irena said. "We must see each other again. I promise I will never forget you and our visit here."

The two Russian youngsters spent the day in our suburban home during a two-week stay in the United States as guests of the American Broadcasting Company during which they were filmed for a recorded television program for showing next month.

"It has been a wonderful experience to come into your home and see how you live," Yuri said. "I enjoyed it very much. I particularly liked the pretzels and the strawberry shortcake. Those I never had before."

In the midst of all the fun there were a few tense moments brought about by highly undiplomatic utterances of the Holton children.

"Is Mr. Khrushchev really still alive or did they kill him?" Timothy asked at a dinner table.

"He is living in a nice apartment in Moscow," Yuri replied without a hint of annoyance. "He was just too old and too sick to rule. So he resigned."

PRAYERS A PROBLEM

There was another awkward moment at the dinner table when the children began to recite a prayer. The two Russian children and their chaperone, Miss Zena Evgrosvi, just looked on.

This puzzled Timothy, so he asked: "Why don't you pray? Don't you think there is a God?"

His mother quickly turned the conversation to another subject.

It was on a walking tour of the village that Jane probably began to take a deep liking for Yuri. She had tripped and stubbed her toe and began to cry.

Yuri lifted her into his arms and in Russian whispered soft words of comfort. Soon she stopped crying.

"Just like my little sister," Yuri explained. "You know children are children, no matter where they live."

As their two guests drove away in a car toward their Manhattan hotel, Jane turned to her mother and said with tears in her eyes:

"Pray that they come back again mommy. I love Yuri."

FOLK SINGER Burl Ives arrived in Dublin this week to look for a site to build a house. He said he wants to live in Ireland a few months each year to "cool off."

New Trend Alarms CS In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The Civil Service Federation of Canada says it is alarmed over an increasing tendency by federal cabinet ministers not to accept full responsibility for the actions of their subordinates.

An editorial in Argus, the federation's newspaper, says these cabinet ministers should not be allowed to remain in office.

The federation says several Liberal and former Conservative cabinet ministers have broken this tradition in recent years. It cites two recent cases involving Immigration Minister Tremblay and State Secretary Lamontagne who named civil servants in the Commons when questioned on the removal of pictures of the Queen from citizenship court rooms.

"We feel very strongly that the traditional immunity of civil servants from being blamed in the House of Commons for mistakes which they may or may not have made must be maintained as they are quite unable to defend themselves from these accusations," the editorial says.

The Argus says cabinet ministers are not reluctant to take full credit for the work accomplished by their staffs.

Soviet Cuts Prices

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russians were told Monday that shops throughout the country will soon start cutting prices of slow-selling goods, with reductions up to 40 per cent promised. The newspaper Soviet Russia, said the government had decided to cut prices of goods "which have a limited sale."

AGED SCOT TURNED OUT FAKE COINS

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — James Steele, an 80-year-old Scotsman, pleaded guilty here Tuesday to counterfeiting 14,144 two-shilling pieces over a period of 6½ years.

He also admitted three other charges of possessing machinery, dies and patterns at his home.

When Steele appeared in the sheriff country court the prosecution said he had been sentenced in 1930 to three years penal servitude for counterfeiting half-crowns. A half-crown is worth two shillings sixpence.

Sheriff W. Ross McLean sent Steele to the high court for sentence.

Under the Coinage Offences Act of 1936 he is liable to anything from three years to life in prison.

"I would not like to have to send an 80-year-old gentleman to prison," McLean said.

Teacher 'Tipped Off' Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. teacher has told the justice department she furnished information to Soviet agents on Russian artists touring North America, and on Americans who might try to get them to defect.

Files made available by the justice department identify her as Miss Natalie Anna Bienstock, 28, now a graduate student and Russian language teacher at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

She said she mailed one report to the Russians from Vancouver, B.C.

A justice official said that no action was contemplated against Miss Bienstock because she voluntarily went to the FBI and told about her relatively brief career in international intelligence.

It was learned that after hearing her story, the FBI advised Miss Bienstock to complete the forms which are required for people working for foreign governments in this country.

In these documents, she did not explain how she became involved with the Russians.

But she did note that she visited Moscow at the end of 1959 and again in February and March of 1962 while employed by Hurok Attractions Inc. The firm arranged for the visits of Russian artists to North America under the U.S.-Russian cultural exchange agreements.

Miss Bienstock said in her statement that she received all of her instructions and training at the Hotel Ukraine in Moscow, March 9, 1962, during a meeting with Viktor Petrovich Soine, "a representative of the committee for state security of the U.S.S.R."

Six Candidates Seek Three Oak Bay Seats

Six candidates are seeking three council seats in Oak Bay's municipal council elections Saturday.

The municipality's seat on Greater Victoria School Board was filled nomination day when Trustee Dr. C. B. Jameson was re-elected by acclamation.

There are no bylaws or referendums this year.

Here are thumbnail sketches on the candidates:

Manager of Shawnigan Floor Covering and Lumber Yards, Fred Hawes returned to council six months ago after retiring in 1962 for business reasons.

He previously served on council seven years.

As chairman of the finance committee he has been working towards an improved tax-sharing basis between the senior governments and the municipalities.

Mr. Hawes lives at 668 Falkland Road.

★ ★ ★

Accountant Peter Lovric, 3273 Henderson Road, regards municipal financing, not apartments, as the major problem facing council.

The 43-year-old retired naval officer, who has served on council for one year, considers this to be the 11th hour as far as taxation is concerned.

He supports any move which will make the provincial government more aware of its responsibilities to the municipalities, and which will ease the tax burden of the property-owner on a fixed income.

★ ★ ★

Business executive at Victoria Plywood, Alex Hendry, 54, is running for a second term on council.

Mr. Hendry, who lives at 3253 Henderson, does not consider the question of high-rise apartments an issue in the election.

He is more concerned with the need for the provincial government to accept a larger share of the costs of social services.

★ ★ ★

A former councillor, John D. Watts, 2281 Woodlawn Crescent, is in the running again.

Mr. Watts, 43, is a professional engineer with the provincial government. He was unsuccessful in the 1963 reeveship election.

He favors apartments of a moderate height and is opposed to high-rises in Oak Bay.

Mr. Watts supports a new financial system for street renewal programs, and he would like to see a comprehensive planning and zoning policy enforced.

★ ★ ★

Fred Robinson, 3110 Exeter, is not a new man on the election.

He previously aserved on council for 11½ years. Almost 10 were spent on the public works committee.

The 51-year-old contractor favors preserving the present amenities along the waterside of Beach Drive, and he would like to see a revamping of the method of assessing municipal property.

★ ★ ★

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Harold R. Carter, 905 Deal Street, is running for municipal office for the first time on a platform which opposes high-rise apartments.

He wants to see the buildings planned to fit the bylaws, not the bylaws broken to fit the buildings.

The 40-year-old surgeon is not opposed to apartments in Oak Bay but he is waging a strong campaign to preserve the existing residential character of the municipality.

Hong Kong Gun Cache Discovered

HONG KONG (AP) — Police announced last weekend discovery of a large cache of American-made high explosives and weapons believed to have been intended for use against Communist China.

The cache, largest ever found in Hong Kong, was discovered on the top floor of an apartment block in a densely populated section of the colony. A ballistics expert told a press conference the explosives could have levelled a city block.

"They are fantastically dangerous," he said. "Thousands of people in this crowded area could have been killed if the explosives had gone off."

The cache was stored amid rubbish in a room whose walls were covered with Nationalist Chinese flags.

A government spokesman said police had been tipped. He refused to say by whom but reliable sources said Chinese Communist agents were believed to have done so.

The ballistics expert said the cache included 200 pounds of plastic high explosive and five explosive mines of the limpet type, each capable of sinking a large-sized ship. Other objects in the cache included large amounts of booby trap bombs, hand grenades, cigarette tin bombs, various types of detonators, time clocks and fuse wire.

The cache also included a number of revolvers with large quantities of ammunition.

Pope's Tour News 'Leaked' In Portugal

LISBON (AP) — Thousands of Portuguese Roman Catholics Sunday got detailed news for the first time of Pope Paul's journey to India. It came in the form of a concise gazette of his activities handed out as they left church.

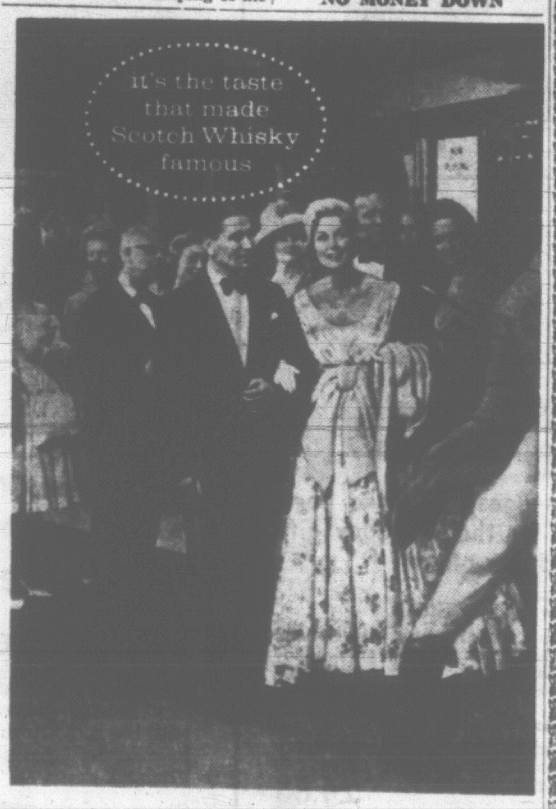

The privately printed, four-page newsletter appeared to have been issued with the knowledge of government censors, who normally scan all publications before release.

Entitled The Contemporary Church, the gazette featured a two-column photograph of the pontiff and a resume of his activities at the Bombay Eucharistic Congress.

Censors have banned all but a few laconic reports of the congress. No pictures have appeared in print of the Pope in India.

The pontiff's visit to Bombay has strained relations between Lisbon and the Vatican. Portugal lost three possessions to India in 1961. The government labelled the Pope's trip a "useless and unjust" offence to Portugal.

The gazette, passed out at the end of mass in many Lisbon churches, contained the entire program of the Pope's stay in India plus reports on his speeches and meetings.

Afterwards, celebrate with the best of friends ...Johnnie Walker.

LAND ACQUISITION GOING WELL, SAYS WALLACE

Opening of Restored Fort Planned for '67

Most of the land needed for restoration of historic Fort Steele, near Cranbrook, B.C., has now been acquired.

The board of directors of the Fort Steele Foundation today also reported that negotiations are proceeding and all of the necessary lands will soon be obtained.

"It is hoped Fort Steele will be officially opened during the centennial year," board chairman, Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace said.

FIRST BASE

The board of directors met recently to review progress of the project to restore the old fort which figured in an early gold rush and became the first Royal North West Mounted Police base west of the Rockies.

Mr. Wallace said that although nine or 10 parcels of land in the 141-acre site are still under negotiation, all of it will soon be acquired. An old federal land reserve where the barracks was located has already been transferred.

The site has now been provided with electric power and the foundation now is providing an adequate water system, Mr. Wallace added. A new highway and bridge leading through the project is due for completion within the next two years.

FENCING STARTED

The foundation undertook the project under B.C. government sponsorship in 1962. Eight or 10 of the original buildings are being preserved, including a school, three churches, a store, the old ferry offices, the hotel, the Masonic Hall and the police barracks.

Fencing has been started. The whole village, faithfully resembling a community of the last century, is being barricaded, said Mr. Wallace. A great number of articles have been collected for eventual display as a museum of the colorful era represented, the late 1800s. Homeowners have been asked to donate other suitable items.

Picnic facilities are being set up and traffic control and parking facilities planned. A residential area for those employed in the project is being established nearby.

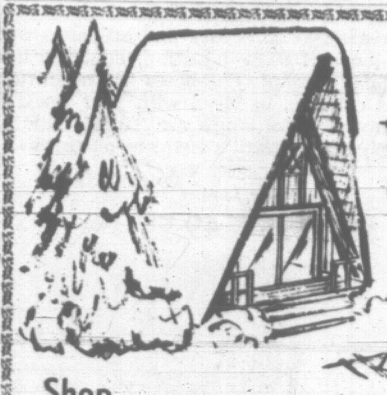

"In all respects, excellent progress is being made," said Mr. Wallace.

"Fort Steele will become a showplace for the whole Kootenay area. The foundation knows it will receive full co-operation of neighboring cities in making this a centennial attraction."

He said there will be special events during the centennial celebrations in 1967, to draw attention to the restoration project."

'HELLO, MIKE'

United Force Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Dashing down the aircraft ramp with a hearty "Hello, Mike," Prime Minister Wilson of Britain arrived in Ottawa today for talks with Prime Minister Pearson.

"God, it's cold here," Mr. Wilson said as he left the BOAC Comet jet after it landed from Washington.

The British leader said he looks forward to his discussions with Mr. Pearson which would be "short in time but intense in character."

WASHINGTON (UPI)—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson wound up two days of Washington talks today and prepared to try to sell European allies a series of broad proposals for more collective control of Western nuclear power.

Wilson told a news conference before flying to Canada that he regarded his talks with President Johnson as a "complete success." He said there was agreement on "guidelines" of how to proceed with allied discussions.

In the meeting with reporters, Wilson appeared to soften some of his opposition to the controversial U.S. proposal for a 25-ship NATO nuclear fleet.

The prime minister said he had been misinterpreted, in reports before leaving Britain for Washington, as being "irrevocably opposed" to international crews on such a fleet. And he described as exaggerated reports that Britain was concerned that West Germany would obtain a "finger on the nuclear trigger."

COMMONS SPEECH

Wilson declined to spell out exactly what the broad British proposals are for increased Allied nuclear co-ordination. He plans to do this before the House of Commons next week on his return to London.

In the talks here Wilson won approval from President Johnson to try to sell his ideas to other members of the alliance.

Johnson agreed, meanwhile, that the United States would not, for a limited time at least, press its own proposal for a nuclear-armed fleet.

The British proposals are reported to envisage a much larger allied force including land and air components and a scaled-down naval fleet.

Wilson said his discussions with Johnson "very much" represented the beginning of a renegotiation of the Nassau agreement between former prime minister Harold Macmillan and the late president John F. Kennedy.

Under the Nassau agreement, Britain undertook to contribute to NATO its Polaris submarines on the basis that it would have the right of withdrawal under certain circumstances.

MOVE FORWARD

Wilson said today "we are now moving forward in a progressive series of proposals."

His remarks were interpreted as indicating that he had advanced suggestions that Britain would offer its Polaris submarines to some kind of multilateral force within NATO on a no-recall basis.

UN Bars Public

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—In a move to head off any demonstrations when debate on the explosive Congo question opens today, the United Nations has ordered the public barred from the Security Council chamber.

GREAT FLAG DEBATE COST $131 MILLION

OTTAWA (UPI) — Deputy Creditiste Leader Gilles Gregoire claims the great flag debate had cost Canada $131,815,000.

Speaking Tuesday during the seventh day of renewed debate — and the 29th day since Prime Minister Pearson first raised the question — Gregoire said Members of Parliament, newsmen, Hansard reporters and others connected with the Commons had "lost" 43,958,000 hours on the debate.

He said 146 members had made a total of 229 speeches in which the word "plebiscite" was used 4,080 times—but that total rose to 4,082 when he used the word twice.

TENSION GROWS

Yule Deadline Near for Flag

OTTAWA (CP)—With 12 talking days left before Christmas, the Commons today enters the 30th day of the flag debate in an atmosphere of rising tension.

Exactly half of the 96 Progressive Conservative MPs now have entered the latest phase of the deadlocked debate and the party is believed to be running out of speakers.

When this happens, the Conservatives either will allow their amendment for a plebiscite to come to a vote or seek to introduce a sub-amendment.

If accepted by the chair, a sub-amendment would open the way for the 48 Conservatives who have spoken in the last seven days to make a second speech of up to 40 minutes.

Both the Conservatives and Liberals were expected to discuss their strategy at caucus meetings today. Reports circulated that some cabinet members favor the use of the notorious closure rule to cut off the debate arbitrarily and force an early vote.

Prime Minister Pearson and several of his colleagues have promised flatly that a distinctive Canadian flag will be approved by Christmas. Works Minister Deschatelets repeated the pledge Tuesday to a delegation of visiting Montreal French-speaking businessmen.

'ELECTION NEXT YEAR'

Forestry Minister Sauve told the same group that an election will be called next year. "Come back next year," he said. "We will then have a new distinctive flag and a new government—a majority government."

Leon Balcer, the Conservative's Quebec leader, said in a Montreal speech the debate should end by Friday. He again came out in favor of the maple leaf design recommended by the special flag committee.

In the Commons, a string of eight Conservatives repeated arguments for a flag plebiscite to coincide with the next federal election.

A ninth Conservative, Jack Horner (Acadia), completed a speech he started Monday night and moved the adjournment of the debate. He said the House should turn to the labor code and other government bills and revert to the daily question period.

Mr. Horner's motion was voted down 139 to 68. Twelve New Democrats, eight Creditistes and four Quebec Conservatives joined the Liberals in opposing the adjournment. Ralph Cowan (York-Humber), the lone Liberal Red Ensign supporter, and Bert Leboe (SC Cariboo) sided with 66 Conservatives in support of the motion.

Commons standings are Liberals 129, Conservatives 96, NDP 18, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine, for a total of 265.

Mr. Leboe said he favors a plebiscite because every citizen

Illegal Strike Suit in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America, an international union, today was ordered to pay damages and interest estimated at $2,359,319 to Gaspe Copper Mines Limited for an "absolutely illegal" strike in 1957.

The union, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, was held responsible for "fomenting, organizing, sustaining, directing, financing and prolonging" the strike at Murdochville, Que.

Mr. Justice Antoine Lacourciere ordered the union to pay the company damages of $1,747,645 plus five-per-cent simple interest on the total from Dec. 31, 1957.

A court source said the interest could bring the total figure to $2,359,319.

Gaspe Copper had sued the Steelworkers' Pittsburgh headquarters for more than $5,000,000 as a result of the strike which ended in October, 1957.

A union spokesman in Montreal said no decision has been reached on whether an appeal will be made.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said evidence given during two years of testimony showed that representatives of the union encouraged violence against the company and miners who might have returned to their jobs.

"The miners were terrorized into striking, the judge said.

The Quebec government had been criticized for strike-breaking in the walkout.

But Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it is "easy to imagine" what would have happened if Quebec provincial police had not been sent in during the strike.

'Violence Replaced Law'

He said that during the strike, which involved 900 workers, violence took the place of law.

"Those principally responsible are not the workers of Murdochville, but those who directed them, that is the representatives of the United Steelworkers of America."

He said the representatives "did nothing to prevent other human beings from being the victims of acts which are less than human, but they also encouraged them."

The union officials also tried "hypocritically to arouse public scorn for the police forces who wished only to maintain order and to protect individuals and property."

The judge said the strike was illegal because it was in violation of the Quebec labor relations law.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it was "unimaginable" that the steelworkers would spend $800,000 during six months on a strike that its president had not authorized.

"The evidence has indicated the union was the determining cause of the declaration of the strike, and of an illegal strike, because neither it nor Local 1881 (the Murdochville local) has been recognized as representing the group of Murdochville employees."

No Excuse for Illegal Acts

The judge said union organizers directed the strike in an illegal way, and some "encouraged and counselled the recourse to brutal force" to intimidate others and prevent a return to work.

The "layoff" of plumber Theo Gagne, "which wasn't even final," and which precipitated the strike, was no excuse for the illegal acts that followed, he said.

The union had argued that Gagne was dismissed for organizing activity, while the company said he was simply laid off.

The judge said the "acts of terrorism were recompensed by the money of the defendant whose goal was to stop production completely. The responsibility of the union there has been joined by the representatives who have never disavowed it and always upheld it."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere reviewed the circumstances of the death of Herve Bernatchez, a striker, in an explosion during the strike.

The explosion occurred, the judge said, when a bomb went off prematurely while Bernatchez, Nestor Henley and Nor-

Soviet Union Chops Military Spending

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Alexei Kosygin announced today a cut of 500,000,000 rubles ($555,000,000) in the Soviet Union's military budget for 1964 and called on other major powers to follow suit.

Kosygin told the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's parliament, the cut and an expected reduction of military spending in the United States "constitute a definite positive step toward reducing international tension."

He said the Soviet Union attaches great importance to the further reduction of the military budgets of the big nations.

Kosygin also promised the Russian people more consumer goods, bigger incomes and increased industrial and agricultural production.

The new Soviet premier said the military budget next year will total 12,800,000,000 rubles, or 12.9 per cent of all government expenditures, as against 14.5 per cent in 1964.

The military budget in 1964 totalled 13,300,000,000 rubles and was 600,000,000 rubles less than 1963. Western officials contend that much Soviet defence spending is disguised under non-military items in the budget, and some Western military analysts think total military spending this year is well over twice the budgeted figure.

The official value of the Soviet ruble is $1.11.

Kosygin spoke at the opening of the first Supreme Soviet session since the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev Oct. 14. Acting on a motion by Leonid Brezhnev, Khrushchev's successor as first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, the parliament approved Khrushchev's replacement as premier by Kosygin.

DID NOT APPEAR

Although still a member of the Supreme Soviet, Khrushchev did not appear for the session. Neither did his son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, former editor of the government newspaper Izvestia, who also is still a member of the parliament.

Kosygin reaffirmed Soviet devotion to Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence and said:

"We are in favor of the development of relations with the United States. There have been some developments in that field although they have not been great."

But he denounced the "aggression of the Americans and the Belgians in The Congo" and repeated Soviet pledges "to render the necessary assistance" to North Viet Nam and to Cuba "if the aggressors dare to raise their hands against them."

Canada Puts 'If' In End To Military

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has indicated to the United Nations it would like nothing better than to get rid of its armed forces—provided, of course, that other countries did.

"Even the total elimination of all existing Canadian defence forces and expenditures today would involve a shift of resources only one-seventh as great as was required in the demobilization period after the Second World War," the government says in a report filed with UN headquarters.

Closure Urged By Balcer As Dief Fumes

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The split between Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and his Quebec chieftan, Leon Balcer, cracked wide open today as Balcer urged Prime Minister Pearson to impose closure to end the flag debate.

Balcer rose at the opening of the House on a question of privilege only about two hours after he had walked out of the Conservative caucus following an explosion with Diefenbaker.

To a somewhat stunned Commons he said:

"For weeks and months this House of Commons has witnessed an unprecedented debate . . . which has paralyzed the work of Parliament.

"If the principle of freedom of speech is to be respected it should also be the prime duty of the House to be able to decide."

"An extension of the debate can only be prejudicial to Parliament and the people of this country."

"I therefore feel it is my duty to invite the prime minister or one of his ministers to give notice they will procede with . . . the rule of closure."

He was loudly applauded by Liberal, New Democratic, Social Credit and Creditiste members. A scattering of Conservatives, mostly the Quebec members, joined in the applause.

Conservative house leader Gordon Churchill rose immediately to say that Balcer was not speaking with the authority of his party.

Pearson Studies Cabinet Shuffle

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is known to be taking a "hard look" at the new developments that have shaken his cabinet but any suggestions that they would lead to early reshuffle of cabinet portfolios was described by informed sources as "premature."

There is no doubt, however, that over the Christmas recess Mr. Pearson will take the opportunity—if there is a recess of any length—to shuffle his cabinet. Whether it would be a major re-assignment of cabinet posts or a minor reshuffle remains to be seen.

The Liberal and Conservative caucuses met this morning. At both, the dealings of the two members of the cabinet with the Sefkind brothers, whose huge Montreal bankruptcies are under investigation, were discussed.

State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay held separate press conferences on Tuesday in which they told of purchasing furniture from a furniture firm controlled by Max Sefkind. Both emphasized that these were ordinary commercial transactions and not "gifts." Both ministers said they were making payments on the furniture. Mr. Tremblay has paid off his account in full and Mr. Lamontagne is making monthly payments.

Both ministers expressed their astonishment over the press reports. They stressed they had done nothing wrong. However Opposition members said that when the question period was resumed in the House of Commons the opposition would press for detailed explanations.

The firm from which the ministers purchased the furniture is now bankrupt. The Bank of Montreal is collecting outstanding accounts.

Sickness, Hunger In Cardboard Shack

By MARGE GILROY

A man lay in bed paralyzed. Nearby sat a woman leaning against a cold stove. She had only one leg and on her lap sat her three-year-old son munching a raw potato.

Earlier this year when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova walked inside this cardboard shack in Korea she was greeted with the words, "No more food."

The woman had lost her leg while unloading 100-pound sacks of rice and the family now depended on her daily beggings to survive.

On a good day she might bring home 12 to 16 cents. This could buy barley for a meal or fuel for a day. It is not enough to provide heat and food.

There are thousands of such families in Korea, said the director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

It is not just enough to buy milk and barley. There must also be enough money available to assist with reclamation and training programs so that the children of Korea may grow up, find work and in turn help other Koreans.

ONCE DAILY

All a Korean really wants is the privilege to work to earn enough to feed his family, at least once a day, said Dr. Hitschmanova.

BIG ANIMAL NOTHING . . . TO TAKE LIGHTLY

Girls Bid for Less-Than-Friendly Hippo

NEW YORK (AP)—"What in the world are they going to do with it?" the city purchase commissioner said when he discovered that three Smith College girls had entered the high bid of $400 for a surplus 4,000-pound hippopotamus.

"A 10-year-old hippopotamus is nothing to toss around lightly," Commissioner Roger J. Browne said Tuesday after the bids were opened.

He said the girls must prove they can take care of Betsy, described as less than friendly. A good idea, he said, would be to donate the animal to a zoo.

The girls said at the Northampton, Mass., college they entered the bid "sort of out of pity" for the unwanted hippo.

Browne said he must have a formal letter and a deposit before the bid can be considered. The next high bid was $150.

A Smith College spokesman didn't look too kindly on the idea by Nancy Horner, 20, of Worcester, Mass.; Ann Longfellow, 19, of Wayzata, Minn., and Ellen Emerson, 19, of Concord, Mass.

CAN'T HANDLE HIPPO

"The college is not prepared to handle a hippopotamus on campus," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Betsy, the subject of the fuss, rested in Brooklyn's Prospect Park Zoo. The head keeper there, R. Ellis, said of Betsy: "She'd just as soon eat you as look at you."

The girls shuddered a bit when told of the hippo's demeanor. But Miss Longfellow said:

"We wanted a hippopotamus and if this is what a hippopotamus is like, we'll take what comes."

There's something else the Smith trio must know about: The hippo is not coming; they'll have to go get her.

"We don't deliver," the commissioner said.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

We have many laws on our books which are hardly observed, but surely one of the most abused must be the Tobacco Restraint Act of the federal statutes.

It states that it is illegal for any person (or machine) to sell cigarettes or tobacco to any person aged under 16. We've checked the 1963 statutes and there is no record of any amendment.

Yet it is a common sight to see boys and girls of more tender years puffing away in public. We are told the enforcement of the act is up to local police. The maximum fine for an offence is $25 plus $5 for every day the offence continues.

There might be enough revenue in this to build a youth recreation centre for the new Centennial Square complex which seems to be the only thing lacking in the project.

Only Severe Frost Hurts Early Bulbs

By HILDA BEASTALL

Any day now we can discover some of the spring flowering bulbs pushing precocious heads through the soil.

Hilda

This is no cause for alarm. Cooler weather will retard their growth, and at the same time harden the portion above soil so that apart from a really severe frost no harm will come to them.

Winter crocuses are visible, and the softly green leaves of the Star-flower, Triteleia uniflora. The blue Grape-hyacinth (muscari) and Bluebell (scilla) make bold groups of narrow dark green leaves.

Even the earliest varieties of daffodils are making themselves noticed.

All this activity is enough to hold our interest during these busy pre-Christmas weeks, but on the days when the urge to have contact with the soil becomes demanding, there is a ready-made job to be done among the growing bulbs, whether they are in borders or beds.

The mild weather has also started the weed seedlings into active growth. There they are by the hundred in every newly-planted piece of ground.

As a winter project, every opportunity should be taken to disturb those seedlings either with a cultivator or by hand.

Where bulbs are not yet showing, the weeding might best be done by hand to avoid damage to bulb tips, but where groups are well defined, a scratching over with a cultivator will dislodge the seedlings.

A hoe will rapidly become clogged with damp soil, making it dull and heavy to use. Keep a trowel handy to scrape the blade frequently. When finished wash the hoe blade, dry it and wipe with an oily rag.

It will then be ready to use again as a few moments can be spent on this particular winter project.

When spring growth becomes rampant about 10 weeks hence at least the weeds removed now will not be growing.

knows as much about the flag issue as MPs.

Douglas Fisher, NDP deputy leader, called for quick approval of the red maple leaf flag. Using up only eight of his 40 allotted minutes, he said the Conservatives are putting too much confidence on straw polls conducted by a television program ("Telepoll" on CTV).

Although such a poll had indicated that a majority of voters in several big cities favor a flag plebiscite, he did not have much faith in the accuracy of such public opinion soundings.

He said he is one of many veterans who disagree with the pro-ensign and pro-plebiscite views of the executive of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe) said the Conservatives are guilty of a flagrant abuse of freedom of speech. Eighteen of them had spoken three times and two had made four flag speeches, repeating the same arguments over and over like madmen.

Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbiniere) accused the Conservatives in an interjection of degrading Parliament with "systematic and disgusting obstruction."

George Nowland, former Conservative finance minister, said if the maple leaf flag is approved it will not be flown universally in many parts of Canada. The Liberals' argument that a plebiscite would disrupt national unity was "tommyrot."

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Bow River) said the flag issue could be the foot in the door leading to destruction of the Crown, the federal government's powers, the position of the governor-general and many other institutions.

He made no pledge of assistance to the Congolese rebels, however.

He also called in general terms for co-operation among Communist countries but made no specific reference to China.

"In the sphere of foreign policy, our government sees its main task in ensuring peaceful conditions for the construction of socialism and communism, for averting a new world war," Kosygin said.

Relaxation of international tension could bring benefits to all the people of the world, Kosygin said.

DIDN'T IDENTIFY THEM

Some Western leaders were taking "responsible attitudes," and Russia "can only approve their statements." He did not identify the Western statesmen of whom he approved.

"We favor negotiations with the Western powers and are ready patiently to achieve the solution of disputed problems," he said.

Calling for a boost in Russian trade with the West, he said the Russian market could be expanded if the capitalist powers wanted to do business. Soviet exports of goods needed by the West also could be increased.

Kosygin said Soviet planners could take this possibility into account when drafting Russia's next long term economic plan.

The prime minister was loudly applauded when he said it was essential to guarantee the security of the Soviet Union and its Communist allies, and when he called for general and complete disarmament.

He reaffirmed Soviet - bloc opposition to Western plans for a nuclear multilateral force.

"In view of the existing situation, the Soviet government shares the opinion that it would be expedient to hold consultations of the Warsaw treaty member states, which are vitally interested in European security," he said.

Most of Kosygin's speech was devoted to promises of better living standards for the Soviet people. The main feature of economic development next year, he said, will be increase in the national income and a raising of the material and cultural level of the people.

He said production of consumer goods should rise 7.7 per cent and the real income of the people should go up 7.3 per cent. During 1964, he said, real income rose only 3.9 per cent.

Kosygin's reference to a cut in the American defence budget was believed by informed observers to refer to something that U.S. State Secretary Rusk told Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko at the United Nations last week.

Kosygin said the United States had notified the Soviet Union that it will reduce military spending in the 1965-66 fiscal year, which begins next July 1. The American budget for that period is scheduled to be put before Congress next month.

There has not been any public announcement of such a notification.

The U.S. military budget for 1964-65 stands at $49,800,000,000, but Nov. 18 plans were announced to close military establishments and obtain a reduction of $500,000,000.

Kosygin said the national income in 1965 will increase by more than 14,000,000,000 rubles. "We have never before had such a big increase in the national income in one year," he declared.

He said the general salary level had increased 2.4 per cent in the last six years but would rise 4.5 per cent next year. He added that a program—introduced by Khrushchev last July—to raise salaries in some specific fields including public services would be completed by May 1. The previous target date was the end of the year.

Industrial production, which normally gets the major attention because of its importance in defence, is to increase 8.1 per cent, Kosygin said.

Continuing a program launched by Khrushchev, he said the highest rate of growth would be in the chemical industry. He promised an increase in gross output there of approximately 15 per cent.

mand Boudreau were trying to blow up a company waste pipe.

Boudreau and Henley were injured. The judge said Steelworkers representative Roger Bedard was aware of the attempt and was with the man who made the bomb when the explosion took place.

The judge said Bruno MacDonald, another Steelworkers representative, got notes to Henley and Boudreau in hospital to indicate what they should tell police.

"The testimony of Mr. Boudreau and Henley leave us in no doubt about this attempt by MacDonald to fool police."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said that in September, 1957, organizer Emile Boudreau arranged a demonstration that resulted in "a violent attack on the ship Mont Royal in the port of Montreal."

The Mont Royal was carrying copper from the Murdochville mines and "several thousand dollars damages was done to the cargo and the members of the crew were molested."

The judgment said these damages were the result of Boudreau's organization work.

"Two peaceful employees, Leon Journaux and Hermann Hilton, were violently beaten and injured May 1, 1957, when they went to pass a snow plough on the Murdochville road.

"The guilty, named Huart, Cyr, Labbe and Boudreau, were sent to jail for this. The union paid costs and had the benevolence to bring them while they were in jail, special nourishment that cost several hundred dollars.

"This is far from demonstrating that the union was opposed to all violence, as its agents tried to pretend."

The decision was made in a 90-page judgment after a two-year hearing involving 350 witnesses.

The company said the union was responsible for loss of profits and for damages the company claimed it suffered in the strike.

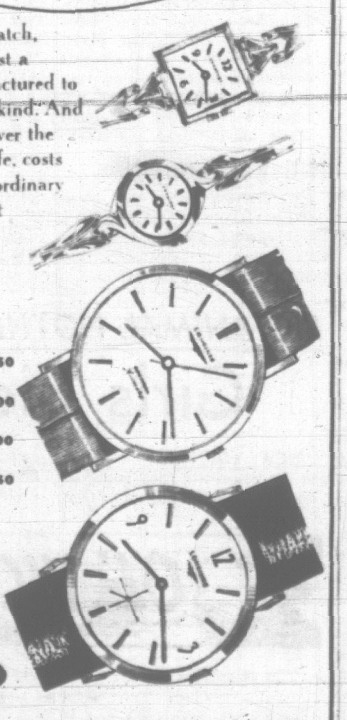

The union said Gaspe Copper had provoked the strike by its attitude during the union's organizing of the miners.

In Ottawa, labor department sources said there have been six cases in the last 15 years in which the courts have held unions liable for damages caused by an illegal strike. The amounts involved, however, did not even approach the figure set in the Gaspe Copper Mines judgment. Most had been only a few thousand dollars.

KENNEDY ROUND

Talks Launched On Tariff Cuts

GENEVA (UPI)—The free world's most powerful trading nations opened talks here today in the biggest attempt ever made to boost international commerce by cutting tariffs.

Bargaining in the so-called Kennedy Round of tariff cuts by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is expected to continue through next year.

The talks were inspired by the late president John F. Kennedy, who proposed across-the-board tariff cuts of 50 per cent on all products bought and sold in the free world.

Few officials expect the final average tariff cut to come near the 50 per cent figure but they predict some measure of success on the grounds that many nations will be unable to resist the chance of breaking into foreign markets through lower duties on their imports.

Bargaining began today on the basis of lists of goods which leading industrial states want to exclude from tariff cuts.

SEVERAL WEEKS

Each nation now has to explain why these items should be exempted, a process expected to take several weeks.

After that, bargaining will enter a stage in which countries will offer to withdraw certain exceptions if other nations do likewise.

This is called the "justification and confrontation stage" of the Kennedy Round.

Participants may only have a certain product exempted from tariff cuts on the grounds of overriding national interests.

The Kennedy Round had been held up for months on technical grounds, mainly differences between the United States and Common Market on inclusion of farm produce.

PUBLIC HEARING SET IN MARCH

Slight Tapering Off Seen In Oil Imports Into U.S.

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States interior department has forecast Canadian crude oil imports for the first half of 1965 totalling about 295,500 barrels a day.

This is slightly below the record pace of Canadian deliveries for the first six months of 1964. During that January-June period Canada sent crude oil to the U.S. at the rate of 299,100 barrels a day, exceeding interior department forecasts by about 25,000 barrels daily. Deliveries have tapered off since then.

Interior Secretary Udall, in releasing Tuesday the regular six - month forecast of all crude oil and liquid petroleum gas imports, also said a public hearing will be launched in March into the U.S. import program.

Preliminary studies into the domestic industry have been proceeding for some time but the public hearing is a new development.

The department's forecasts, if adhered to, will cut oil imports from Canada below the actual level reached in the first half of 1964. But in the vital area east of the Rockies, where Canadian oil is competitive with U.S. oil, the estimate of some 154,500 barrels from Canada daily from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1965, is about 9,500 barrels higher than the delivery rate during the last half of 1964. It also is higher than the actual deliveries of about 153,800 barrels a day in the first half of this year.

West of the Rockies, where Canadian exports are limited only by how much the importing refineries can sell, Canadian oil imports are forecast at 141,000 barrels a day.

HAVE EXEMPTION

Canada and Mexico have an overland exemption from the U.S. oil import program. Canada's slice of the U.S. market is expected to rise about 10 per cent a year.

The fact that her actual slice had run ahead of forecasts prompted independent American producers, a minority group, to suggest to Udall recently that a certification system replace the loose system of import forecasts for Canada. Importing U.S. refineries would file certificates for Canadian oil and be made to stick to them. There has been no indication publicly by the interior department that it is worried about the growth of Canadian imports. In the past however, Udall has warned that Canadian expansion in the U.S. market must be temperate.

Under the Canadian national oil policy laid down in 1961 in an effort to boost output, Canadian producers, who are dominated by big international concerns, were to expand exports to the U.S. and domestic sales as far East as the Ottawa Valley.

The Canadian market was to assume a larger role as imported crude and products were "backed out" of Ontario. This has been proceeding.

Under Canadian oil policy, output has risen about 300,000 barrels daily from the 544,000 barrels daily produced in 1960. Exports to the U.S. played a major part.

Trade Minister Sharp told Canadian producers in February the government expects the industry to "foster exports to the U.S. in a reasonable and non - disruptive manner".

TRADING SUSPENDED IN ACE MINING SHARES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange suspended Ace Mining Co. Ltd. from trading shortly after noon Tuesday because of a rush of sell orders.

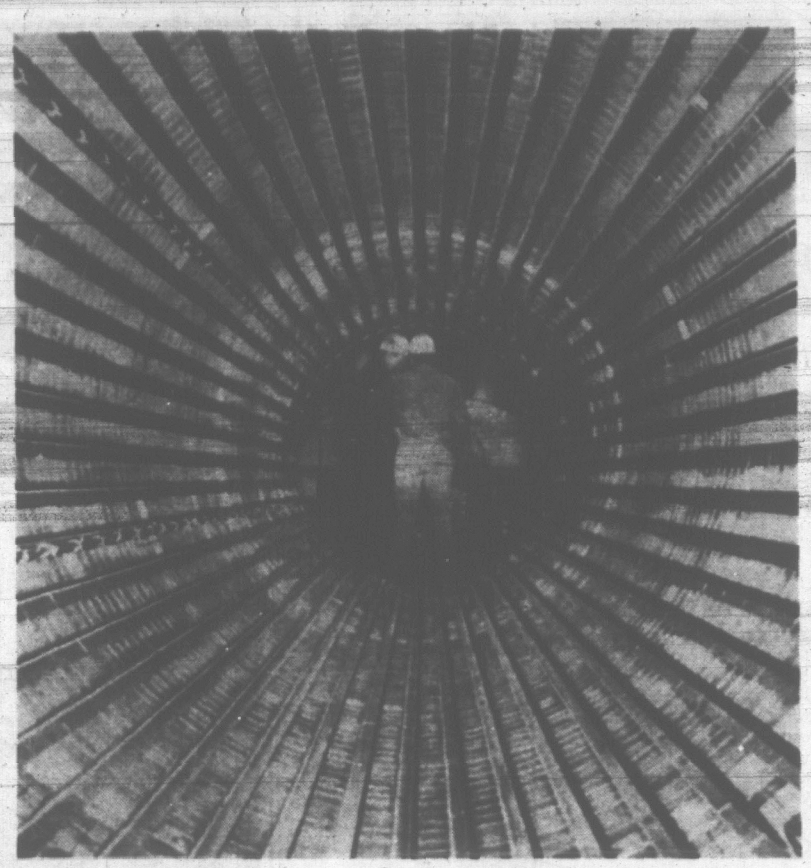

Jack Van Luven, executive vice-president of the exchange, said irregular trading made the suspension imperative.

"There were more sell orders than buy orders and traders couldn't match them," he said.

The stock was offered at $1.44 at the time and was quoted at 70 to 80 cents on the unlisted board two hours later.

Ace owns a gold-antimony property in the Bridge River area of the B.C. Cariboo.

In mid-May the stock was selling at 12 to 16 cents.

HYDRO EXPANSION is taking place in Ontario. This stator core, part of one of the 300,000-kilowatt generating units now being installed in Ontario Hydro's $269,000,000 Lakeview station, just west of Toronto, weighs 230 tons with an outside diameter of 16 feet. When installation is complete, this stator will house a 57-ton rotor which will rotate at 3,600 revolutions a minute. By 1968, the station will have a capacity of 2,400,000 kilowatts. (CP photo.)

CANADIAN STOCKS

Dramatic Shift In Capital Flow

OTTAWA (CP) — In two years and nine months foreign investors have re-sold to Canadians about $1,858,500,000 worth of Canadian common and preferred stocks.

This outstripped their purchases of outstanding Canadian equities by some $348,000,000 in the same period, to the end of September.

The figures were included in Tuesday's monthly statement by the bureau of statistics on international securities trading.

The figures illustrate the dramatic shift over this period, which actually started in the final quarter of 1961, in capital flows for portfolio investment in Canadian equities.

Added to the $348,000,000, to get a total "repatriation" picture, would be retirements of Canadian stocks held by foreigners minus the net proceeds of new stock issues sold to non-residents.

In the 30 months up to the first quarter of this year this total net repatriation was calculated as $492,000,000. Subsequent developments in the second and third quarters this year would put it over $500,000,000.

INFLOW CONSISTENT

In contrast, Canada had consistent capital inflows between 1951 and 1961 in this international trading in stocks. In one year alone in that period, 1956, there was a $250,000,000 inflow.

The shift has been attributed to various factors, including the altered U.S. tax status of the non-resident - owned investment funds, the U.S. interest equalization tax, the hydro takeovers in Quebec and British Columbia, and more generally the improved prospects in European stocks.

The bureau said the net repurchases of outstanding Canadian equities continued to the tune of $10,000,000 in the third quarter of this year.

However, this was a lower level than in most preceding quarters. For example the outflow was $42,000,000 in the final quarter of 1963 and $44,000,000 in the first quarter of this year, though it dropped to $8,000,000 in the second quarter.

Canada, U.S. Lag In Productivity

WASHINGTON (CP)—Canada, the United States and Britain seem to be lagging behind Western Europe and Japan in growth of productivity rates, a North American automation conference was told Tuesday.

Besides that, labor shortages exist in those countries, said Patrick Boarman, representing the U.S. National Association of Manufacturers.

The three-day conference, under the auspices of the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development, continued today.

Dr. Ewan Clague, commissioner of U.S. labor statistics, suggested Europe has to meet a volume of demand for housing and manufacturing plants on an urgent basis and that troubles loom for European economies when they get closer to the Canadian and U.S. conditions.

PRICES REMAIN STABLE

He said Canada and the U.S. so far have managed to maintain fairly stable prices, but "I don't know if unemployment is the price of that."

Others suggested that many of the foreign workers needed in France, Germany and elsewhere are doing semi-skilled work comparable to the Mexican Braceros in the southwestern U.S.

Harry J. Waisglass, research director for the Canadian section of the United Steelworkers of America, said it is a matter of "great regret and serious consequence" that Canadian governments haven't done more about creating labor demand rather than attempting to deal mainly through educational and other methods with surplus labor.

Stormy Meeting Of Bank

TORONTO (CP)—Two shareholders in the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce turned the bank's annual meeting into a shouting match Tuesday before they were finished questioning the organization's operation and decline in profits last year.

Both Terrence Howes and a business associate, H. G. Janssen, had also been vocally critical at last week's Consumers' Gas Company meeting.

Mr. Janssen started the session by asking N. J. McKinnon, chairman of the meeting, to account for a decline in the growth of reported profit to 4.99 per cent between 1963 and 1964, from 6.23 per cent between 1962 and 1963.

DECLINES ANSWER

Mr. McKinnon declined to answer two further questions put by Mr. Janssen, who asked whether the bank buys houses for its managers, and whether it is the bank's practice to make up shortages in cashier's accounts by deductions from the cashiers' salaries. Mr. Janssen said he had heard the bank had purchased a house in the Bahamas for £62,000.

Mr. Howes and Mr. McKinnon engaged in a shouting match over Mr. Howes' right to present several motions. Mr. McKinnon repeatedly ordered Mr. Howes to sit down until the latter finally complied.

J. P. R. Wadsworth, president of the bank, said in his prepared address that further diversion of funds to public uses could either retard Canada's economic growth or increase its dependence on foreign capital.

He said that growth of productive capacity depends on the ability of the private sector of the economy to undertake new, large-scale capital projects.

However, he said the nation's economy appears to be in good balance and strength is continuing to flow from many sources. He said there are indications that capital investment will continue high in 1965.

Alcan Forms New U.S. Subsidiary

NEW YORK (UPI)—Aluminium Ltd. of Canada announced the formation today of a new United States subsidiary to run the five-state chain of fabricating companies it is acquiring from U.S. metal interests.

The new firm, Alcan Aluminum Corp., will have assets totalling $120 million when all the previously announced acquisitions take effect.

These assets include the aluminum fabrication operations of National Distillers and Chemical Corp's Bridgeport brass metals division, aluminum fabricating facilities of Cerro Corp. and a 100,000-ton aluminum hot mill at Oswego, N.Y.

Aluminium is buying out the interests of three partners in the Oswego plant, National Distillers, Cerro, and Scovill Manufacturing Co.

The Canadian company is the country's largest single supplier of foreign-made aluminum, almost entirely in primary form. Over the years Aluminium has made a selling point of not competing with its ingot customers by selling its own fabricated products in their markets.

Eric A. Trigg, presently treasurer of Aluminium, will be president of the new Cleveland-based subsidiary.

Toronto Star Profits Gain

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Star Ltd. had net profit for the year ended Sept. 30, 1964, of $984,953, compared with $673,018 the previous year.

Revenue for the year was $36,636,917, compared with $35,058,446.

LOAN REPAYMENTS

U.K. Caught in Squeeze

OTTAWA (CP)—The British may soon ask for deferment on their $1,250,000,000 post-war loan from Canada.

A $37,000,000 repayment is due this month. At the same time the British normally would be paying three times that amount on an American loan.

A request for deferment would be logical in view of the British balance of payments difficulties.

Published speculation in London last week was that such a request would be made by Prime Minister Wilson in his discussions this week with President Johnson and Prime Minister Pearson.

However, it is understood that the subject is more likely to be handled at the ministerial level. It is regarded as an unlikely topic for the leaders.

In any event, there is considerable doubt here whether any such request will ever get as far as the Canadian government. This arises from the nature of the loan agreements. In 1946 the Canadian loan and the $3,750,000,000 U.S. loan—both intended as export credits—were in effect wrapped into one package with complicated provisions for deferments of principle and interest.

CHANGE AGREEMENT

In 1957 the agreement was changed to allow Britain to seek deferments on seven occasions before the end of the loan in the year 2000. One deferment was made in 1957, during the Suez crisis. That year's instalment now will be paid in the year 2001.

Each time, the agreement imposes two conditions on Britain:

—She must claim to be in financial difficulty. That would not be hard to substantiate in this case.

—She also must ask both the U.S. and Canada for the same deferments; she can't ask one, and not the other.

And there's the rub.

Will the British feel that it would embarrass the United States to ask for deferment this year in view of the U.S. balance of payments problem, and the massive American aid in helping to prevent the run on sterling?

If such a request is not made to the U.S., naturally it can't be made to Canada. The upshot would be that Canada will be collecting millions from Britain at a time when she can least afford it, and when Canada is in a relatively good position to forego the payment.

B.C. Sugar Refining Profit Jumps

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Sugar Refining Company Limited this week reported a net profit of $4,374,874 compared with $2,780,018 the previous year.

The company report said that after paying a dividend of $2,000,000 to its parent B.C. Sugar Refinery Ltd., the operating company increased its retained earnings to $13,592,056 compared to $11,217,182 at the end of the previous year.

The net operating profit of the operating company was slightly down at $9,347,864 compared with $10,084,271.

CIL Will Build Two New Plants

TORONTO (CP)—Canadian Industries Ltd. officials said this week the firm will build ammonia and fertilizer plants worth a total of $50,000,000 about 20 miles south of Sarnia, Ont.

A spokesman for CIL said production at the two plants will be about 1,000 tons daily. Ammonia is basic to fertilizer production.

'HELLO, MIKE'

United Force Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Dashing down the aircraft ramp with a hearty "Hello, Mike," Prime Minister Wilson of Britain arrived in Ottawa today for talks with Prime Minister Pearson.

"God, it's cold here," Mr. Wilson said as he left the BOAC Comet jet after it landed from Washington.

The British leader said he looks forward to his discussions with Mr. Pearson which would be "short in time but intense in character."

WASHINGTON (UPI)—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson wound up two days of Washington talks today and prepared to try to sell European allies a series of broad proposals for more collective control of Western nuclear power.

Wilson told a news conference before flying to Canada that he regarded his talks with President Johnson as a "complete success." He said there was agreement on "guidelines" of how to proceed with allied discussions.

In the meeting with reporters, Wilson appeared to soften some of his opposition to the controversial U.S. proposal for a 25-ship NATO nuclear fleet.

The prime minister said he had been misinterpreted, in reports before leaving Britain for Washington, as being "irrevocably opposed" to international crews on such a fleet. And he described as exaggerated reports that Britain was concerned that West Germany would obtain a "finger on the nuclear trigger."

COMMONS SPEECH

Wilson declined to spell out exactly what the broad British proposals are for increased Allied nuclear co-ordination. He plans to do this before the House of Commons next week on his return to London.

In the talks here Wilson won approval from President Johnson to try to sell his ideas to other members of the alliance.

Johnson agreed, meanwhile, that the United States would not, for a limited time at least, press its own proposal for a nuclear-armed fleet.

The British proposals are reported to envisage a much larger allied force including land and air components and a scaled-down naval fleet.

Wilson said his discussions with Johnson "very much" represented the beginning of a renegotiation of the Nassau agreement between former prime minister Harold Macmillan and the late president John F. Kennedy.

Under the Nassau agreement, Britain undertook to contribute to NATO its Polaris submarines on the basis that it would have the right of withdrawal under certain circumstances.

MOVE FORWARD

Wilson said today "we are now moving forward in a progressive series of proposals."

His remarks were interpreted as indicating that he had advanced suggestions that Britain would offer its Polaris submarines to some kind of multilateral force within NATO on a no-recall basis.

ANNOUNCING LARGE CUTS in defence spending of Soviet Union is Premier Alexei Kosygin at opening of the winter session of Russian Parliament. Former premier Nikita Khrushchev did not attend.

Soviet Union Chops Military Spending

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Alexei Kosygin announced today a cut of 500,000,000 rubles ($555,000,000) in the Soviet Union's military budget for 1964 and called on other major powers to follow suit.

Kosygin told the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's parliament, the cut and an expected reduction of military spending in the United States "constitute a definite positive step toward reducing international tension."

He said the Soviet Union attaches great importance to the further reduction of the military budgets of the big nations.

Kosygin also promised the Russian people more consumer goods, bigger incomes and increased industrial and agricultural production.

The new Soviet premier said the military budget next year will total 12,800,000,000 rubles, or 12.9 per cent of all government expenditures, as against 14.5 per cent in 1964.

The military budget in 1964 totalled 13,300,000,000 rubles and was 600,000,000 rubles less than 1963. Western officials contend that much Soviet defence spending is disguised under non-military items in the budget, and some Western military analysts think total military spending this year is well over twice the budgeted figure.

The official value of the Soviet ruble is $1.11.

Kosygin spoke at the opening of the first Supreme Soviet session since the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev Oct. 14. Acting on a motion by Leonid Brezhnev, Khrushchev's successor as first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, the parliament approved Khrushchev's replacement as premier by Kosygin.

DID NOT APPEAR

Although still a member of the Supreme Soviet, Khrushchev did not appear for the session. Neither did his son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, former editor of the government newspaper Izvestia, who also is still a member of the parliament.

Kosygin reaffirmed Soviet devotion to Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence and said:

"We are in favor of the development of relations with the United States. There have been some developments in that field although they have not been great."

But he denounced the "aggression of the Americans and the Belgians in The Congo" and repeated Soviet pledges "to render the necessary assistance" to North Viet Nam and to Cuba "if the aggressors dare to raise their hands against them."

Canada Puts 'If' In End To Military

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has indicated to the United Nations it would like nothing better than to get rid of its armed forces—provided, of course, that other countries did.

"Even the total elimination of all existing Canadian defence forces and expenditures today would involve a shift of resources only one-seventh as great as was required in the demobilization period after the Second World War," the government says in a report filed with UN headquarters.

Sickness, Hunger In Cardboard Shack

By MARGE GILROY

A man lay in bed paralyzed. Nearby sat a woman leaning against a cold stove. She had only one leg and on her lap sat her three-year-old son munching a raw potato.

Earlier this year when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova walked inside this cardboard shack in Korea she was greeted with the words, "No more food."

The woman had lost her leg while unloading 100-pound sacks of rice and the family now depended on her daily beggings to survive.

On a good day she might bring home 12 to 16 cents. This could buy barley for a meal or fuel for a day. It is not enough to provide heat and food.

There are thousands of such families in Korea, said the director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

It is not just enough to buy milk and barley. There must also be enough money available to assist with reclamation and training programs so that the children of Korea may grow up, find work and in turn help other Koreans.

ONCE DAILY

All a Korean really wants is the privilege to work to earn enough to feed his family, at least once a day, said Dr. Hitschmanova.

Share with a hungry child by sending your donation to "Help The Hungry Child" fund, care of the Times, 2631 Douglas, or deliver it before 5:30 p.m.

Yule Deadline Near for Flag

OTTAWA (CP)—With 12 talking days left before Christmas, the Commons today enters the 30th day of the flag debate in an atmosphere of rising tension.

Exactly half of the 96 Progressive Conservative MPs now have entered the latest phase of the deadlocked debate and the party is believed to be running out of speakers.

When this happens, the Conservatives either will allow their amendment for a plebiscite to come to a vote or seek to introduce a sub-amendment.

If accepted by the chair, a sub-amendment would open the way for the 48 Conservatives who have spoken in the last seven days to make a second speech of up to 40 minutes.

Both the Conservatives and Liberals were expected to discuss their strategy at caucus meetings today. Reports circulated that some cabinet members favor the use of the notorious closure rule to cut off the debate arbitrarily and force an early vote.

Prime Minister Pearson and several of his colleagues have promised flatly that a distinctive Canadian flag will be approved by Christmas. Works Minister Deschatelets repeated the pledge Tuesday to a delegation of visiting Montreal French-speaking businessmen.

'ELECTION NEXT YEAR'

Forestry Minister Sauve told the same group that an election will be called next year. "Come back next year," he said. "We will then have a new distinctive flag and a new government—a majority government."

Leon Balcer, the Conservative's Quebec leader, said in a Montreal speech the debate should end by Friday. He again came out in favor of the maple leaf design recommended by the special flag committee.

In the Commons, a string of eight Conservatives repeated arguments for a flag plebiscite to coincide with the next federal election.

A ninth Conservative, Jack Horner (Acadia), completed a speech he started Monday night and moved the adjournment of the debate. He said the House should turn to the labor code and other government bills and revert to the daily question period.

Mr. Horner's motion was voted down 139 to 68. Twelve New Democrats, eight Creditistes and four Quebec Conservatives joined the Liberals in opposing the adjournment. Ralph Cowan (York-Humber), the lone Liberal Red Ensign supporter, and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) sided with 66 Conservatives in support of the motion.

Commons standings are Liberals 129, Conservatives 96, NDP 18, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine, for a total of 265.

Mr. Leboe said he favors a plebiscite because every citizen

Closure Urged By Balcer As Dief Fumes

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The split between Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and his Quebec chieftan, Leon Balcer, cracked wide open today as Balcer urged Prime Minister Pearson to impose closure to end the flag debate.

Balcer rose at the opening of the House on a question of privilege only about two hours after he had walked out of the Conservative caucus following an explosion with Diefenbaker.

To a somewhat stunned Commons he said:

"For weeks and months this House of Commons has witnessed an unprecedented debate . . . which has paralyzed the work of Parliament.

"If the principle of freedom of speech is to be respected it should also be the prime duty of the House to be able to decide."

"An extension of the debate can only be prejudicial to Parliament and the people of this country."

"I therefore feel it is my duty to invite the prime minister or one of his ministers to give notice they will procede with . . . the rule of closure."

He was loudly applauded by Liberal, New Democratic, Social Credit and Creditiste members. A scattering of Conservatives, mostly the Quebec members, joined in the applause.

Conservative house leader Gordon Churchill rose immediately to say that Balcer was not speaking with the authority of his party.

Illegal Strike Suit in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America, an international union, today was ordered to pay damages and interest estimated at $2,359,319 to Gaspe Copper Mines Limited for an "absolutely illegal" strike in 1957.

The union, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, was held responsible for "fomenting, organizing, sustaining, directing, financing and prolonging" the strike at Murdochville, Que.

Mr. Justice Antoine Lacourciere ordered the union to pay the company damages of $1,747,645 plus five-per-cent simple interest on the total from Dec. 31, 1957.

A court source said the interest could bring the total figure to $2,359,319.

Gaspe Copper had sued the Steelworkers' Pittsburgh headquarters for more than $5,000,000 as a result of the strike which ended in October, 1957.

A union spokesman in Montreal said no decision has been reached on whether an appeal will be made.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said evidence given during two years of testimony showed that representatives of the union encouraged violence against the company and miners who might have returned to their jobs.

"The miners were terrorized into striking, the judge said.

The Quebec government had been criticized for strike-breaking in the walkout.

But Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it is "easy to imagine" what would have happened if Quebec provincial police had not been sent in during the strike.

'Violence Replaced Law'

He said that during the strike, which involved 900 workers, violence took the place of law.

"Those principally responsible are not the workers of Murdochville, but those who directed them, that is the representatives of the United Steelworkers of America."

He said the representatives "did nothing to prevent other human beings from being the victims of acts which are less than human, but they also encouraged them."

The union officials also tried "hypocritically to arouse public scorn for the police forces who wished only to maintain order and to protect individuals and property."

The judge said the strike was illegal because it was in violation of the Quebec labor relations law.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it was "unimaginable" that the steelworkers would spend $800,000 during six months on a strike that its president had not authorized.

"The evidence has indicated the union was the determining cause of the declaration of the strike, and of an illegal strike, because neither it nor Local 4881 (the Murdochville local) has been recognized as representing the group of Murdochville employees."

No Excuse for Illegal Acts

The judge said union organizers directed the strike in an illegal way, and some "encouraged and counselled the recourse to brutal force" to intimidate others and prevent a return to work.

The "layoff" of plumber Theo Gagne, "which wasn't even final," and which precipitated the strike, was no excuse for the illegal acts that followed, he said.

The union had argued that Gagne was dismissed for organizing activity, while the company said he was simply laid off.

The judge said the "acts of terrorism were recompensed by the money of the defendant whose goal was to stop production completely. The responsibility of the union there has been joined by the representatives who have never disavowed it and always upheld it."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere reviewed the circumstances of the death of Herve Bernatchez, a striker, in an explosion during the strike.

The explosion occurred, the judge said, when a bomb went off prematurely while Bernatchez, Nestor Henley and Nor-

Pearson Studies Cabinet Shuffle

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is known to be taking a "hard look" at the new developments that have shaken his cabinet but any suggestions that they would lead to early reshuffle of cabinet portfolios was described by informed sources as "premature."

There is no doubt, however, that over the Christmas recess Mr. Pearson will take the opportunity—if there is a recess of any length—to shuffle his cabinet. Whether it would be a major re-assignment of cabinet posts or a minor reshuffle remains to be seen.

The Liberal and Conservative caucuses met this morning. At both, the dealings of the two members of the cabinet with the Sefkind brothers, whose huge Montreal bankruptcies are under investigation, were discussed.

State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay held separate press conferences on Tuesday in which they told of purchasing furniture from a furniture firm controlled by Max Sefkind. Both emphasized that these were ordinary commercial transactions and not "gifts." Both ministers said they were making payments on the furniture. Mr. Tremblay has paid off his account in full and Mr. Lamontagne is making monthly payments.

Both ministers expressed their astonishment over the press reports. They stressed they had done nothing wrong. However Opposition members said that when the question period was resumed in the House of Commons the opposition would press for detailed explanations.

The firm from which the ministers purchased the furniture is now bankrupt. The Bank of Montreal is collecting outstanding accounts.

BIG ANIMAL NOTHING . . . . . TO TAKE LIGHTLY

Girls Bid for Less-Than-Friendly Hippo

NEW YORK (AP)—"What in the world are they going to do with it?" the city purchase commissioner said when he discovered that three Smith College girls had entered the high bid of $400 for a surplus 4,000-pound hippopotamus.

"A 10-year-old hippopotamus is nothing to toss around lightly," Commissioner Roger J. Browne said Tuesday after the bids were opened.

He said the girls must prove they can take care of Betsy, described as less than friendly. A good idea, he said, would be to donate the animal to a zoo.

The girls said at the Northampton, Mass., college they entered the bid "sort of out of pity" for the unwanted hippo.

Browne said he must have a formal letter and a deposit before the bid can be considered. The next high bid was $150.

A Smith College spokesman didn't look too kindly on the idea by Nancy Horner, 20, of Worcester, Mass.; Ann Longfellow, 19, of Wayzata, Minn., and Ellen Emerson, 19, of Concord, Mass.

CAN'T HANDLE HIPPO

"The college is not prepared to handle a hippopotamus on campus," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Betsy, the subject of the fuss, rested in Brooklyn's Prospect Park Zoo. The head keeper there, R. Ellis, said of Betsy: "She'd just as soon eat you as look at you."

The girls shuddered a bit when told of the hippo's demeanor. But Miss Longfellow said:

"We wanted a hippopotamus and if this is what a hippopotamus is like, we'll take what comes."

There's something else the Smith trio must know about: The hippo is not coming; they'll have to go get her.

"We don't deliver," the commissioner said.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

By Elizabeth Forbes

"Look at that!" gasped the tall woman who stood beside me at Cook-Pandora intersection.

In a split second, before the yellow traffic signal turned to red, a black car with shining chrome trim, screeched across the road.

It was raining. The streets were wet and slippy. Into the bargain, it was close to 5 o'clock.

Pedestrian traffic had started to move in the opposite direction. A young man, a little boy and a middle-aged woman, were in the lead.

The big car whipped over the crosswalk. So close, it startled all three.

The woman jumped back, turned slightly, and fell. From where we stood it was hard to tell whether she had been touched by the car or not.

* * *

People gathered around to help. The car slithered to a stop and the driver came back to see what had happened.

The middle-aged woman would have none of it. She got up, shook off helping hands, and went on her way.

The light changed in our direction.

"He's lucky," stormed the tall one as we crossed the street, "another time it mightn't come off so well."

We stepped up on the sidewalk. "You can be sure there will be another time," she said. "That kind of driver never thinks. His one concern is to do the thing he wants to do, regardless of consequences."

Accidents were on the increase, she reminded me, and, because of that, car insurance was going to take another jump next year.

"Drivers like that are responsible," she insisted. "Something should be done about it."

When I was back in my own car and edging my way into the stream of 5 o'clock traffic, I began to wonder if anything could be done about it.

That night, with rain splashing on the windshields, the streets black and wet, and so many cars jockeying for position, you would have thought everyone would be obeying the rules of the road.

But there were those who had to indulge in swerving from one lane to another, whenever they saw an opening of any kind.

Others decided, at the last possible moment, to make right-hand turns from inner lanes and they forced their way over with little thought as to what might be happening behind them.

* * *

Some drivers, for reasons known only to themselves, insisted on parking at a time when everyone was moving bumper to bumper. Some straddled the dividing line between the two lanes, making it impossible for anyone to get by, and some refused to use their stop lights, preferring to believe that the driver directly behind was a seventh son of a seventh son and gifted with second sight.

Why do otherwise normal, everyday people act this way when they get behind the steering wheel of their cars?

Is it, as the tall woman at Cook-Pandora crossing said, a lack of consideration, or thought, for others?

Certainly accidents are on the increase. Certainly, from reports on many of these accidents, it would seem there has been selfish inconsideration for another's safety.

* * *

Certainly, unless there is a change in driving manners, there will be an increased number of accidents, and certainly, in that case, automobile insurance will go up again.

This spiral might be stopped if common courtesy could be instilled in the minds of automobile drivers. Common courtesy and adherence to sensible rules of the road are necessary.

In that minute saved by the man at Pandora-Cook intersection, when he screeched ahead of a red light, he could have killed a woman.

I wonder if he realizes that?

Far better if he had remembered the pedestrian lane, and the people on it, before he made his try. Far better if he had been courteous enough to have waited for the light to turn green.

NATURE ON THE ISLAND — By DR. CLIFF CARL

Crayfish Deserves Attention

Except to small boys in certain favored areas and to a few other persons with special interests, the crayfish of our lakes and streams is not well known. Perhaps this is because this creature is somewhat secretive in its habits or perhaps it is because it has no special gustatory or commercial value. Whatever the reason, this distant relative of the lobster has not received the attention it deserves.

Carl

Crayfish, crawfish, "crawdads," whichever you want to call them, are crustaceans much like the lobster in general structure but differing in many details. They differ greatly in habit, too, being entirely confined to fresh water. There are many species and they are spread pretty well throughout the world except in the Arctic and Antarctic.

Where they are common they are a staple diet of other creatures, including heron, raccoon, black bass and even man himself. Despite the steady drain on the population, their numbers remain fairly constant.

The pincers are the most conspicuous feature of these crustaceans; they are large enough and powerful enough to command respect. With them the owner captures prey, tears it to pieces and passes the morsels to sorting and grinding machinery associated with the mouth.

* * *

They are also formidable weapons of defence which may be called into use in arguments among themselves or against other animals which may attack them. Those of the males tend to be larger than those of the females, but in either sex they resemble oversize boxing gloves and hence impart a pugilistic look to the wearers.

Close scrutiny of the pincers, with due respect to their potentialities, will show another interesting feature. On the inner side of each "hand" there will be found, almost in every case, a number of small worm-like creatures firmly attached by one end. These are "boarders" or "free-loaders" whose function in relation to the host is not well understood.

The association seems to be one-sided with all the benefits in the form of transportation, living quarters, and food going to the worms, but it may be reciprocal if it can be demonstrated that the crayfish gains anything in exchange.

* * *

The presence of the free-riding worms also suggests another problem—a mechanical one. Since the crayfish sheds its shell at intervals to allow for growth, a featured shared by all "jointed" animals, how are the worms transferred from the old empty armor to the new? They move around, of course, hitching themselves along by a system of suckers, but it is a neat trick to change hosts at just the right time.

There is another and equally intriguing problem connected with the distribution of crayfishes. Members of the western form of these animals are found in river systems all along the coast from California to southern British Columbia but not in all waterways.

On the mainland in this province they are present in the Okanagan system of the interior and in the Lower Fraser Valley but apparently nowhere else. On Vancouver Island they are in a few streams and lakes near Victoria, in Shawnigan Lake, in the Koksilah River and lower Cowichan River (but not in the lake), and in a few streams and lakes near Kyuquot on the West Coast, and on Nootka Island, but apparently nowhere else.

How is it these animals are distributed in such an erratic pattern? Why are they not present in other lakes and streams, many of which appear to be equally suited to their needs?

Obviously more attention should be paid to these interesting creatures. Not only are they a potential source of food but also a subject worthy of study by any biologist.

Send questions in natural history to Dr. Cliff Carl in care of the Times.

'Nuclear Shield' Proposed

LONDON (AP)—British and United States authorities are considering asking the Soviet Union to join in a new treaty that would protect non-nuclear nations against any threatened nuclear attack, qualified diplomats said Tuesday night.

The diplomats said the projected East-West nuclear shield was discussed this week during the meeting of British and U.S. leaders in Washington.

The proposal was outlined to Prime Minister Wilson in London last week by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India, when they ranged over the strategic implications of China's new-found nuclear capacity.

Shastri advised Wilson that India intended to put the idea before the United Nations General Assembly shortly. Wilson was understood to have indicated he would take it up in his exchanges with President Johnson.

First reactions of British and U.S. officials was understood to be sympathetic.

BIRTH CONTROL BAN APPEAL TO BE HEARD

'Laws Fly in the Face of Common Sense'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Supreme Court agreed this week to rule on constitutionality of Connecticut laws banning the use of contraceptives and prohibiting the giving of medical advice about their use.

Two officials of the Planned Parenthood League of Connecticut appealed to the court after the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors upheld validity of the laws.

Connecticut's birth control laws, the officials said in the appeal, "fly in the face of both common sense and science."

"Of course the state may impose reasonable regulations on the practice of medicine," the appeal said, "but a law which permits a doctor to abort his patient to save her life but prohibits advice for the use of the most effective means of preventing pregnancy and death has a negligible claim to reasonableness."

Dr. C. Lee Buxton, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Yale Medical School, and Mrs. Richard W. Groswold, executive director of the Planned Parenthood League, appealed from their convictions for violating the state laws. Each was fined $100. Dr. Buxton was medical director of a birth control centre in New Haven when arrested.

BALCER URGES CLOSURE IN DEBATE ON FLAG

FINAL ★ ★ ★ ★ BULLETINS

NDP Loses Flag Adjournment Bid

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons voted 132 to 99 today against a New Democratic Party attempt to set aside the flag debate in favor of continuing work on the government's proposed labor code. All parties except the Creditistes and New Democrats split on the voting.

'Copter Aids in Capture of Bandit

ATLANTA (UPI)—A policeman in a helicopter pursued and helped capture a bandit today who held a bank employee's family hostage all night, attempted to stage a bizarre bank robbery and fled empty handed with another hostage.

Shaw Meets Argos on Coaching Job

REGINA (CP)—Head coach Bob Shaw of Saskatchewan Roughriders was in Toronto today to discuss a head coaching job with officials of the Toronto Argonauts.

He was to meet with officials of the Eastern Conference Argonauts tonight. Argos have been without a head coach since the dismissal of Nobby Wirkowski a month ago.

Bulldozer Used in Liquor Theft Bid

MONTREAL (CP) — Hooded men attempted to rob a liquor warehouse today by ramming the front door with a tractor, the first known try by the underworld to capitalize on Quebec's liquor strike.

Police arrested three men in connection with the attempted robbery Tuesday of the north-end warehouse of the Seaway Storage Company.

QUEBEC STRIKE

Steelworkers Ordered to Pay

QUEBEC (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America, an international union, today was ordered to pay damages and interest estimated at $2,359,319 to Gaspe Copper Mines Limited for an "absolutely illegal" strike in 1957.

The union, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, was held responsible for "fomenting, organizing, sustaining, directing, financing and prolonging" the strike at Murdochville, Que.

Mr. Justice Antoine Lacourciere ordered the union to pay the company damages of $1,747,645 plus five-per-cent simple interest on the total from Dec. 31, 1957.

A court source said the interest could bring the total figure to $2,359,319.

Gaspe Copper had sued the Steelworkers' Pittsburgh headquarters for more than $5,000,000 as a result of the strike which ended in October, 1957.

A union spokesman in Montreal said no decision has been reached on whether an appeal will be made.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said evidence given during two years of testimony showed that representatives of the union encouraged violence against the company and miners who might have returned to their jobs.

"The miners were terrorized into striking, the judge said.

The Quebec government had been criticized for strike-breaking in the walkout.

But Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it is "easy to imagine" what would have happened if Quebec provincial police had not been sent in during the strike.

'Violence Replaced Law'

He said that during the strike, which involved 900 workers, violence took the place of law.

"Those principally responsible are not the workers of Murdochville, but those who directed them, that is the representatives of the United Steelworkers of America."

He said the representatives "did nothing to prevent other human beings from being the victims of acts which are less than human, but they also encouraged them."

The union officials also tried "hypocritically to arouse public scorn for the police forces who wished only to maintain order and to protect individuals and property."

The judge said the strike was illegal because it was in violation of the Quebec labor relations law.

Mr. Justice Lacourciere said it was "unimaginable" that the steelworkers would spend $800,000 during six months on a strike that its president had not authorized.

"The evidence has indicated the union was the determining cause of the declaration of the strike, and of an illegal strike, because neither it nor Local 4881 (the Murdochville local) has been recognized as representing the group of Murdochville employees."

No Excuse for Illegal Acts

The judge said union organizers directed the strike in an illegal way, and some "encouraged and counselled the recourse to brutal force" to intimidate others and prevent a return to work.

The "layoff" of plumber Theo Gagne, "which wasn't even final," and which precipitated the strike, was no excuse for the illegal acts that followed, he said.

The union had argued that Gagne was dismissed for organizing activity, while the company said he was simply laid off.

The judge said the "acts of terrorism were recompensed by the money of the defendant whose goal was to stop production completely. The responsibility of the union there has been joined by the representatives who have never disavowed it and always upheld it."

Mr. Justice Lacourciere reviewed the circumstances of the death of Herve Bernatchez, a striker, in an explosion during the strike.

The explosion occurred, the judge said, when a bomb went off prematurely while Bernatchez, Nestor Henley and Nor-

'HELLO, MIKE'

United Force Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Dashing down the aircraft ramp with a hearty "Hello, Mike," Prime Minister Wilson of Britain arrived in Ottawa today for talks with Prime Minister Pearson.

"God, it's cold here," Mr. Wilson said as he left the BOAC Comet jet after it landed from Washington.

The British leader said he looks forward to his discussions with Mr. Pearson which would be "short in time but intense in character."

WASHINGTON (UPI)—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson wound up two days of Washington talks today and prepared to try to sell European allies a series of broad proposals for more collective control of Western nuclear power.

Wilson told a news conference before flying to Canada that he regarded his talks with President Johnson as a "complete success." He said there was agreement on "guidelines" of how to proceed with allied discussions.

In the meeting with reporters, Wilson appeared to soften some of his opposition to the controversial U.S. proposal for a 25-ship NATO nuclear fleet.

The prime minister said he had been misinterpreted, in reports before leaving Britain for Washington, as being "irrevocably opposed" to international crews on such a fleet. And he described as exaggerated reports that Britain was concerned that West Germany would obtain a "finger on the nuclear trigger."

COMMONS SPEECH

Wilson declined to spell out exactly what the broad British proposals are for increased Allied nuclear co-ordination. He plans to do this before the House of Commons next week on his return to London.

In the talks here Wilson won approval from President Johnson to try to sell his ideas to other members of the alliance.

Johnson agreed, meanwhile, that the United States would not, for a limited time at least, press its own proposal for a nuclear-armed fleet.

The British proposals are reported to envisage a much larger allied force including land and air components and a scaled-down naval fleet.

Wilson said his discussions with Johnson "very much" represented the beginning of a renegotiation of the Nassau agreement between former prime minister Harold Macmillan and the late president John F. Kennedy.

Under the Nassau agreement, Britain undertook to contribute to NATO its Polaris submarines on the basis that it would have the right of withdrawal under certain circumstances.

ANNOUNCING LARGE CUTS in defence spending of Soviet Union is Premier Alexei Kosygin at opening of the winter session of Russian Parliament. Former premier Nikita Khrushchev did not attend.

Soviet Union Slashes Spending on Military

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Alexei Kosygin announced today a cut of 500,000,000 rubles ($555,000,000) in the Soviet Union's military budget for 1964 and called on other major powers to follow suit.

Kosygin told the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's parliament, the cut and an expected reduction of military spending in the United States "constitute a definite positive step toward reducing international tension."

He said the Soviet Union attaches great importance to the further reduction of the military budgets of the big nations.

Kosygin also promised the Russian people more consumer goods, bigger incomes and increased industrial and agricultural production.

The new Soviet premier said the military budget next year will total 12,800,000,000 rubles, or 12.9 per cent of all government expenditures, as against 14.5 per cent in 1964.

The military budget in 1964 totalled 13,300,000,000 rubles and was 600,000,000 rubles less than 1963. Western officials contend that much Soviet defence spending is disguised under non-military items in the budget, and some Western military analysts think total military spending this year is well over twice the budgeted figure.

The official value of the Soviet ruble is $1.11.

Kosygin spoke at the opening of the first Supreme Soviet session since the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev Oct. 14. Acting on a motion by Leonid Brezhnev, Khrushchev's successor as first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, the parliament approved Khrushchev's replacement as premier by Kosygin.

Although still a member of the Supreme Soviet, Khrushchev did not appear for the session. Neither did his son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, former editor of the government newspaper Izvestia, who also is still a member of the parliament.

Kosygin reaffirmed Soviet devotion to Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence and said:

"We are in favor of the development of relations with the United States. There have been some developments in that field although they have not been great."

But he denounced the "aggression of the Americans and the Belgians in The Congo" and repeated Soviet pledges "to render the necessary assistance" to North Viet Nam and to Cuba "if the aggressors dare to raise their hands against them."

Sickness, Hunger In Cardboard Shack

By MARGE GILROY

A man lay in bed paralyzed. Nearby sat a woman leaning against a cold stove. She had only one leg and on her lap sat her three-year-old son munching a raw potato.

Earlier this year when Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova walked inside this cardboard shack in Korea she was greeted with the words, "No more food."

The woman had lost her leg while unloading 100-pound sacks of rice and the family now depended on her daily beggings to survive.

On a good day she might bring home 12 to 16 cents. This could buy barley for a meal or fuel for a day. It is not enough to provide heat and food.

There are thousands of such families in Korea, said the director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

It is not just enough to buy milk and barley. There must also be enough money available to assist with reclamation and training programs so that the children of Korea may grow up, find work and in turn help other Koreans.

ONCE DAILY

All a Korean really wants is the privilege to work to earn enough to feed his family, at least once a day, said Dr. Hitschmanova.

Share with a hungry child by sending your donation to "Help The Hungry Child" fund, care of the Times, 2631 Douglas, or deliver it before 5:30 p.m.

Action Follows Blowup With Dief

(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA—The split between Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and his Quebec chieftain, Leon Balcer, cracked wide open today as Balcer urged Prime Minister Pearson to impose closure to end the flag debate.

Balcer rose at the opening of the House on a question of privilege only about two hours after he had walked out of the Conservative caucus following an explosion with Diefenbaker.

To a somewhat stunned Commons he said:

"For weeks and months this House of Commons has witnessed an unprecedented debate . . . which has paralyzed the work of Parliament.

"If the principle of freedom of speech is to be respected it should also be the prime duty of the House to be able to decide."

"An extension of the debate can only be prejudicial to Parliament and the people of this country."

"I therefore feel it is my duty to invite the prime minister or one of his ministers to give notice they will procede with . . . the rule of closure."

He was loudly applauded by Liberal, New Democratic, Social Credit and Creditiste members. A scattering of Conservatives, mostly the Quebec members, joined in the applause.

Conservative house leader Gordon Churchill rose immediately to say that Balcer was not speaking with the authority of his party.

Yule Deadline Near for Flag

OTTAWA (CP)—With 12 talking days left before Christmas, the Commons today enters the 30th day of the flag debate in an atmosphere of rising tension.

Exactly half of the 96 Progressive Conservative MPs now have entered the latest phase of the deadlocked debate and the party is believed to be running out of speakers.

When this happens, the Conservatives either will allow their amendment for a plebiscite to come to a vote or seek to introduce a sub-amendment.

If accepted by the chair, a sub-amendment would open the way for the 48 Conservatives who have spoken in the last seven days to make a second speech of up to 40 minutes.

Both the Conservatives and Liberals were expected to discuss their strategy at caucus meetings today. Reports circulated that some cabinet members favor the use of the notorious closure rule to cut off the debate arbitrarily and force an early vote.

Prime Minister Pearson and several of his colleagues have promised flatly that a distinctive Canadian flag will be approved by Christmas. Works Minister Deschatelets repeated the pledge Tuesday to a delegation of visiting Montreal French-speaking businessmen.

'ELECTION NEXT YEAR'

Forestry Minister Sauve told the same group that an election will be called next year. "Come back next year," he said. "We will then have a new distinctive flag and a new government—a majority government."

Leon Balcer, the Conservative's Quebec leader, said in a Montreal speech the debate should end by Friday. He again came out in favor of the maple leaf design recommended by the special flag committee.

In the Commons, a string of eight Conservatives repeated arguments for a flag plebiscite to coincide with the next federal election.

A ninth Conservative, Jack Horner (Acadia), completed a speech he started Monday night and moved the adjournment of the debate. He said the House should turn to the labor code and other government bills and revert to the daily question period.

Mr. Horner's motion was voted down 139 to 68. Twelve New Democrats, eight Creditistes and four Quebec Conservatives joined the Liberals in opposing the adjournment. Ralph Cowan (York-Humber), the lone Liberal Red Ensign supporter, and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) sided with 66 Conservatives in support of the motion.

Commons standings are Liberals 129, Conservatives 96, NDP 18, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine, for a total of 265.

Mr. Leboe said he favors a plebiscite because every citizen

Sun Building Sold by Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Press Ltd. today announced sale of the Sun building in downtown Vancouver for $130,000.

New owner is Crest Field of Canada, which will convert the 17-storey domed building to offices after Pacific Press completes a move to new quarters in late 1965.

The Sun building was built in 1912 for The World, now defunct, at a cost of $400,000.

GREAT FLAG DEBATE 'COST $131 MILLION'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Deputy Creditiste Leader Gilles Gregoire claims the great flag debate had cost Canada $131,815,000.

Speaking Tuesday during the seventh day of renewed debate — and the 29th day since Prime Minister Pearson first raised the question — Gregoire said Members of Parliament, newsmen, Hansard reporters and others connected with the Commons had "lost" 43,958,000 hours on the debate.

He said 146 members had made a total of 229 speeches in which the word "plebiscite" was used 4,080 times—but that total rose to 4,082 when he used the word twice.

Pearson Studies Cabinet Shuffle

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson is known to be taking a "hard look" at the new developments that have shaken his cabinet but any suggestions that they would lead to early reshuffle of cabinet portfolios was described by informed sources as "premature."

There is no doubt, however, that over the Christmas recess Mr. Pearson will take the opportunity, if there is a recess of any length, to shuffle his cabinet. Whether it would be a major re-assignment of cabinet posts or a minor reshuffle remains to be seen.

The Liberal and Conservative caucuses met this morning. At both, the dealings of the two members of the cabinet with the Sefkind brothers, whose huge Montreal bankruptcies are under investigation, were discussed.

State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay held separate press conferences on Tuesday in which they told of purchasing furniture from a furniture firm controlled by Max Sefkind. Both emphasized that these were ordinary commercial transactions and not "gifts." Both ministers said they were making payments on the furniture. Mr. Tremblay has paid off his account in full and Mr. Lamontagne is making monthly payments.

Both ministers expressed their astonishment over the press reports. They stressed they had done nothing wrong. However Opposition members said that when the question period was resumed in the House of Commons the opposition would press for detailed explanations.

The firm from which the ministers purchased the furniture is now bankrupt. The Bank of Montreal is collecting outstanding accounts.

UN Bars Public

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—In a move to head off any demonstrations when debate on the explosive Congo question opens today, the United Nations has ordered the public barred from the Security Council chamber.

Canada Puts 'If' In End To Military

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has indicated to the United Nations it would like nothing better than to get rid of its armed forces—provided, of course, that other countries did.

"Even the total elimination of all existing Canadian defence forces and expenditures today would involve a shift of resources only one-seventh as great as was required in the demobilization period after the Second World War," the government says in a report filed with UN headquarters.

UBC AYRSHIRE TOP PRODUCER

DUNCAN — Oyster River Farm, owned by University of British Columbia, has been awarded the Stevenson Trophy for the higest producing Ayrshire cow on Vancouver Island.

The cow, Ubyssey Duke Francis, gave 17,747 pounds of milk and 683 pounds of butterfat in 305 days.

Runners-up were Stratford's Pollie, owned by Donald C. Morton; Oakridge Royal Jo, J. A. N. Balme, and Sacille Daisy 5th, also owned by Mr. Balme.

During presentation ceremonies at the Silver Bridge Inn here it was announced the 166 Ayrshire cows on V.I. had given 120 per cent more of breed class average during the year, an increase of 34 over last year.

This makes an increase of 73 per cent in two years.

Hill Recaptured

QUI NHON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Government forces won the battle of An Lao today by recapturing a strategic hill from Communist guerrillas.

Thant Has Ulcer

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant is suffering from a duodenal ulcer and must remain in hospital another week to 10 days, his doctor announced Tuesday night.

ALL NANAIMO DENTISTS SUPPORT FLUORIDATION

NANAIMO (CP)—Dr. J. J. Eakins says that all 13 dentists in Nanaimo are in favor of fluoridation of the city's water supply as a means of combatting tooth decay.

Dr. Eakins told city council that one part of fluoride in each 1,000,000 parts of water would "reduce the rate of dental decay by approximately two-thirds."

He also said that a cost of about 10 cents per person per year, a saving of $6 out of every $10 spent would result.

Meanwhile, a newspaper survey disclosed that 17 Nanaimo doctors had sent almost 2,000 letters to patients urging a "yes" vote for fluoridation on Saturday.

Minister's Aid Requested In Bus Fight

PORT ALBERNI—Irate parents here will seek the help of Education Minister Peterson in their bid to lay on a school bus.

A telegram was sent to the minister today asking him to order an investigation of the problem.

The parents have tried several times to persuade Alberni District school board to provide a bus for the 1½-mile trip from Arrowsmith Heights to school.

At present, 28 children have to walk the distance each day along a lonely, unlit road.

Earlier, school board chairman James Macfie said trustees would not be swayed by Victoria pressure.

AWAY FROM SCHOOL

To back up their protest, parents have been keeping their children away from school.

This week they allowed them to return for Christmas examinations.

They are hoping to be able to muster enough cars to provide transport each day to and from school.

A meeting between parents and board members Monday ended in deadlock.

Mr. Masfie pointed out eight other areas in Alberni where children thave to walk from .8 miles to 2.3 miles to school.

All would be asking for buses if this one was granted, he claimed.

A parents' representative said there had been four complaints of molesting of children in the area since 1961.

Blood Donors Holding Back

QUALICUM BEACH — Are residents here a bloodless lot? The Red Cross is beginning to think so.

At a recent blood donor clinic in the area only 87 pints were given — insufficient to meet the district's needs.

Last year 93 pints were given and the year before 127.

It was hoped to collect around 200 pints this year.

REEVE TELLS ELECTION MEETING

Pay Increase Next Year For C. Saanich Council

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Members of Central Saanich council will receive a salary increase next year.

Reeve R. Gordon Lee told an all-candidate meeting at the Brentwood Women's Institute Hall Tuesday that indemnities are far too small for the work and time spent on municipal business.

The reeve receives $700 a year and councillors $300.

Under the Municipal Act, maximum honorarium allowed members of council serving a municipality the size of Central Saanich is $2,000 for reeve and $700 for councillors.

NOT MAXIMUM

But the reeve said it is not the intention of council to claim the maximum.

"I feel they are entitled to some increase," he said. "Municipal business is increasing every year. Councillors don't get their gasoline and oil free."

The reeve also said street lighting in the municipality will be improved next year under a new B.C. Hydro street lighting financing plan.

TOO HIGH

"We deferred our street lighting program this year because costs to install lights were too high," he said.

He said B.C. Hydro is expected to come up with a scheme early next year whereby it would pay costs for installing street lights.

"Under the program we would not be involved in any capital expenditures," he explained. "But we would pay for the lights on a rental basis."

Some 60 residents attended the meeting to hear five candidates contesting three council seats. Three are incumbents. There were no controversial issues.

Coun. T. G. Michell, who is serving as chairman of the public works committee, said the municipality would like to do more to improve its road system, but this would involve considerable money.

56 MILES

"We can only do so much at a time without boosting taxes," he said. "We have 56 miles of road to maintain."

He said improvements to three roads in the Brentwood area have been delayed because within the next two or three years residents of the district may be called upon to vote on a sewer scheme.

"If we had gone ahead with the road work and residents later approved a sewer scheme, it would mean tearing them up again," he explained.

Mrs. Margaret Salt, running for the first time for a council seat, said if elected she would give full time to municipal business.

FULL TIME

"I'm retired now and can give all my time to municipal business," she said.

Coun. Albert Vickers said he would like to see council approve a long-range road building program.

"I realize our budget is limited for this purpose," he said. "But I feel we should have a program to determine what roads should receive priority and the amount of improvements to be carried out annually."

Coun. A. K. Hemstreet, chairman of the parks committee, said he would continue to do all he could to improve municipal parks.

"We have done many improvements in the past four years," he said, "but there is still lots to be done."

Peter P. Lazarz, the fifth candidate, returned from a business trip to Vancouver too late to attend the meeting.

Gov't Asked To Buy E & N Timberlands

COURTENAY (CP)—E. Davie Fulton has urged the B.C. government to buy out timber resources of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway on Vancouver Island to give small loggers a chance to cut.

The E&N, a branch of Canadian Pacific Railways, last month sold 229,000 acres of timber to two large timber companies for an estimated $50,000,000.

It still holds rights to some 1,000,000 acres of land on the Island, at least half of which contains valuable timber.

The provincial Conservative leader suggested in a speech here that the government establish a sustained yield unit on the railway lands to allow small loggers as well as large firms to bid for timber sales.

Two of the largest firms in the province, MacMillan, Bloedel & Powell River Company and Crown Zellerbach Limited, combined for the E&N purchase last month.

"There is no criticism of the actions of the two big companies," said Mr. Fulton.

SAANICH CANDIDATES' THEME:

Careful Planning, Minimum Taxes

By LESLIE MILLIN

Fifteen candidates for Saanich office spoke to a public meeting Tuesday night that was much quieter than the election meetings that rocked the municipality two months ago.

On the stage at Mt. View High School were 13 council candidates and two School District 63 trustee hopefuls.

They are scrambling for three council seats and one trustee's job, up for election on Saturday.

Three of the council candidates and trustee Reg Sinkinson are incumbents.

Five of the challengers for council also ran in the colorful October by-election when the reeveship and one council seat were open.

Almost all candidates stressed the need for careful planning, orderly growth, and minimum taxes in Saanich.

Incumbents Joseph Casey, Leslie Passmore and Harold Todd defended the progress made by council.

They pointed to rapid strides in the area of public works, but also mentioned the problems of keeping up with a rapidly expanding population.

"SQUARE DEAL"

Coun. Casey and Coun. Passmore told the 110-member audience about their affiliation with the "old guard" on council.

"I happen to be the oldest of the old guard," said Coun. Passmore.

"I've been on council for 22 years. For 22 years I've had the confidence of the ratepayers, and I've always tried to get them a square deal."

"We have been called the old guard," said Coun. Casey.

"We have guarded the rights of the people of Saanich. Two years ago, we fought against amalgamation, and thank God we were successful."

Biggest challenge to the old guard came from two young educators, candidates Pat Thomas and Alan Newberry.

"I am not happy with the leadership that our council has shown," said Mr. Newberry.

He recommended a 10-point program that included appointment of a municipal co-ordinator for Saanich, a speed-up in public works, and a system of tax incentives for home improvements.

Mr. Thomas said it is time Saanich "moved out from behind the walls."

He said it is time Saanich stopped guarding and started moving forward.

Mr. Thomas supported regional planning, and pressure on the provincial government for a relocated, enlarged Pat Bay Highway.

Addressing his first election campaign meeting was bus driver David Dickinson.

He said the controversial fire chief appointment first interested him in municipal politics, and said his 24 years experience with the transit system would be helpful when council has to face the problem of having the bus service handed over.

WISE SPENDING

Sandy Noel, also a newcomer, promised to fight for the best spending of the tax dollar.

Ed Lum, twice-defeated in tries for the reeveship, made a brief speech.

He stressed the need for a businesslike approach to municipal government, a stepped-up planning program, and a recreation centre as a centennial project.

Mr. Lum said the way to obtain a better Pat Bay Highway and liquor stores for Saanich "is to sit down with the parties concerned and talk it out."

Don Mathison pointed to the 180 accidents and eight deaths this year on the Pat Bay Highway, and said a new highway is needed before any more Saanich citizens commit "Swartzicide" on the "Swartz Bay Highway."

Aubrey Squire argued for the instigation of a regional hospital board, and said Saanich council has been remiss in failing to apply pressure for a liquor store.

Erling Olson said he favors encouraging industry in Saanich to relieve the tax burden on homeowners.

City fireman Ed Ball said he favors more recreational facilities for Saanich, and the floodlighting of one of the parks for winter juvenile sport.

Harry Shergold said he has two years' experience with the Saanich advisory planning commission.

He gave guarded approval to the idea of the proposed joint services board, and said having more industry in Saanich might not necessarily be any tax boon.

Trustee Reg Sinkinson stood on his 14-year record with School District 63.

He said he had served the ratepayers well, and would continue to do so.

Mrs. Nora Lindsay, a housewife making her first try for office, felt long-range planning and long-range financing for schools, coupled with standardized plans, would be a more sensible approach to financial problems.

She said ratepayers are losing confidence in the school board because they feel they are not getting full value for their money.
